IMMANUEL HOSPITAL PROJECT.

It is Fully Considered at the Meeting at Boyd's Opera House.

TWENTY THOUSAND DOLLARS NEEDED.

A Committee Appointed to Solicit Subscriptions-The Order of Deaconesses and Their Work.

In response to a call issued in the papers yesterday morning a large number of citizens assembled in Boyd's opera house at 4 o'clock vesterday afternoon to consider the Immanuel aspital project.

Judge Wakeley presided and on the stage were the following well known gentlemen: Dean C. H. Gardner, Dr. George L. Miller, Hon. J. M. Woolworth, Rev. Dr. Joseph Duryea, Judge Clarkson, Hon J. M. Thurston, H. T. Clarke, Joseph Baker, C. E. Yest and Judge Wakeley read the eall of the meeting and said the committee had been called to consider the duty of humanity to those who are unfortunate and subjected to actual want. He said that in all civilized countries this burden has been met by organized matitutions, the special object of which has been to aid the slek and distressed. In many places, however this idea had given way to the seeking after the more given way to the seeking after the more material things of this world, and Omaha was no exception to this rule. There were many charitable institutions in the city, chief among which was St. Joseph's hospital, the Clarkson memorial hospital, the Woman's home, and others of similar character, but the city needed more of these institutions.

"If we need an example of our necessities in this direction," said the judge, "we have the case of our sister city of Louisville. We know not what day or hour may bring some know not what day or hour may bring some calamity on us which will call into play all The speaker then said he would leave it to others to speak more in detail of the object of the meeting, and introduced Hon. J. M.

Judge Woolworth spoke as follows: "The Judge Woolworth spoke as follows: "The institution we are here to consider proposes a special work in addition to usual hospital work. It proposes to keep within its walls not only the sick and destitute who may need its assistance, but proposes to provide those who may be able hereafter, in a plain, intelligent, disciplined way, to care for others. It proposes to collect together and train women who will be called deacenesses. I have been requested to speak particularly of this feature of the work. "In the first place, what is a deaconess?"

"In the first place, what is a deaconess?
"There are in this city a large number of women going about into the destitute places of the city ministering to the sick and desti-tute. Some of them are young women—culti-vated, clegant, and refined. They pass out of clegant, refined houses into the filth and destitution of the lowest portions of the city. Some of them are young mothers, who have their own little families. They go about giving not only relief from sickness but spiritual relief. These ladies find they can-not relieve even a tithe of the distress, so not relieve even a tithe of the distress, so they form a society and divide the work. There is hardly a church in the city but has a society of this sort which has the care of some of these cases. Now, if some of these young women were to devote themselves entirely to this work, they would be deaconesses. If these societies were to gather themselves into a single house this house would be a home of deaconesses. If this spirit of deselves into a single house this house would be a home of deaconesses. If this spirit of devotion were still further strengthened by a clergyman of any church you would have a stronger form of a home of deaconesses. A deaconess is a woman who has reached years of discretion and has strength to carry on the work, and who devotes all her time and service to the relief of suffering humanity under the direction of a Christian minister. That the direction of a Christian minister. That is an answer to the question, What is a

"Do not suppose this is a modern institu-tion. Let me tell you something of the history of the order of deaconesses. I go back to the days when the apostles of the church were alive. They called to their aid holy women and set them apart to work to which they were called. The order of deaconesses had its foundation almost at the time of the foundation of the Christian church. Shortly before the dark ages the order passed into the sisterhood of nuns of different orders, and conterhood of nuns of different orders, and continued in this way almost to the very generation in which we are now living. In 1835 or 1836 an effort was made among Protestant denominations of Christians to revive the Protestant order of deaconesses. The first effort was made by Rev. Theodore Flieduer in Kaiserswerth, Germany. The effort was a success and Flieduer came to the United States and started an institute in Pittsfield, Mass., but it was not successful. The next effort to found a hospital was by Dr. Muellenberg, who came to New York in 1846 and began the work which resulted in the erection of St. Luke's hospital. The hospital of St. Luke's hospital. The hospital was served by a sisterhood he had organized, and catled the Sisterhood of the Holy Communion. This movement has been followed by similar movements in Episcopal churches in this country and in Eu-rope. We had a sisterhood of that kind in Omaha. We all remember how Sister Mary walked up and down our streets doing good and had at last to give up because her strength was exhausted. I wish it would be said now as I heard a constable say then: Trinity church does more for the poor in this city through Sister Mary than any church in

The speaker then predicted a bright future for Immanuel hospital and expressed the opinion that it was destined to grow until the name of her who founded it should become

Mr. Woolworth was followed by Hon. John Mr. Woolworth was followed by Hon. John M. Thurston, who delivered a very able and eloquent address on the grandeur of the scheme proposed and the great necessity which prevails in this city for an institution of this character. He alluded in the most touching way to the great good which has been done by the Catholic church, by its hospitals which en-circle the globe, and stand as a monument to the greatness of the Catholic church.

The speaker said he didn't believe in that some of Christianity which poursont Christian hope and keeps its pocket book shut tight. He said he had noticed in the call for the meeting a statement that money would not be usked for. "We are all good Christians when you don't ask us for money," said he.
Continuing, Mr. Thurston said that those who have health and wealth held it in trust for those who are deprived of those things. He closed with a stirring anneal to those who object which would make it a power for good.

He closed with a stirring appeal to those who were provided with a bountiful share of this world's goods to give part of it to a worthy object which would make it a power forward.

Dr. Duryea was the next speaker. He likewed the continued struggle for the material things of life to a pack of animals struggling, scratching, biting, pulling and hauling for a portion and then dragging it off into a corner to gnaw. He thought it a good thing to come together and devise a way to relieve suffering. He strongly opposed the idea of leaving the sick and destitute to a public institution. It was impossible to keep abuses out of a public institution, he said. The only way around the difficulty is in the

The only way around the difficulty is in the way proposed.

Dean Gardner addressed the meeting

Dean Gardner addressed the meeting briefly, warmly supporting the scheme and premising his hearty support. The dean's address was elequent and well received.

Dr. Miller then took the floor and after a few introductory remarks said that $25,000 had been raised and one wing of the building erected and ready for occupancy. What was needed was $15,000 or $20,000 mere to get the hospital started. He said he was confident that the amount would be raised without difficulty if a committee was appointed to go around and solicit aid.

At the conclusion of Dr. Miller's remarks there were load cuils for Mr. Foreistrom. In response he appeared on the stage and made a for occupancy in three months. There were already deaconesses enough to start this work, and all that was needed was money.

On motion of Mr. Barker a committee of nine continuen was appointed to solicit subscriptions to the work. The committee was as follows: Guy C. Barton, Joseph Barker, George H. Millor, Thomas Kilpatrick, A. P. Tukey, Fred Millard, Dr. J. E. Summers, jr., U. L. McCagne, and Fred Nye.

It being 6 o'clock, the meeting then adjourned.

BEET SUGAR CULTURE.

The Circular of Instructions Sent Out by the Oxnard Company. Mr. Henry T. Oxnard of the Oxnard beet sugar company of Grand Island favors The BER with the following copy of the Oxnard beet sugar company's official advice to farm-

In regard to preparing the ground, the way and time of sowing, and the treatment of the growing plants, for the successful raising of sugar beets, we request the careful attention of the farmers to the following:

In raising this vegetable the soil has to be carefully selected. The best is a rich deep soil with a subsoil, that allows the surface water to pass through. Although it requires. a considerable quantity of moisture for its growth, the beet cannot bear standing water. It is advisable to select the best piece of land available, not too wet of course, but neither too dry. A sandy hill for instance might dry out too quickly. Land on which thirty-five bushels of corn to the acre can be raised, will do. Farmers who have not been visited by the agriculturiats of the Oxnard beet sugar impany should select land as stated above. To obtain growth it is best to plow deep, allowing the beet to extract as much as possible from the soil. But this can be done only gradually, i. e., by plowing one or two inches deeper every year so as to reach a depth of twelve to fourteen inches. This method refers only to deep soil. Where the soil is six to seven inches deep a subsoil slow must be used; thereby preventing the urning up of a dead subsoil. Land which has turning up of a dead subsoil. Land which has been plowed twelve inches in the fall does not require to be plowed in the spring. When the plowing is finished the land must be worked thoroughly with a heavy sharp harrow in order to get rid of all roots and trash. It should then be rolled as thoroughly as possible, when it will be ready for the sowner of seal. For this number, the indeas possible, when it will be ready for the sow-ing of seed. For this purpose the imple-ment dealers have in stock hand-sowing ma-chines as well as larger ones for horses. The seed should be planted in rows sixteen to eighteen inches apart, and not deeper than one inch. The machine is to be set in such a way as to drop eighteen to twenty pounds to the acre. The right time for sowing desends mainly on the climatic conditions of the ocality, whether there is danger of heavy right frost or not. The sowing should not be too late, else the culture of the beets might in-terfere with the harvesting of small grain, terfere with the harvesting of small grain, and moreover the beet needs its time to get a hardy growth. The land to be planted should be divided into three parts, the first of which should be sowed down about April 20, the second May 1, and the last May 10. Every sowing machine has a smaller roller to cover to cover the seed, but it is much better to use the larger roller. *The seed will take ten to fourteen down to spread. Two on three days fourteen days to sprout. Two or three days after the young shoots appear, the soil between the rows should be loosened with a out the weeds. After one or two days the land should be rolled again, to prevent the air and sun from drying it out. This does not hurt the beets at all, except in the early morning, when there is dow on them. After a week's rest the beet will have its fourth leaf and then is the time to begin thinning them out. The quicker this is done the better for the growth of the beets and the ield of the crop. It must be done in the folwing manner: Hoe right across the row with a loc four nches wide, in such a manner as to leave a bunch of four or five plants every six or seven inches. After one day's rest reduce the bunches by hand to one good plant, Children do very well for this work. When this is done the most important and disa-greeable work is over. All that remains is to keep the land free from weeds. About a week after thinning out, go through the field with a horse hoe, working it two inches deep. Two weeks later repeat this, going possibly somewhat deeper. About the beginning of July the beets will have reached such a growth that the leaves will entirely shade the round, and no more work is necessary until

Funeral of F. C. Festner.

Yesterday the remains of the late F. ( Pestner, the well known and respected book binder and publisher, were laid to rest in the family lot at Prospect Hill cemetery. cused in a most beautiful casket lined with satin, cloth covered without and draped with velvet. The features seemed as if in repose, being calm and natural, as if the deceased were taking the rest to which his long and active career entitled him. On the edge of the satin lining was a spray of smilax, which framed the face in a most beautiful manner.

On the lid of the coffin a silver plate bore the name and age of the deceased, and below it was a spray of flowers sent by Mrs. Gorling. At various places in the parlor stood other floral offerings of simple and beautiful design, the odor of which pervaded the apartment. Among these was a pillow of carnations and calla lillies and a cross of roses by the employes of Mr. F'estner's large printing and bookbinding establishment; a cross and anchor of white pinks and carnations by the children of the deceased; a floral testament by Mr. and Mrs. Sol Davidsohn and Miss Lizzie Isaaes; an urn of roses by M. Erfling, and loose flowers by Emma Hans.

Around the apartment was a number of potted plants of many species, which robbed the scene of a great deal of its funeral aspect.

The church was filled to repletion, the audicate being the largest which had ever gath ered within its walls. This compliment to the deceased was in every way deserved, because in life no member of the little congregation had been more liberal in aid of and devoted to the society than himself. The pastor, Mr. Frese, delivered a most cloquent and feeling discourse on the subject of death and the many virtues of the deceased.
