home and for this purpose were hiding in and about the house. The admission will probably go no further than to the effect that the purpose was merely to annoy him with an intent to do even actual bodily harm. The state will attempt to show that there was some feeling on the part of the preacher against Palmer, and that the preacher had some cause for his desire to annoy him.

The defense seems confident that its side will win on so strongly as to insure an acquittal. It will be shown that the minister had reason to believe that an attack was being made on him, and that he was in danger. The fact that it was on his own premises, that it was so dark he could not distinguish who was hitting him with a bat, that he fired more than fifteen shots, then went with any intent of hitting anyone, and that the party shot was at the time engaged in a fight for his life to subvert with Palmer's friends, seems to be fostered by the friends of the deceased and by the saloon element.

The day was spent in questioning proposed jurors as to their newspaper reading, their prejudices for or against prohibition, their church affiliations, their connection with secret societies, their political affiliations and their acquaintance in and about Neola. It was time for the day's adjournment before the twelve were agreed upon.

Since the killing of Palmer Rev. Mr. Holmick has been out on bonds. He has been actively engaged in preaching, the church officials showing their confidence in him by reappointing him to the Neola circuit for his next term, which shall not occur until this fall is over.

Kans's Philosopher. Atkinson Globe: Impatience with weakness is a sign of weakness. A woman flatters with her eyes; a man flatters with his tongue.

A man is not very wicked when he is just wicked enough to be charitable. When you get angry because people laugh at you, you are giving them that much more to laugh at.

A man's idea of a nice woman is one who pays most attention to the things he says, and the least to the things he does.

What right has the man who sits at the table in his shirt sleeves to abuse his neighbor for wearing their hair in curl papers?

Mistakes are not the only things that people who are unhappily married make. They make old bachelors and old maids.

If you don't think that a woman can keep a secret, tell her something that it would be to the advantage of a rival of her to tell.

The most comfortable people to live with are those who are good enough to be looking not to be handsome and stupid enough not to be brilliant.
