"If the new council wants to save the city money, why don't they paint that bridge?" inquired a Main street business man yester day, as he pointed to the Indian creek bridge on that street. "I never drive across it without noticing how badly a coat of paint is needed. It is rusting badly, and if this is al-lowed to continue it won't be long until there will be a call for a new bridge there. There are several iron bridges in the city that are in the same fix. The Police Get After the Dispensers of Contraband Budge and Land a Trio in the Cooler-General News Notes.

Chief of Police Cary has decreed that the orders of the mayor with reference to Sunday closing shall be rigidly enforced, and the indications are that the saloon men will not be long in finding out that he means it. He does not propose to take anybody's word for it, but will depend upon his own eyes for his knowledge. It was stated yesterday that everything was closed up tighter than a drum. Lust evening, however, the head of the force took a notion into his head to do a little intook a notion into his head to do a little investigating through the suburbs. The patrol wagon was ordered out and the chief accompanied by Captain Clough and Officer Martin started on a tour. The first place visited was the saloon kept by John Myers, near the transfer. There was nothing to be seen from the inside, not even a ray of light, to show that any business was being conducted within; in fact, it had the appearance of a vacant and deserted house. a vacant and descried trance was effected, and when on the inside place wore an entirely different aspect, was lighted up, and the proprietor was dis-sing drinks to a thirsty crowd with a libral hand. and the drive was continued. The next place was John Crow's joint on Lower Broadway. Crow was found out side on the watch, and explained the presence of the crowd inside by stating that they lived there. The Central house, a block below, was next honored with a call. The proprietor, S. E. Nutting, was very much surprised at the unexpected visit, and was so completely flustrated that he even forgot to deposit his gun behind the bar as Crow had done, and it was later found on his person, to give rise to a charge of carrying concealed weapons. The trio were taken to the station and locked up.

Easter Sunday.

Yesterday was one of the quietest Sundays that the Bluff's has known for a long itine. The streets, however, were far from present ing a descried appearance, as there were far more pedestrians and buggies in sight than is usual but everything was orderly and there was no disturbance to mar the beauty of the day. The weather was far too pleasant for anyone to remain indoors, and there was a general outpouring in all parts of the city. There seemed to be a universal desire to move about, and the crowds that througed the moter trains were only a small proportion of those who were out to enjoy the day. The mayor's order with reference to the closing of billiard halls and card rooms was rigidly enforced. There were, as usual, a number who were anxious to find "a game," out their search was not generally successful. There were a few games of "crib" in private rooms in the hotels, but public playing did not prosper. A few of the old time sports began to collect early in the day in one of the recently closed gambling rooms, but the po-lice caught on and the scheme miscarried. It was satisfactorily demonstrated that the Sun-day closing law can be enforced without difficulty if there is any disposition to do so, There was more or less kicking because Manawa had not "opened" for the season, and there was a general demand to know whether or no trains were running to the lake. When it was known that they were not and Manager Reed's reason was given, much satisfaction was expressed by those who desire to see the lake prosper, but the ounders howied.

It seems that Manager Reed is determined to give Manawa a better name this year than it has ever had heretofore, and for this reason he insists that they must start out right. Said he: "If I start the trains now, before we have taken any steps to regulate our new town, it will hurt the lake for the entire season. These fellows who are shut out of the saloons here in the city would go to the lake for a time, and they would have it. The better element would say at once, 'Well, if that is the way they are going to run things, I will stay away,' and the lake would suffer for the whole summer, even if a radical change was made later. For this reason I am waiting until we get everything arranged." waiting until we get everything arranged."

The Day in the Churches.

The phenomenally beautiful wreaths yes-terday and the unusually interesting programmes prepared for the observance of Easter Sunday left no excuse for churchgoers to remain at home. The consequence was that every church in the city was crowded at all the various services. A greater interest than usual was generally manifested in the observance of the Easter services, and there was not a church in the city whose altar was not decorated with flowers and where a programme of unusal innowers and where a programme of unusal in-terest was not prepared.

One of the most important events of the day was the dedication of the Twenty-ninth street Baptist church, which occurred at a p. m. The building is a very handsome little edifice fronting on Twenty-ninth street and Avenue B, and has been built to supply the Avenue H, and has been built to supply the necessity for more churches in the new portions of the city between Council Bluffs and Omaha, which are so rapidly settling up. It makes the Sixth Baptist church in the city It is largely the result of the labors of Dr. Cooley, paster of the First Baptist church, who started the enterprise last September. The first contribution towards it came from T J. Evans, who gave the lot with the provision that the building should not cost less tha that the building should not cost less than $1,000. The next came from the American Home Mission society of the church which agreed to give the final $500 provided the building should cost $1,200. With this encouragement Dr. Cooley and a number of the other Baptists of the city went to work, and up to the present time have expended or contracted to expend $1,050, and the building is only finished in the rough, with brown walls and common chairs for seats. Of this amount only $200 remained to be raised yesterday. The church has a seating capacity of between 250 and 300, and when finished will be a credit to the organization and city. Every seat was a prayer by Rev. T. F. Thickstun of the which constituted the largest part of the propram. Dr. Haigh spoke upon the subject of the "Gospel and Free Government;" Dr.

Woods upon the "Gospel and the Modern City;" Rev. Lamar on "The Power of the Charch in the Community," Shorter addresses were made by Rev. Reichenbach of the Scandinavian Baptist church, and Rev.
Riordan, state missionary. To him was assigned the duty of appealing to the congregation to lift the remaining $200 indebtedness, which he did so effectively that the amount was raised in a few moments. The church was then formally dedicated. No regular

The Easter services in the First Mathodist church were very beautiful. The Interior was handsomely trimmed with flowers and foliage, plants, Easter lilies and white and red roses predominating. All the pows and the aisles were filled before the services began, and many were turned away. The program consisted of a responsive service by the Sunday school, as the date fell upon the regular children's missionary day of the church. The service consequently was conducted alular children's missionary day of the church.

At the Congregational church the floral decorations were very pleasing. Outside of the pulpit was an arch of green, bearing the words in golden letters, "He is Risen." #### MINNETONKA'S GLORY FADING. The Waters of the Beautiful Minnesota

Lake Constantly Receding. Unless something is done promptly the beauty of the famous Lake Minnetonka will be lost for at least several seasons, says a St. Paul special to the Chicago Herald. Among the 12,000 lakes that sparkle like diamonds in the emerald setting of Minnesota herbage Minnetonka is the loveliest, and its fame has gone abroad over the country. Its shores are peopled in the summer season by tourists from the east and south to the number of thousands. Thirty-two hotels dot its sinuous shore line, seven of which will each accomodate 400 guests. The heavily wooded shores are ernamented by hundreds of villas and in the heated months St. Paul and Minneapolis people pour out by thousands to enjoy the like breezes. Minnetonka is about eighteen miles long, with an average width of four miles, but the arms, bays and inlets are so numerous that the shore line spreads out over a length of 180 miles. The 180 miles. lake is drained by a creek, which, after tumbling over the poetic Minnehaha falls below Minneapolis, pours into the the Mississippi near Fort Snelling. The cause of the sudden alarm is in the steady recession of the waters of the lake. During the summer of 1880 the shrinkage was four feet, and even the past winter showed a further loss of eighteen inches. The county and park commissioners are nonplussed, for, after damming the outlet, the water still receded and left the dam high and dry. only possible explanation is that the dry seasons of the past have left the sandy soil in the condition of a sponge, and the waters of the Minnetonka will be absorbed until the normal condition is reached. A new dam will be constructed pectations of their promoters. In all the long catalogue of Mr. Glad-stone's brilliant reforms there is none of more momentous consequence than the repeal of the paper duties. And there is none perhaps which gave him greater trouble. His enemics were often those of his own household. Lord Palmerston had no enthusiasm whatever for the measure, and Lord John Russell was lukewarm. On the other hand Mr. Gladstone owed much to the enlightened support of at least one conservative, Sir Edward Bulwer Lytton. For a long time in this great undertaking men had to walk by the inner light, for they could not find sufficient guidance in the party principles, and many walked very much awry. All sorts of dreadful conse quences were predicted of the reform. and one in particular, that it would flood the country with literature as nasty as it was cheap. It has not had precisely that effect, for in the former quality we have nothing to compare with some

Over their salad and beer the minstrels began to talk of old times, but their conversation did not interest a party of Yale seniors at an adjoining table until Benedict happened to remark:

"I first became a bones man about twenty-two years ago, and I'll never forget what a time I had of it. It had al-ways been the ambition of my life, and when I finally got there you can't imagine how happy I felt.

The words attracted the attention of the Yale men, and after a moment's conversation, one of them approached Bene diet and said: "Excuse me, but did I hear you say you were a Bones man?'-

"Yes, sir," was the reply. "I have been a bones man for the past twentytwo years." The Yale man then did something which Benedict could not fathom, and as the minstrel sat in silent astonishment the senior continued: "I guess there must be some mistake. You don't belong to Bones."

"Don't belong to bones! What in the world are you driving at, if 1 may ask the question."

"Nothing, only I made a mistake, that was all, and the senior returned to his seat. But the mystery could not go without explanation, and a few moments afterwards the minstrel and the Yale man agreed to compare notes.
