The Club Rooms Vacated. The last vestige of the Council Bluffs Business Men's club has disappeared. Of this organization much has been written, but f all accounts are true its unwritten history greatly preponderates over what has thus far been made public. Many unfavorable stories are told by the ex-members and they rejoice that the club has at last succumbed to what they believe to be the inevitable result of rank mismanagement, Some of them wish that it had "died a-bornin'," but the fact that it did not does not prevent the exhibition of more or less hilarity over its final demise. There were a few members, however, who stayed by it to the last, and they sighed regretfully when they saw the furniture removed Thursday afternoon, and taken over the river. The furniture and all the property of the ciub was sold to the Omaha Wheel club for $500, and now graces the establishment of that organization. "It makes me sore to see that stuff go," remarked a member who witnessed the removal of the property. "It cost us over $2,500, and now it goes for a song. The carpets and draperies cost over $800, and it seems to me that we ought to have realized considerably more out of the sale."

Preacher Helmick's Trial.

Another batch of interesting testimony was introduced yesterday in the trial of Rev. Mr. Helmick, charged with the murder of Ed Palmer. The testimony was in behalf of the defense, and greatly strengthened its theory that the conspiracy against Helmick was the outgrowth of the minister's opposition to the saloons more than the result of personal feeling on the part of Paimer.

The evidence of these witnesses was to the effect that numerous threats had been uttered against Helmick as the result of the division in Neola in regard to the enforcement of the prohibitory law; that these threats were communicated to Helmick, and he was warned by his friends to look out or there would be another Haddock case; that the gang who attacked him at his house were not there for the purpose merely of throwing eggs, but that they were armed with deadly weapons.

Mrs. Tabor was the first witness whose testimony was in any way sensational. She lived over the store where her husband kept a restaurant, and there was an outside stairway to the building. On Sunday night about 12 o'clock she was sitting at the doorway, with only a screen door between her and the top of the stairway. Two men came along, and coming half way up the stairway, sat down, and helf' g themselves frequently to a flask of whisky, proceeded to talk over a scheme for "doing up Helmick." They said they were going to "help Ed do a betsaid they were going to "help Ed do a bet-ter job than he had done the (Saturday) evening before." They were going to way-lay Helmick when his wife and children were away from home, so that "they wouldn't raise any howl." They said they were going to beat him almost to death.

On cross-examination she admitted that she could not tell who thess two men were.

She found their whisky flask on the steps the next morning. She was a member of Mr. Helmick's church. Her husband used to keep a restaurant, but since the shooting he had been running a saloon. Her husband had not been prosecuted for selling liquors.

Mr. Osborne was the next witness. He was engaged in Witt's store on the morning of the Monday on the night of which day Palmer was shot. Palmer came into the store and began bragging about having been concerned the preceding Saturday night in egging Helmick. Palmer said that Saturegging Helmick. Palmer said that Saturday night he stood at the corner of Heimick's house with a piece of iron casting in his hand, so that if Helmick tackled any of the hove he was going to paralyze him. Osthe boys he was going to paralyze him. Os-borne expostulated with him, and told him

"We didn't get satisfaction Saturday night, and so we're going back tonight." The prosecution dropped this witness without a single cross question.

J. H. Crup was next called. Sweeney, one of the egg-throwing crowd, was at work for him. He talked with him about this matter, and urged him not to engage in it as it was not right, and was dangerous, too. Sweeney said that Sells (who was then city marshal) would take care of the boys, and that a number of the prominent citizens of Neola would like to see the job done. He mentioned no names but that of Sells. County Attorney Organ protested against the dragging in of the name of Selis, who was now dead, and unable therefore to deny such statements.

Dan Austin swore that he had a talk with Palmer the day of the shooting. Palmer was at work for him, and asked where he could get some rotten eggs. From some words aropped by Palmer he concluded that Palmer had been engaged in the egg-throwing the previous Saturday night. He charged him with it, and Palmer admitted it, further declaring that he was going again that night, or some night very soon. He said that on Saturday night he stood at the corner of the house and when Heimick came out he picked up a piece of barrel or a board and struck the house with it, scaring Hel-mick and making him run. Ed Vickery testified that ne was the next door neighbor to Helmick. He had heard numerous threats against Helmick and had told Helmick to look out for himself. On several occasions before the shooting he had escorted Helmick home, the two walking in the middle of, the street so that they could better ward off any attack.

Mr. White, an elderly gentleman, had heard two men, Lawrence and Heggarty, talking on the street and saying that if Helmick kept on interfering in their business there would be another Haddock case in Neola. He told Mr. Helmick and advised him to look out and to take to the middle of the road when going home after dark.

On cross-examination he testified that Can cross-examination ne testined that Lawrence was not in the saloon business, but run a butcher shop. He believed Heg-garty was a saloon keeper. He did not know when he mad kept a saloon, and while he told Helmick that these threats were made because of the shutting up of saloons, he did not hear either of these men say the word "saloon." The threats as heard were made a year or two before the shooting. Mr. Pruitt testified that Palmer had frequently said that he would fix Helmick and "do him up." Mr. Bruington, reporter of the district court, was introduced to show that some of the baseball clubs of Neola had expressed threats against Helmick. The nearest he could swear to it was that they were talking about some preacher, but the name could not be recalled by him.

C. T. Loveland testified that during the two years previous to the shooting he had heard numerous threats against Heimick and had told Helmick about them. He had advised Helmick to go prepared.

J. L. Osborne tried to testify as to a conversation had with Helmick on the Sunday previous to the shooting, but got ruled out by objections on the part of the state.

Father Schiffmacher, a Catholic priest at Neola, who has shown much friendliness to the defendant in this affair, testified as to Helmick's character. Helmick's character.

R. T. Lovell had heard numerous threats and had told Helmick to look out for himseif, for he would get hurt when he was ot looking for it.

J. W. Hamilton testified to threats made by Palmer. He told Helmick that he had better take care or he would get hurt. The night of the shooting was very dark. Henry Butler swore that last summer he heard Heimick and Palmer having a wordy controversy on the street. Helmick declined Palmer's invitation to a fight, and no blows James Hunter had heard Palmer make threats that he would get even with Hel-mick, and would do him up if he got a chance. He also testified as to the night of chance. He also testified as to the night of the shooting being very dark.

Lioya Smith had heard John Lawrence say that Helmick had better be careful or they would make another Haddock of him. Smith told Helmick about this, though not till nearly a year after he heard it, and about a month before the shooting.

Nathan Crissman was now called Ho

Nathan Crissman was next called. He married Palmer's sister, and was the one who wrote a note to Helmick urging him to advise the Porter family of Palmer's bad character, and help break off the expected engagement of Palmer to Miss Porter. Palmer came to see the winess about this letter, and at that time was argued with letter, and at that time was armed with a revolver.

The letter was offered in evidence, but the indige held the proffer under advisement.

Mr. Porter, living near Neola, testified as to threats to the effect that if Helmick did not keep his d—d mouth shut there would be another Haddock. He told Helmick, and by mail at once. The appointment is a very responsible one and has been worthily bestowed. The territory comprises twenty-six counties in the southwestern corner of the state and embraces the Seventh. FROM THE STATE CAPITAL.

Van Wyck and Richards Visit the City.

AN INTERESTING QUESTION.

A Nut for the State Board of Transportation to Crack-Sequel of a Runaway-Capitol Items.

LINCOLN, Neb., March 7 .- [Special to THE BEE.]-The Capital hotel, the best known political resort in the state, was the scene of unusual excitement last night. Ex-Senator Van Wyck and Hon. L. D. Richards of F'remont, chairman of the republicau st ate central committee, were conspicuous figures in its corridors. It was talked on the streets that these distinguished centlemen were in the city, and small-fry politicians of moment soon danced attendance. The word had gone forth that something was up. The bearing of the gentlemen, bowever, indicated nothing of the kind.

"What's up, general?" queried THE BEE representative approaching the ex-senator.
"Nothing at all," he responded. "I had a little private business to look after and dropped into the city without any notice."
"Your happening here with Chairman Richards is a political accident, then!"

"Certainly. I disliked coming up on the morning train and took the evening train that I might enjoy my usual rest." "Your visit has nothing to do with politics,

"Not at all, not at all. I will say, however, that I would be pleased to see an honest, con-sistent administration of affairs, a state board of transportation and a state legislature that would do something that would materially benefit the great mass of the people of the state. I would like to ece local interests looked after as they should be during the coming year. It should be remembered for once that there are no grave national interests at stake in which we as a people or a state can take a part with any assurance that we can accomplish anything. Local interests should be clearly defined and the coming fight should be on the line of state control of corporations. Let the people have an opportunity to say whether or not the state should rule the corporations or the corporations the state. I have faith in the people and they will assert themselves if a job is not put up on them at the primaries."

Mr. Richards was non-committal as to the object of his visit. The opinion prevails throughout the capital, however, that he is after the governor-ship, and that his visit at this time had solely to do with his canvass.

AN IMPORTANT QUERY. Stephens Brothers of Eills, Gage county, live stock, coal and lumber dealers, query the state board of transportation as follows: "Are railroad companies obliged to furnish their own cars, when they have plenty, to be loaded with grain for points not on their own line of road? For instance, we wish to ship seven carloads of corn to Carrolltown, Ill., over the Rock Island, Chicago & Alton, and this company will not allow us to load their own cars for this point, and tell us that we must wait until we can get Chi-cago & Alton cars. This compels us to can-cel a good sale and means quite a damage to us. Now, we wish to know if we can le gally compel the Rock Island to furnish their own cars, or even foreign cars, when they have their own on hand for such points!" • The board of transportation reserves answer for a day or two.

SEQUEL OF A RUNAWAY. David Duncan and Emma Snow were married in this city onight. Hereon hangs a tale. It will be re-numbered that the bride was arrested here a few weeks ago at the instance of her mother, who lives at Blue Springs, and sent home. At that time she Sought and had secured a place to work at Cameorn's restaurant, but just before she became domesticated in her duties there the telegram came that she was a runaway and under age. When interrogated she admitted the charge, but stated that she left home because her mother was too poor to provide for her and that Archie Duncan, her husband's brother, insisted upon marrying her. The telegram commanding Emma's arrest was sent at his instgation. His brother, it appears, however, was master of the girl's heart and she came here at his instance, only to suffer the disgrace of arrest. But they bided their time, with the result stated. Archie, however, when too late, appears on the scene with affidavits to the effect that David is only nincteen and Emma but seventeen years of age, whereas the records show that the former is twenty-one and the latter nineteen, and Archie says he propose to prosecute his brother for perjury.
