The Driving Park Deal.

Several of the stockholders of the Union Driving park were seen yesterday regarding the proposition of certain Omaha parties to take a half interest in the park, as outlined exclusively in yesterday's BEE. Of those interviewed not one was opposed to the plan. but on the contrary were heartily in favor of it. Said one of them: "The only trouble will be to get hold of the property at a reasonable figure. Some of our stockholders have refused for months to put in another cent in the way of making repairs and have refused to give racing meetings or any kind of entertainments for fear they would have to put up something out of their own pockets. They have been crazy to sell out and have almost prayed for somebody to come along and take the property off their hands at what it cost them. Now that there is a chance to sell out they have advanced their prices and some of them want fully 50 per cent more than they did a month ago. They are unwilling to help boom the park themselves, but if someone else will do it they are ready to sit still and get what bene fit they can. I have never cared to sell my stock, but if that is the only way in which these Omaha folks can get an interest here I will sell it at just what it cost me and a fair rate of interest, although I prefer to hold it These men who are pushing the scheme are all wealthy and are financially able to put the park on a paying basis. They are interested in the Omaha park, but the lease has nearly expired and the track, which is only half a mile long, is not as good as it should be. What they want to do is to organize an association similar to the Twin City Jockey club of Minneapolis and St. Paul and run it in a manner that will not only pay the stockhold-ers but will creditably advertise our twin cities of the Missouri valley. MOUND BUILDING IN NEW YORK. Valuable Archæological Discoveries

Made by a Civil Engineer. valuable archæological discovery, says the New York Commercial Advertiser, was recently made by Alexander Crawford Chenoweth, an engineer on the Croton aqueduct, who lives on the Kingsbridge road, near In-wood street. Three mounds in the fields opposite his house excited his interest as an amateur archaeologist, and he de termined to examine them. He found flint arrowheads and several flat, square stones on the largest mound, and on digging unearthed a human skeleton a few feet below the surface. It was surrounded by broken bits of pottery.

Mr. Chenoweth sent an account of the discovery to Prof. F. W. Putnam, of Harvard university, who replied that the discovery was of great value, and instructing him how to proceed. Within the last few days Mr. Chenoweth has exhumed six skeletons and a quantity of broken pottery and stone implements, and has found a grave with seventeen more skeletons. The graves have been cut into the Each skeleton was found lying on its back, with arms extended and hands crossed. One of the skeletons was that faman about seven feet six inches high. The skeletons were evidently those of Indians. The pottery had been broken to render it useless, if dug up by Indians, and some of the articles were simply roughly shaped stones, made to do duty instead of the more valuable implements. The mound in which the remains were found was about twentyfive feet high and one hundred feet in Dakota Farmers Don't Like It. A large majority of the farmers of North Dakota, says a dispatch from Larimore, are indignant over the alleged charity of the business men of St. Paul and Minneapolis, and it is the intention of most of them to refuse the seed wheat purchased with the $300,000 guarantee fund raised in the Twin Cities. They look on the arrangement as a scheme concocted by the elevator companies, the millers and bankers to sell wheat at 25 cents a bushel more than it is worth in the market and get 12 per cent interest on their money under the agreement. A needy farmer must pay $1 for every bushel he secures for seed out of the first money he receives on his crop because the seed-wheat loan becomes a first lien and is ample security to those who furnish the wheat if the yield is even five bushels an acre.

The whole affair is considered doubly an outrage because the North Dakota farmers were last fall forced to have this same wheat graded No. 2, and received 50 cents a bushel for it. Now they are asked to receive it from the elevator companies as No. 1 hard and pay $1 per bushel for it with interest at the rate of 12 per cent. In many communities the more thrifty farmers will aid those who are needy, while in others there is a disposition to sow no grain at all rather than submit to this new species of rob-

AIMED AT PRODUCE GAMBLERS

What the Committee on Agriculture Has in Mind to Do.

GROSS WRONG TO THE FARMERS.

How the Natural Law of Supply and Demand is Made Inoperative-The Regulation of Adulterated Food Traffic.

WASHINGTON, April 14 .- [Special to THE to THE BEE.] - A day will shortly be given in the house for the consideration of measures from the committee on agriculture. It is understood that Chairman Funston intends to first push to a conclusion the Butterworth bill prohibiting speculation in the future delivery of farm products. This is undoubtedly the most important measure in the interest of farmers before congress. Chairman Funston and in fact all of the committee on agriculture, are in earnest about this measure becoming a law at the present session of congress, and should its consideration be reached there is no doubt of its adoption. Unquestionably speculators are largely responsible for the prices paid for farm produce, and it is believed that the adoption of the bill to prohibit speculation in the future delivery of cereals, cattle and other articles produced by farmers, will have the effect of immediately bringing up prices for these articles of commerce. The glut in the markets which is causing a depression among farmers is producing great concern in congress, and relief in this direction is of much more importance just now than anything else. Chairman Funston in an interview with your correspondent today said: "Supply and demand lie at the base of all legitimate trade and commerce. The function of congress is to manipulate the supply and to take it from the place of production and distribute it along the channels of trade to points of consumption, and each citizen who is entitled to the respect of the community is engaged in some manner in the field of production or in that of legitimate trade and commerce. Those who play with the markets in such a way as to make fictitious prices for articles really existing by reprobating the conditions of supply and demand are a curse to legitimate commerce, and should be restrained. The farmer gives his honest labor to the production of articles which are necessary in every day living, and it is a crime for speculators to trifle with the highest interests of the farmers, even for a con-sideration such as is given speculators. There is no boubt whatever that the bulls and bears on the market join hands in keep ing prices down, and there is never a high market from which the farmers benefits, ex-cept when a corner is made, and the history of our commerce shows that there are a hun dred depressions in the market to one 'cor ner.' A lull in the market at first takes the place of the work of the bear, and there is a great depression. The Butterworth bill will put a stop to what-are termed 'puts' and 'calls,' which mean options permitting the speculator to buy or sell at will. Under the present arrangement of speculators, a lot of gamblers can get together and fix prices upon farm products in such a way as to put the legitimate producers' supply at their mercy. It is impossible, under the existing condi-tions for a farmer to figure in advance, and disappointment more than short crops result in the downfall of our friends in the rural apply and demand to regulate the prices We talk about farmers producing a greater variety of crops in order to avoid a glut in certain staples. The farmers may turn their attention to the production other articles than these, but farm products are nearly all sold through the boards of trade, and the big deal-ers can easily get together and in spite of the volume of production say just what the prices shall be. The committee on agriculture has beside the option bill a measure creating a labratory under the department of agriculture which shall have jurisdiction over our food articles, so that nothing can be manufactured or sold which is deleterious to health, and everything adulterated must be sold for what it really is; also the Conger pure lard bill, which taxes compound lard and requires it to be sold under a special brand; but to my mind, the highest interest to the farmer is involved in the bill which prohibits speculation upon the future delivery of farm products, and permits the supply and demand to regulate the prices of the markets The option bill covers the entire field of demand for articles produced on the farm, while the measures affect only stated articles, of more or less importance."

Mr. Funston is undoubtedly correct in his

"To my mind, the first act of congress should be to put a stop to this speculation in farm produce and permit the natural law of premises. If he succeeds in securing the adoption of the option bill, he will make himself famous with the farming interests of the United States. Besides this, there is a divis-ion in the house on the other two measures now pending, which will bring apout a discussion of the details resulting in the defeat of at least one of the bills, that effecting the compound, because it involves the interests of the south, which produces cotton seed oil, while there appears to be no division of consequence upon the question of the option bill. Nearly every man in congress concedes that the measure against speculation in farm products should become a law, while not only every cotton producing state in the south is dead against the Conger pure lard bill, but the organization of Knights of Labor and the people who are compelled to buy the cheapest articles of food. Messrs. McClommy of North Carolina and Morgan of Mississippi, members of the committee on agriculture, have submitted a very interesting and imhave submitted a very interesting and important report against the Conger lard bill. Undoubtedly they occupy the popular position with the poor people of the country, and the entire south, which is interested in the production of cotton seed oil, the latter interest being deeply involved in this measure, the destruction of which is threatened in the event of its adoption. These gentlemen con-tend in their minority report that the real object of this bill is to legislate the manufactur-ing and sale of compound lard in this country out of existence. They show that compound lard is fully as good if not better than slaugh-ter house lard, and that since it sells at a lower price it is the popular food article with the common people, and that inasmuch as it is sold for just what it is, there being a special brand upon it, to drive it out of the mar-ket would be unjust and criminal. There has been all winter and is now a lobby here representing the slaughtering house interests, and it has been maintained for several years. working for the adaption of this bill, and the report of Messrs. McClommy and Morgan shows that the demand for the passage of this measure is a demand from a rival business interest, and that there is no demand whatever from the consumers. It is proposed in the bill to tax compound lard and place it under the edious supervision of the internal revenue department, which will prejudice its sale, subject it to a rate of taxation which will compel it to be sold for a price as high as the slaughter house fard, and have the effect of driving it out of the market. Representa-tives of the southern states and organized labor will make a fight against this measure when it comes up in the house which it is beleved cannot be resisted, and which will be the effect of defeating the proposition, fo that it will come up at some future day in a gen-eral bill covering the entire subject of food adulteration. CONGRESSIONAL PROCEEDINGS. An Attempt to Ignore the Civil Service Law Creates a Breeze. WASHINGTON, April 17 .- In the senate today Mr. Cullom presented a petition signed by many citizens of Ohio, Illinois, Iowa, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Michigan, Colorado, Missourl, Kansas, Arkansas, North and South Dakota and Washington praying that sugar, umber, satt, binding twine and materials entering into its composition be admitted free of duty and that a cut of at least 50 per cent be made on woolen, cotton and linen fabrics. Mr. Plumb presented a resolution of the Newton, Kan., board of trade protesting against the imposition of any duty on orea favoring the negotiation of a reciprocal treaty with that country. Among the petitions and memorials presented was one from the Charleston board of trade protesting against the passage of the Butterworth anti-option and future bill. Among the bills introduced was one by Mr. Regan, proposing an amendment to the constitution for the election of senators by a vote of the people.

A number of bills making appropriations for public buildings were then passed, among them being one for Mankato, Minn., for $150,000. The house bill for the appointment and re-tirement of John C. Fremont as major general in the army was passed.

The house bill to transfer the revenue cutter service from the treasury to the navy was then taken up for consideration.

Mr. Sherman opposed the bill, which was laid over, and the senate proceeded to consider the house joint resolution for the appointment of thirty medical examiners for the pension bureau, without reference to the ivil service law. Mr. Faulkner moved to strike out the provision taking the appointments from the civil service.

Mr Cockrell said he had hoped some republican—the party of civil service reform—would have raised his head in defense of the civil service. Mr. Cockrell taunted the republi-can senators with a lack of sincerity and said can senators with a lack of sincerity and said the commissioner of pensions is now tramp-ling under foot the civil service law and rules approved by the president, in which he is aided and abetted by the secretary of the interior. If the republicans in-tend to trample the civil service law under foot it should be done in a bold, manly way and not by skulking be-hind this joint resolution. He charged that hind this joint resolution. He charged that the object of the pending measure was to de stroy and break down the civil service law. The vote on Mr. Faulkner's motion resulted: Yeas—18, nays—22. Not a quorum.

Messrs. Aldrich, Hoar and Sanders (republicans) voted in the affirmative with the

Mr. Hoar moved to amend the amendment by inserting the words "Under regulations to be prescribed by the president of the United States," These examiners, he said, were to be appointed only for a brief service—an emergency—and this was an additional reason why the general civil service rules should not apply. It was perfectly clear to him that the apply. It was perfectly clear to him that the record of no party, no president, and, he, suspected, no senator could be found absolutely in accord with the strict letter of their declarations in regard to civil service reform.

Mr. Plumb hoped the senator from Massachusetts would limit his confessions to himself and commented upon the "combination" which seemed to exist between the democratic party and the senator from Massachusetts. The bill, he said, simply put the whole question of appointments in the president's power. It did not seem to him that the bill should have excited debate. The appointments were merely temporary ones.

After considerable further discussion Mr Hoar modified his amendment to read: "Examination for appointment of these examiners shall be under the regulations prescribed by the president." This was agreed to yeas 38, nays 5-and without finishing the bill the senate adjonrned

IT WAS INTIMIDATION. Only a Stuffed Lamb With a Dog's Tail Glued On.

It was in University place. A boy, preceded by a dog, was crossing by one of the paths, when he encountered a woman, preceded by a smaller dog, says the New York Sun. The two canines halted. So did their respective owners. The animals looked at each other fixedly from a distance of six feet each with his tail waving over his back, and each uttering low growls. "Call off your dog!" exclaimed the woman, as she saw the situation. "Call off yours," replied the boy. "Can't you restrain your dog?" she demanded, in a high key.

"He ain't doin' nuthin'." "Yes he is; he's intimidating my Fido. "But your Fide is givin' him sass. ain't goin' to restrain my dog when your dog is a-savin' he kin lick him with one hand tied behind him." "Here, Fido; haven't you more care for your reputation than to face such a low-down dog as that? Come here, this instant! I shall punish you for this!"

"Here, Shakspere," said the boy, as he gave his dog a light kick, "you let that animal alone. You tackled one just like him last fall and you had indiges-tion for two months. He ain't alive; he's just pretendin' to be. He's a stuffed lamb with a dog's tail glued on, and the woman works him with a string. Come along with me and I'll show you a reg'lar live dog down here.'

HAS SOME UNLIKELY STORIES. The Rev. Robert Collyer Tells Why He Cannot Believe All the Bible.

The little handful of Hollanders who gathered in the meeting room at Eighteenth street and Blue Island avenue last evening heard the Rev. Robert Collyer tell in a most charming off-hand manner the story of his break with the Methodist church, says the Chicago Tribune. It was a chat rather than a sermon, and Mr. Collyer sat comfortably in a chair on the platform with his legs crossed while he said: "I remember more than twenty years ago when I was a Methodist preacher and a pretty good one, too, if I do say it, who shouldn't, going to a protracted meeting and hearing a young man preaching on the text: 'God is Love.' I'd been worried for a long time about the way the Methodists viewed God. They made the Almighty such a terror that you couldn't understand his love. The young man whom I speak of was out of a theological seminary and he had it all right. He talked of the necessity of accepting religion right away. He said: There's that fire, I might hold my hand in it for five min-utes and my suffering would give not even a faint idea of what the sinner suffors who dies in his sins.' I said to my-self: 'I won't stand it. It's blasphemy against the most high.' I began to grumble, for I wasn't brave at first, and then I was summoned before the general conference. I said I didn't believe in total depravity. There's good and bad in all of us. We've got to cultivate the good and put our heels down on the bad. I've been happy in the Unitarian church. Mr. Collyer said everything in the bible was not to be taken for true. little grandson, when he heard the story of Jonah and the whale, said: 'I don't containing lead imported from Mexico and think that it is a likely story,' and it isn't. We can't believe these things. I was puzzled over the story of Joshua having the sun to stand still at Ajalon while he hammered the poor fellows that he had no right to hammer, and that other one of the ram's horn that battered down the wall. They may do for the meeting house, but they wouldn't do for the world. So I concluded that the bible is made up of fine gold and dross. As we discover the dross we regret, but we take the gold to our hearts and crush it."

"You believe," he concluded, "in honesty. You believe in standing by the You believe first, last and always that God is love. In the fullness of time every human being will be saved. may be long, long years for some of them who go the wrong way, but through the mercy of God they will all reach home."

Whisky Kills a Boy.

John Flynn, thirteen years old, who lived with his father, a laborer, of the same name, in the basement of a small frame building at No. 95 Watts street, died there early Tuesday evening of al coholism, says the New York World. The boy had been in the habit of tippling for some time. cured 10 cents on Tuesday and spent it for a soda water bottle of whisky, which he obtained at one of the numerous saloons near his home. drank the whisky and became intoxicated. He was found a snort time after wards unconscious in a small closet, He died before a doctor could be summoned Deputy Coroner Jenkins investigated the case, but was unable to learn where the boy got the whisky.

The boy's father said that his son had been sickly ever since birth and had for years been given whisky and milk as a stimulant. For the past year or two he has been taking a soda-water bottle of whisky daily and had purchased it with his parents' consent. He was in the habit of getting the whisky at one of the cheap saloons in the neighborhood.

A Negro Butts an Ox to Death. To win a wager of $5 "Big Six," negro pugilist, butted an ox to death. says a St. Louis dispatch to the Chicago Tribune. He caught the animal by the horns with his hands and butted it between the eyes. Four times in rapid succession the negro's head struck the ox squarely in forehead, causing the animal to reel and stagger. Drawing back a full arm's-length he ran his head against that of the ox with the force of a batter ing ram, knocking the four-legged brute to the ground, the ox dving inside of five minutes. There was a small lump on the negro's head after the butting feat, but he suffered no pain. "Big Six stands five feet ten inches, weighs 240 pounds, and the muscles of his arms, shoulders and chests stand out in knots

Prohibition Reacted Hard.

A remarkable condition of affairs has been brought about here by the recent election, says a Weston, W. Va., dispatch to the New York Sun. A month ago a prohibition council and mayor were elected. Their refusal to grant liquor licenses cut down the estimated revenue for the year nearly 50 per cent. The town had made heavy contracts for lighting and improvements, and the prohibition council foresaw a heavy de ficit. In order to escape the difficulty the entire council has resigned within the last two weeks, and nobody can be persuaded to fill their places. The town is without a government and without revenues, and meanwhile the sale of liquor goes merrily on.

A Plucky Lady Journalist.

A young lady journalist in London, who was seeking admission to the re-porters' gallery in the house of commons, cored an important point in securing the admission from the speaker, through Mr. Bradlaugh, that there was no law or order forbidding the admission of women to the gallery. so much pluck in pushing her claim that she has received four requests for "interviews" in the interest of other journals. one request for her portrait for publica-tion and one offer of marriage.

The Effect of Coffee. According to the Lancet, Dr. Luderitz has recently made a number of observations on the destructive power of offee upon various microbes. He found that the organisms all died in a longer or shorter period. In one series of experiments authrax bacilli were destroyed in three hours, anthrax spores in four weeks, cholera bacilli in four hours, and the streptococcus of crysipelas in one day. Good and bad coffee produce precisely similar effects. The phonograph is to be utilized in preserving the language of the Passamaquoddy Indians by a plan arranged by the Massachusetts society.
