THE LABORER AND HIS HIRE.

Condition and Prospects of the Striking Coopers.

WHAT THE TAILORS CAN EARN.

Profits of a Clipping Machine—Earnings of the Coal Miners—Carpenters and Joiners—General Labor Notes.

Striking Coopers.

Early last week all the union coopers employed in the packing houses at South Omaha dropped their hammers, threw aside their bodkin aprons and walked out. A general strike was declared.

The trouble arose over the bosses refusing to pay from $3 to $2.50. The men refused to stand the cut and quit work in a body. A number of the men have left the city and gone to Kentucky where good coopers are just now in demand. The men who will remain are confident of winning the strike. As yet the bosses have been unable to secure any scab coopers. The Coopers' union is in a healthy financial condition. There are nearly one hundred members. Only a few coopers either in Omaha or South Omaha are non-union men.

Ten years ago, said one of the strikers, coopers got 15 cents apiece for making tierces. At that time they got $2.50 and $3 per day for backing house coopers. Now they are getting 25 and 40 cents for tierces in Chicago and South Omaha, and the bosses want to cut our pay to $2.75 per day. It is much harder to work in the packing houses in the summer than in the winter, owing to the necessity of spending so much time in the chill room. In the winter when the temperature inside and out is more equable it is impossible to make full time. At the time of the walk-out a number of the coopers were only making half time. I know of one instance where a good man worked nineteen straight months at $1.75 a day. His wages and only averaged $1.76 a day. His wages were at the rate of $2.50 per day. So you can see how much time we are compelled to lose."

A Profitable Industry.

"What pay do you fellows get for clipping a horse?" was asked a burly negro as he ran the clippers up and down the left leg of a chunky chestnut gelding in a Sixteenth street barn.

"Does you mean what do we get, or do boss?" replied the Ethiopian as he kept ahead with his work without even looking up.

"Well, either, or both."

"The boss gets from $2 to $2.50 a head. I get 50 cents and the man who turns the crank on the machine gets 50 cents. The boss gets the balance."

A clipping machine costs from $50 to $75. There is little expense attached to the running of one of them, and when kept busy have proved to be a very profitable investment. A horse can be handsomely clipped in less than an hour. In Omaha there are only three in active service, and all of them are doing a thrifty business.

Independent Tailors and Prices.

The Customs tailors' independent union of Omaha has finally filed its articles of incorporation with the secretary of state and asked for a charter. This act cannot but cause strife and rivalry among the journeymen of this city.

As stated in The Bee last Sunday there will be two unions, namely a branch of the custom tailors' national union and the independent. The latter, of course, is purely a local affair. The national union allows only one organization to be established in a city. In case of a strike, or the need of assistance, the national tailors are not expected to assist the independents and vice versa.

The trouble among the tailors arose over the management of the local union. It was not a question of wages, as has been erroneously printed in some Omaha papers. Some of the members were dissatisfied with the officers and their conduct. A few of the bosses were among the first to pull out. They were followed by a number of journeymen, and now the whole matter is in the hands of a committee from the central labor union. The scale of prices, signed by all the members of the independent union, is as follows:

ges of miners and mine laborers: (3) more uniform conditions in screening and weighing coal at the mines; (4) the appointment of a joint arbitration board to adjust in a peaceable manner all controversies between the miners and the coal operators; (5) the co-operation of mine owners in the establishment of a relief fund, to be used as a fund to widows and orphans and miners, and also to help those who are so unfortunate to be disabled by accidents in mines; (6) the reorganization of the interstate plan in monthly payments; abolishing the famous resolution was adopted and one requiring the approval of mining and hauling contracts by the executive board. The state labor bureau was endorsed and reports called for every year.

The committee on legislation recommended the enactment of a law establishing, annually, payments to the state for the support of a system of truck stores; the examination of stationary engineers; a law making coal screens uniform throughout the state; the appointment of a board of weights and measures; for the adjustment of scales upon which coal is weighed at the mines.

Census Takers.

The men appointed to take the school census have begun the work and are progressing rapidly. They are allowed 3 cents pay for each name. The work must be completed by April 1, and it is expected that more men will have to be employed to finish the work by that time. The men who are now engaged in gathering the names are as follows:

First Ward—Pat Foley.
Second Ward—Job Mariott.
Third Ward—Frank Carpenter.
Fourth Ward—James Harpner.
Fifth Ward—Joe Scullier.
Sixth Ward—E. T. Glenn and George F. Stoney.

Railroad Laborers.

"There will be a great deal of work for laborers on Nebraska railroads as soon as the spring weather opens," said an attaché of the Chicago, St. Paul, Minneapolis & Omaha road.

Home-Made Pressed Brick.

To the Editor of The Bee: Why send off for the pressed brick when they can be manufactured here at home, and create an industry that will give employment to laboring-men the year round? Where are our capitalists? Let them investigate this. There were shipped into Omaha from abroad, last year, 1,000,000 of pressed brick. The writer of this is a practical man and is willing to put money into this enterprise. He will call on any person who desires it and explain the system to them if they feel like entering into such an enterprise. The manufacture of pressed brick is sure to be a benefit to the city.

The Carpenters.

The Carpenters and Joiners' union still holds interesting meetings in Green's hall twice each month. The attendance is always large, and a satisfactory feeling prevails all along the line. All has been asked from this union by the striking carpenters at Dallas, Texas, and was freely given.

A Labor Meeting Called.

By an invitation of the Rev. John Williams, rector of the St. Barnabas church, the president of the Central labor union has called a special meeting for this afternoon at 3:30 o'clock, at Gate City hall, for the purpose of going to the city to have an opera house to hear an address delivered by the Rev. James O. T. Huntington on "Messiah of the Church to Employers." All officers and members of the union are expected to be present.

The Painters' Position.

The painters and decorators of Lincoln have notified their bosses that in the future they will only work nine hours a day. Lincoln has a strong union in this trade. The same craft in Omaha will follow suit in a very short time.

Labor Notes.

Great preparations are being made by the members of the Central labor union for monthly payments; abolishing the famous system of truck stores; the examination of stationary engineers; a law making coal screens uniform throughout the state; the appointment of a board of weights and measures; for the adjustment of scales upon which coal is weighed at the mines.

The reports of all the trades unions in Omaha which have been made to the Central labor union during the week, shows an increase in work everywhere.

The ice men are still working a day and a night force. The ice is now about eleven inches thick and there is no danger but that enough of it will be secured to make next season tolerable.

AN INFIDEL'S PHILOSOPHY.

A most remarkable death-bed scene took place in Vienna three weeks ago. The hero of it was a young professor at the university there, says the St. Louis Globe-Democrat. He was a man of great brilliance and learning. His lectures concerning the inner life of the soul were famous among the students, who visited them in crowds. He was regarded by his fellow professors in the philosophical faculty as the coming man in the department of psychology. Socially, also, he was a man of considerable prominence. He was married into a wealthy family, and took every opportunity to get for his wife and three children all the pleasures that the Austrian capital affords. At the theatre, on the promenade and at the great court balls he was one of the most familiar figures.

Four years ago he fell ill of an incurable disease, and his physicians warned him that only a radical change from his gay mode of life could hinder for a short time the progress of the malady. The young professor answered quietly that he would die as a philosopher should die, without an effort to defer his last day. He ate, drank, studied, lectured and danced exactly as he did before the doctor warned him. A few weeks ago he lay down on his deathbed. He read the same books and talked of the same frivolous amusements as usual up to an evening about three weeks ago. At 8 o'clock the doctor then took him that he would die within a few hours. The young professor discussed many topics entirely foreign to the subject of his fast-approaching death with his wife till midnight.

"I feel well, very well," he said to her finally, "so well that I would like to drink a bottle of champagne for you before I go. Kiss me—for I may go while you are away—and then have the wine put on ice." His wife obeyed. A few minutes later he took the bottle from the servant's hand, poured out the wine for his wife and himself, emptied the glass to her health, flung it on the floor, and dropped back on his pillow, dead.

The Vienna dailies, which have a constitutional prejudice against printing the full name of any man of high social standing, mention the hero of this strange scene only as Herr Prof. P. He was an infidel.

CURED THE HORSE BY FAITH.

Some Good Stories About Men and Other Animals.

A DOG IN THE ORGAN LOFT.

He Tried to Join in the Singing But Created a Panic—Sewed With Her Teeth—Chicago Enterprise.

The Curious Instance of Life.

A curious instance of the effects of the Christian science craze occurred here recently, says a Eau Claire, Wis., dispatch to the Chicago Herald. There is quite a large circle of students of the science in this city and they hold regular meetings for the discussion of methods and cases. One of the number, a gentleman who resides just out of the city, had a sick horse on his hands. The veterinary surgeons could do nothing for the animal, and the local Christian science experts failed also. Thereupon the owner of the horse, having plenty of time and not caring for the expense, went to the telegraph office and wired an account of the case to a Christian science professor in Chicago. The symptoms were given in the telegram, and the Chicago expert was asked to treat the case by the usual method. The horse was at that time apparently on its last legs. The Chicago scientist wired back that he was treating the horse to the best of his ability, and was thinking hard. Within five hours the horse was well and eating oats. The case was duly reported at the next meeting of the circle, and the members are pursuing their experiments with renewed faith in the science.

Park avenue, East End, Presbyterian church was the scene of an unusual musical event on last Sunday evening, the streets of Chicago broke and in search of any sort of a job which offered, says the Chicago Herald. His last night he had gone for food, and one afternoon he was walking through a downtown alley, tired and disgusted. Happening to glance upward he saw a boy leaning out of a window. In a moment the boy lost his balance and fell to the ground with the customary dull, sickening thud. The discouraged man hastened to the boy's side and discovered that death had been instantaneous. Looking up at the open window from which he had fallen the man counted the stories and then sought the stairway near by. Mounting the stairs he dashed into the editor's room, for it was the office of the Prairie Farmer, and blurted out: "Do you want a boy?" Looking up in surprise the editor answered, "No, we have a boy." Then the man said, "I'll bet you haven't—your boy just fell from the window and is dead. I want his place." Investigation found that the man was right, and he was engaged for his pushing way. Since then he has risen by degrees and made money, and very few of his friends know how he gained his place.

A large yellow cat, with white points, started to cross East Main street, just opposite the Arcade, on Saturday afternoon when traffic was at its climax. Her chances of getting across the street safely did not seem to be the best, as gloriously ejected, this time with more force than affection and again the service proceeded.

But it was evident that the canine meant to stay on till the termination. Still, as the next hymn was being sung, the far-off echo of a new familiar voice was heard from the back hallway, where he had been banished. The young people were almost exploding. Finally the canine musician was dragged outside and sent home under escort to prevent his return.

There died at Sugar Island last week a woman who could have made a fortune in a dime museum had she chosen, says a St. John, N. B., dispatch to the Evening Post. It was Mary Goodhue, known in all the country round as "The woman who sewed with her mouth." She was born of French parentage about fifty or fifty-five years ago. She had no hands or arms or legs or feet, or at least none in any way developed, these members never having grown after she was born. Her body was of full size and her mind was fully developed. She was very intelligent, conversing very freely in both French and English.

In early life she developed a fondness for sewing; but how she was to perform this task when she had no hands or even feet to assist her in this arduous work? She astonished her relatives by beginning to sew with her mouth. Finally she became so expert that she could cut the material with the scissors, thread the needle and then do fine sewing, using only her mouth for all the operations. A great many people from this city and from the surrounding country witnessed her perform this wonderful work, and some people have in their possession squares for patch-work quilts done by her. She pieced a number of quilts and could make known as the "Log Cabin" variety, a most difficult task to perform.

It is said that Barnum, hearing of this wonderful woman, offered her large pay to go with his show. Mary would have gone, but her family objected, and she remained at home.

How Miss Braddon Writes.

Miss Braddon is one of the few literary women who have not allowed themselves to be spoiled by success, and who have no hesitancy about admitting their age, says the New York World. On the contrary she is rather proud of her fifty-three years and fifty-three novels, although she is reluctant to talk about her books, dismissing inquiries with the assertion that she "can't tell how they are written."

Four days of the week she writes steadily, forbidding even the postman to disturb her, and the rest of the time is spent in the saddle, where her thinking is done. She studies Dickens for style, weaves her plots from suggestions of old newspaper clippings, which she has been collecting for the last thirty years, and edits her copy as she writes it.

Her husband publishes her books and is pronounced her severest critic. Their acquaintance began, it is said, in a wrangle over the first manuscript she submitted, and the able defense that won his admiration afterwards captured his affections. Notwithstanding the half hundred books that have passed through his hands this husband-publisher finds new and startling faults in each succeeding volume to criticize. Miss Braddon is fair and racy in face, with bright auburn hair, blue eyes, angular in build, and of nervous temperament.
