MURDERED WHILE COURTING.

Peddier Chronister Shot at a Farm House Near Elkhorn.

WAS COURTING THE WIDOW.

Anton Frank, a Jealous Rival, Has Been Arrested Charged With the Murder Details of the Tragedy.

Another murder was committed in Douglas county Sunday night.

A peddler named Chronister was shot to death while quietly chatting with Mrs. Reed, the woman who owns the house where the victim was stopping for the night.

Mrs. Reed is a widow and rents a large farm from Tom Murray of this city in Chicago precinct, six miles out of Elkhorn. She sub-rents a portion of the place to Charles Stroebel, who also occupies a portion of the house where Mrs. Reed lives. Strocbel and his family were at home when the shot was fired, but immediately ran away followed by Mrs. Reed. They went to the nearest neighbor and gave the alarm. As soon as word reached them J. Babbitt, A. W. Albro, Dan Clifton and J. Reeves went to the

They found Chronister sitting in a chair with his head leaning back against the wall. The house was deserted, not a living soul to be found. Chronister had only been dead but a short time. The lamp was still burning on the table where Mrs. Reed had been figuring over the disposition of some produce she had marketed. Nothing in the room had been disturbed.

The shot was fired through a screen and window. Deliberate and careful aim must have been taken as nearly the entire load was buried in the left side of the man's head, causing instant death.

After counseling among themselves for a short time the men concluded to remove the body from the chair and place it on the sofa.

This was done.
Yesterday messengers came to Omaha and notified the sheriff and coroner, who started for the scene over the Union Pacific road at 10 o'clock.

Although Chronister is well known by the farmers in the vicinity of the place where he was killed they did not know where he comes from except that he stocks up in Omaha. He drives a large peddlers' waren in drives a large peddlers' wagon in which he carries all sorts of notions and tinware. When the neighbors arrived at the house Sunday night they found his wagon standing in front of the place unmo-lested and his horses were in the barn. Chronister seldom carried much money, trading off his wares for products of the farm. This fact rather discourages the theory that he was murdered for money and strengthens the suspicion which is held by some that it was pure lealousy

A young farm hand named Antone Frank, who was very much infatuated with Mrs. Reed, is suspected of being implicated in the murder. He would sit and talk with her for hours during the talk with her for hours during the evenings but his company was not appreciated. In fact of late Mrs. Reed has been trying to get rid of him. He had boarded with her for several weeks. Prior to that time Frank was employed by Mr. Babbitt, but was discharged. When he left Babbitt's he began boarding with Mrs. Reed, where he has remained until about there days ago. has remained until about three days ago.

About dark Sunday Frank called at Babbit's house and asked him to take him back to work. Babbitt said he didn't want him, but tendered him the bespitality of a night's ledging and his breakfast. Frank said no, that he was going over to a neighboring farm house and stay all night, and left. The shooting must have taken place between 9 and 10 o'clock, giving ample time for Frank to walk from Babbitt's over to Mrs. Reed's.

At the Scene of the Murder.

County Attorney Mahoney, Corner Harrigan, Deputy Coroner McManingal and Deputy Sheriff Crebe left immediately to inquire into the murder. The last mentioned left the train at Millard in company with J. C. Reeves to search for the suspected murderer, whose name is Tony Frank. He is an Italian about. height, very dark complexion, dark moustache, short dark hair, sear on left cheek, prominent teeth dark clothes, black felt hat scowling expression and speaks in broken English. He expression and speaks in proken English. He was in Millard Sunday afternoon and The fact that the shooting was done with a a shot gun and that no weapon of this kind has been found has raised the question as to what has become of the weapon. Mr. Babbitt says he has never known Frank to carry a revolver and thinks that Frank, who knew his premises well, knew that a loaded gun always hung in the barn and that he took and with it committed the deed. Mr. Babbitt says, however, that as he went to Omaha before examining whether or not his gun was missing, he could not tell whether or not his suspicions were well founded. On the arrival of the train at Elkhorn Mr. Babbitt immediately dispatched a messenger to his house to ascertain whether the gun was missing. If it should not be found in its enstomary place the point will be an important one in lishing the guilt of the party supposed.

The Suspect Arrested.

Tony Frank, the alleged murderer of Peddler Chonisten, was brought into Elkhorn about 10:30 o'clock yesterday morning. He was arrested by Constable Wm. Ponpenhagen about 8:30 o'clock about seven miles east of Millard and two miles from the scene of the murder. The arrest was assisted in by a William Albro, one of the neighbors of Mrs. Reed. He was one of the first to visit the scene of the murder in company with Daniel Clifton, G. M. Tunison, J. C. Reeves and Joseph Babbit, He suggested to Mr. Poppenhagen that they start out to overtake Frank, as they both thought he knew something about the nurder. They had not gone far when they found that Frank had stopped at the house of a farmer immediately south of Mr. Reeves' farm and he then traveled east tracking him across the fields and finally meeting him on the high road going at a rapid rate in an easterly direction. He was told that he was a prisoner and that he had best get in the buggy with Poppenhagen and Albro. He said that he did not do anything and did not know what they wanted him for.

He got in however and was driven to Elkhorn. Frank has a sullen disposition and a scowling expression.

He was dressed in a grey yest and pants and wore a heavy dark blue overcoat and seal skin cap. He was subject to a great deal of scrutiny but bore it without evidence of anxiety or fear.

A Preliminary Hearing.

Frank was taken before Justice Smith at Eikhorn and subjected to a searching examination by County Attorney Mahoney, told the story of his having lived at Mrs. Reed's for several months and during that time had paid his board. About six weeks ago Mrs. Reed's husband senarated from her and just about that time Chonisten was working for Mrs. Reed He said that if he [Frank] helped around the farm his board wouldn't cost him anything and he concluded to remain. Chronister in the last six weeks has visited Mrs Reed about five times and worked en odd jobs, stabling his horse in the barn. When Frank was asked why he had told Mr. Bab-bitt he was going to Poppenhagen's and still did not go there he evaded the question, and finally said it was because he knew that Pop-penhagen had no accompositions, for him penhagen had no accommodations for him. He said he had some trouble with Chouisten but that it did not amount to anything. Frank was brought to the county juil at Omaha last night.

The Murderer's Work.

The scene of the shooting lies about six miles from Elkhorn. The cottage in which the peddler was murdered is a small, unpainted structure with a gable roof. It faces the south. It is twenty feet long and about twelve feet wide. On the north side is a kitchen running the width of the house and about five feet high. On the north side of the latter and about six feet east of the west end is a window about two feet square. On the outside of this window is a wire netting. On this netting there is an opening about two inches in diameter. Around it is a number of smaller holes. These and the main hole were undoubtedly made by the fatal charge which robbed Chronister of his life. Two or three of the chromater of his life. Two or three of the shot went through the east frame of the win-dow. Inside this window the victim sat, the back of his head being toward the panes. The shot shattered at the same time two panes of glass, not a particle of either being panes of glass, not a particle of either being afterward found in the frames.

A thorough search of the grounds was made. At length the county attorney and Mr. Fry discovered footsteps which indicated that the party who had made them was making hasty strides from the scene. These steps led along a roadway leading northwesterly from the scene of the murder. The foot was of average size though the strides were, in three or four instances, especially where the road ran down hill, five feet and eight inches in length. These tracks were followed until they became obscured in the hardness of the road.

The room in which the man met his fate as previously described, was about seven feet wide by twenty feet in length. In one corner stood a stove. Beside it opened a door to the west. On the north side was the fatal winwest. On the north side was the fital window. Near the window stood the blood-stained chair on which Chronister had met his death. Beneath it was a pool of blood which had flowed from the guping fissure in the man's head. A rough table was brought in from outside and on this was placed the body of the victim and there, the antopsy was performed by Doctors Baldwin of Elikhorn and McManigal of Omaha. The victim mate but one exclamation, "Oh." He made but one novement, that of throwing up his hands. When they fell below the table he was a dead man. The head fell backward towards the window, dropped upon the sill and there the window, dropped upon the sill and there rested until the victim was found. He had not fallen from the chair on which he sat but remained there a horrible spectacle when he was found.

Outside the little cottage, attracting a great deal of attention, stood the wagon of the dead peddler. It has a dark green body with red wheels. In the box was the peddler's cab a plain broad structure of soiled cream color with a black tin roof. Near the end on either side was a small dirty board, on which were painted in red letters the words "Dry Goeds and Tinware." Inside was filled with a varied assortment of household utensils bought in the main at Bennet's, on Capitol bought in the main at Bennet's, on Capitol avenue near Fifteenth street in Omaha. There were also found two canvas grips and one of imitation morroeco, containing hand-kerchiefs, clothes and caps, which he also sold when an opportunity presented itself. The vehicle is not an uncommon one in Omaha, though outside of the firm mentioned, it is not known that he has any acquaintances there. nequaintances there.

The victim is a man about fifty years of ge. He is of massive build, high torchead and cheek bones, grizzled hair and mustache, and check bones, grizzled hair and mustache. He was dressed in a rough, dark suit with a dark blue knit overshirt and a light rek under one. He had a pair of low-cut shoes and white stockings. It is said that a son of his is foreman of the street railway barns in Sioux City, and it is thought he has some members of his family residing in Illinois, but the second local street by the second local street. but the exact place is not known. He left a tin box in the house which is now in the possession of Coroner Harrigan. In it, however, could be found nothing to show where the other members of his family are now to be found. It contained, however, several trinkets, a couple of dellars in silver and several photographs of semi-nude females. These bear out the reputation which Chronister has borne in this vicinity, one of his failings being the seeking of too much female company.

Regarding Mes. Reed all kinds of stories are alloat. It is claimed that she was, at one time, an inmate of a sporting house in Council Bluffs; that it was there she met the man whose name she now bears; that she married and moved with him to and resided at Millard; that there they lived for some years and finally, about three months ago, Frank ap-peared upon the scene. Previously, Chronister had been stopping there, in fact did so whenever he traveled in that vicinity. Three months ago Frank commenced to board there and at times did old jobs about the farm. Chronister and he quarrelled. Mr. Reed, the husband, became jealous of the peddler and Frank, especially the latter, and there has been no denying that it was because of the latter that Reed and his wife separated. This separation took place about three months ago. The wife moved to the farm where the murder The wife moved to the farm where the mirder was committed and was accompanied there by Frank, who it was claimed had paid his board for three months, which did not expire until the 5th of March. Notwithstanding this fact, Frank was allowed to remain around the farm until about a week ago. About that time Chronister made his appearance. Then Mrs. Reed informed Frank that thirty-three years of age, 5 feet 7 inches in | she had no room for him, but she did have me for the peddler.

After the autopsy the inquest was held. It was interesting mainly in showing that Frank had threatened "to fix" Chronister; that on last Monday night he had called at Mrs. Reed's and left standing against a tree near the door a gun which he said belonged to Mr. Babbitt, the farmer for whom he was then working; that he had lied when he told Mr. Babbitt he was going to stop Sunday night with Constable Poppenhagen and, instead stopped in Farmer Handy's, a quarter of a mile from the scene of the murder; that on Sunday afternoon he had been seen lurking on the road between Babbitt's and the Reed house and when observed drew his cap over his face to conceal his features; that he did not stop at Poppenhagen's; that it took him four hours to go from Babbitt's to Handy's, a distance of less than one mile; that he can not account for his whereabouts in the meantine, and finally that Mr. Babbitt's gun, which that gentleman had left loaded in his barn, was found yesterday morning empty, with the marks of powder and smell of the same material, showing that the weapon had been but recently discharged.

These facts go to show that Frank had secretly stolen the gun-from Babbitt's barn, committed the crime, sneaked back to Bab-bitt's, put the gun-in-its accustomed place, and then, at 10:30 o'clock at night, woke up the Handy household and slept in their home that night. The fatal shot was fixed at 8:30 o'clock. There was sufficient time between that hour and the hour at which he arrived at Handy's to enable him to return to Babbitt's, replace the gun and then go to Handy's, the nearest house to the scene of the murder. When he left Handy's Monday morning he took care not to return to the house of the murder, notwithstanding that he had asked

Mr. Babbitt to leave some money there for him, and it was when he was flying in a dif-ferent direction that he was apprehended. The man who killed Chronister knew every inch of the surroundings of the farm, and it is thought that this will be proven at the trial in the district court. The shot which killed Chronister was fired at short range. The muzzle of the gun could not have been more than three inches from the victim's head. The murderer was almost in the range of Mrs. Reed's sight, because the curtain was drawn and the win-dow through which the shot was fired was opposite her. A stranger, if he had desired to escape detection, would never have taken such chances. The opinion of the people in the neighborhood is strongly against Frank, everything pointing toward him as the perpetrator of the YOUNG WOMAN'S DARING.

It Leads to the Capture of a Notorious Burglar.

TOM CARROLL'S CRIME RECORD BROKEN.

He Robs a House in Broad Day Light and Fights a Hundred Pursuers. But is Finally Captured.

The notorious Tom Carroll, who has been arrested for all sorts of crimes, including attempted murder, has added another desperate break to his long record. About 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon he walked boldly into Dr. Ludington's residence, 2008 Burt street, by the front door, went into the dining room, took from the sideboard $75 worth of solid silver speons and napkin rings, bundled them up and started to leave the house with them. he was going out the front door Miss Mary Ludington peared on the scene and grabbed him by the arms and told him to halt and drop the

"No you won't shoot me dead?" exclaimed

Miss Ludington, reaching for the bundle. As she did so she gave Carroll a twist that nearly downed him, and at the same time uttered several piercing screams for help. While people were running to her assistance she gave the desperado what was probably the most surprising tussel of his life. She pinched and pulled his hair in great shape and continued to impede his flight until a crowd of more than lifty people were attracted to the spot. As two men dashed up to the door to give the plucky heroine assistance Carroll gotaway from his fair captor, and seizing a bar of iron that happened to be near his feet he stood off the whole crowd, which now numbered nearly 100 men and boys, swearing he would brain the first person who laid hands on him. Presently he made a dash right on him, Fre-through the through the crowd, swinging his murderous weapon right and left to clear the way. Getting away he struck down the street for a short distance and then jumped a fence into a yard to take a short cut.

While in the yard he discovered a motor car conductor named James Kelly, who had given chase, had caught almost up with him. Wheeling about and throwing one hand into a back pocket as if to draw a revolver, Carroll shouted:

"One step further and vou're a dead man." The dare devil had met his match.

Never stopping for an instant Kelly plunged on and a moment later sprang upon his man, for Carroll was faking as to having a pistol, and had thrown away the bar of iron. But as Kelly sprang upon him Carroll drew a beer bottle from under his coat and struck his pursuer a blow on the chest that knocked him down. While Kelly was regaining his feet Carroll resumed his flight. Then he was overtaken by D. C. Callahan of Fourteenth and Williams street. Callahan had been running a long distance and was nearly winded As he came up Carroll succeeded in felling

But Callahan was out for the man and after chasing him three blocks further grabbed him again. Again did Carroll succeed in landing another terrific blow with the bottle on Callahan, but the latter went at him and the struggle was a terrific one. It ended by Callahan, who is described as doing wonderfully fine work all through it, getting a lock hold on Carroll. As he did so a private detective came up and putting chain come-along on one of roll's wrists shouted to Callai to Callahan

WANAMAKER'S GENEROSITY. The Postmaster General Employs His

Private Funds for Public Use.

Postmaster General Wanamaker is bent on promoting the efficiency of his department if he has to pay the extra expense out of his own pocket. There was much said during the early part of Secretary Whitney's adninistration of the navy department about the generosity of that gentleman and his enterprise. It was reported that Mr. Whitney bought out of his own private funds the things needed about the department which could not be secured through the public channel, and that he went down into his pocket to make good any deficits created by his own enterprise, and in the direction of improvements. Postmaster General Wanamaker has already discounted the enterprise of Mr.

An incident was related today showing one of Mr. Wanamaker's traits of enterprise. When a few weeks ago the country was discussing the incident which befell the timer, Fanz, at Aberdeen, Miss., in connection with the burning of Secretary Proctor in effigy, and there was great anxiety expressed on the part of certain government officials to rescue Fanz from the clutches of the southern fire-eaters and there appeared to be no hope of success, Postmaster General Wanamaker determined to see what his department could do in the matter. The Fanz incident had nothing whatever to do with the postal ser-vice, and of course Mr. Wanamaker knew vice, and of course Mr. Wamanaker knew that any expense to which he night go in rescoing Fanz and bringing him to Washington could not go out of the contingent fund of the postoffice department. He directed that the special arent of the postoffice department covering the district in which is Abeudeen should hant up Fanz and fetch him to Washington. Special agents in the department of justice had been unable to find Fanz, but the postoffice inspector a few days later turned up at the postoffice department with his man. He was taken to the department of his man. He was taken to the department of justice where he made u full statement con-cerning the outrages tafficted upon him, and when about to leave the attorney general was presented with a bill of expenses. General presented with a but of expenses. General Miller said that they were no funds in the department with which the expenses could be liquidated. Mr. Wantmaker then sent a letter to the war department asking Secretary Proctor of the was not a fund in the war department from which the fund in the war department from which the expenses of the special agent in locating Fanz and bringing him to Washington could be paid, as it was an expense effecting the integrity of the government and undoubtedly was in the interest of the people. Secretary Proctor replied that he could not pay the expenses from any fund within his power.

"Please make out, a full bill of expenses to which you have been subjected in locating

"Please make out, a full bill of expenses to which you have been subjected in locating Mr. Fanz and bringing him to Washington," said Mr. Wanaumker, addressing the inspector who did the work. An hour later the bill of expenses was in detail placed in Mr. Wanamaker's hands, and without a moment's hesitation he turned to the stenographer and dictated a check upon his own private funds. The postmaster general signed the check and handed it to the inspector in full liquidation of expenses.

Negotiato St. Louis Suiday morning. Negotia-tions were left in such shape, however, that an agreement will probly be entered into within the next ten days. A proposition from Mr. Holdrege, contemplating the use by both companies of one track between No-braska City and South Omaha, is now under consideration. Mr. Clark took it away with him, promising to return his answer some time this week. If its terms are accepted the B. & M. secures a line from Nebraska City to Plattsmouth, and by sim-ply building a short line between Union and Plattsmouth the Missouri Pacific gets what it wants. it wants. The reservation right-of-way has virtually been abandoned for another equally as de-sirable outside and along the west of that strate outside and drong the west of that tract though it makes the cut off line a little longer. $2,000,000.

The city of Mexico is to have the finest hotel on the American continent, says a St. Louis dispatch to the Chicago Tribune. It is to be erected by a syndicate of Mexican capitalists, and its cost at the lowest estimation will exceed $2,000,000. Of this sum the Diaz government will provide $1,000,000 in the form of a subsidy in addition to granting the free importation of material to be used in the construction. The hotel when completed will be five stories in height and will contain 400 guest chambers built about a court, the dimensions of which will be 100 by 225 feet. It will be constructed of stone quarried seventy miles rom the City of Mexico and its interior finish will be arranged on a scale of Oriental magnificence. The floors will be of mosaic marble and the walls inlaid with Mexican onyx, which takes a remarkable polish, while the woodwork will be of the rarest woods of the republic, including cedar, mahogany and rosewood. The entire structure will be absolutely fireproof, and the outside dimensions will be 450x 420 feet. As an example of the magnificence of the designs it may be stated that it is the intention to expend $35,000 in fitting up the Turkish bath apartments, and the bar and fixtures will require an outlay of $80,000. The rotunda of the hotel will be taken in charge by federal government, and it is the intention to decorate it with precious stones representing historical subjects. Ga., dispatch. Miss Daisy Garnett, who lives at White House, a 'cross-road on the Port Royal & Western Carolina railroad, forty miles from Augusta, while walking on the track at dusk last evening, by the light of her lantern discovered a broken rail. It was time for the up passenger train to roll by, and Miss Garnett ran down the road until she was about three hundred yards away to signal the train. The engineer saw the girl waving a distress signal. The train was brought to a dead halt before the girl was reached. It didn't take long for the story of the danger just ahead to be told and in a short time

Habitual Costiveness Fabitual Costiveness causes derangement of the entire system, and begets diseases that are hazardous to life.
Persons of costive habit are subject to Headache, Defective Memory, Gloomy Forebodings, Nervousness, Fevers, Drowsiness, Irritable Temper and other symptoms, which unfits the sufferer for business or agreeable associations. Regular habit of body alone can correct these evils, and nothing succeeds so well in achieving this condition as Tutt's Pills. By their use not only is the system renovated, but in consequence of the harmonious changes thus created, there pervades a feeling of satisfaction; the mental faculties perform their functions with vivacity, and there is an exhibitation of mind and body, and perfect heart's case that bespeaks the full enjoyment of health.
