No Change in the Situation Regarding Unlicensed Saloons.

ALL OF THEM RUNNING WIDE OPEN.

An Easier Feeling Now That the Threatened Strike Failed to Materialize-Police Detail for May-Notes and Personals.

There was no change in the saloon situation vesterday. All the places were running as usual, although no licenses have been granted. But two places that contemplated going into business for the present year are closed. One of these is Frank Havlek, who has taken no steps to secure a license pending the result of the annexation election. Havlek had a disastrous experience at Wahoo once in running up against the Slocumb law and wants no more fines in his. The other is D. L. Mc-Gucken, who intends to run a bar in connec-tion with his hotel on Q street, but will not open it for business until his license has been Twenty-one saloonkeepers have paid the city treasurer the $500 required for salour licenses, but the other thirty-nine are holding buck in hopes of being allowed to pay the first quarterly installment only. The license committee is hard at work going over the applications without finding any that are signed by the required thirty resident freeholders. The saloon men are now realizing the folly o allowing anybody and everybody to sign their applications through the medium of some rustler who only seeks signers to the extent of getting the required thirty without reference to property qualifications.

Many of the saloonmen now admit that Sunday closing is inevitable and even the most ardent anti-annexationists say that i must come. Mayor Sloane is being criticized in some quarters for his indifference in the matter of allowing new saloons to openly run without the semblance of authority from the city or state to do business. Monday night's meeting of the city council promises to be a

The Strike That Never Came, Centrary to the wishes of some South Omaha people the packing house and stock yards employes were all on duty yesterday as usual and the chances of a strike have gone glimmering at least for the present. The action of the stock yards and packing houses men in Chicago has set at rest any doubts as to the actions of the South Omaha men Here there was never any definite talk of a strike and all the talk of it emanated from people who had no authority whatever to talk for the men. There is an easier feeling today among business men although there was at no time any cause for uncasines There will be no strike in South Omaha.

NORTH VS PLATTE COUNTY.

Case of Considerable Interest to Omaha Citizens. The state supreme court yesterday ren dered a decision in the case of North vs the county of Platte, the original injunction being dissolved and dismissed. The opinion was delivered by Justice Maxwell. This case was one in which a number of Omaha people and Omaha institutions, parichlarly Creighton college, were largely in Hon. J. M. Woolworth, who represented one of the defendants, the trustees of the Episcopal church, was asked for a full statement of the case. Mr. Woolworth stated the case as follows:

Mr. Woolworth stated the case as follows:

"This case was a bill of equity brought by one North, a taxpayer of Piatte county, against the county officers for an injunction to restrain them from collecting taxes to pay the interest on these bonds. This injunction was asked for on the ground that the proposition which had been submitted to the people was in the alternative, that is, the county were to be authorized to issue bonds to one or the other of two railroad communics.

the other of two railroad companies.

'The holders of the bonds were not made parties to the suit, but the state held $35,000 of the bonds and applied to be made party de-fendant, to defend and maintain the validity of the bonds.

"The defense set up was that the state was a bona fide holder of the bonds, and if the plaintiff had any just grounds for questioning the validity of the bonds he should have done before the bonds were issued.

"The testimony taken in the case was very voluminous, and the first argument was had in November last. The court asked for a re-argument of the case, and this was had about argument of the case, and this was had about two months ago. The decision of the court was that the bonds were voidable, and if any proper party had applied for an injunction before the bends had been certified to by the state officials and sold to bona fide holders, the issue would have been void, but as North and the county authorities stood by and let the bonds be sold to income transfers they had waived all o impocent purchasers, they had waived all bjections, and the bonds were therefore alid and must be paid by the county.

"Besides the holding of the state, Creigh-on college holds $37,000 of the bonds, the estate of Mrs. Sarah E. Creighton holds $12,000, the trustees of the Episcopal church $5,000 and a widow in Lincoln whose name I cannot recall, holds $10,000. Of the amount held by the state $15,000 belongs to the school

"The county authorities claimed they were not in sympathy with North and took no action to help him defend his suit.

"The finding of the supreme court is final as there is no appeal."

HE THIRSTED FOR GORE.

Frank McCarthy Plants a Bullet in Chris Shaw's Leg. "Give me a revolver d-n quick, for there is going to be a murder tonight, and you will read all about it in the paper tomorrow morn-

These were the words Frank McCarthy uttered as he rushed about the streets at 11 clock last night.

There had been trouble. During the early evening McCarthy, who is a bartender at the Turf exchange on South Thirteenth street, and Chris Shaw, a bartender at the Drum, on Farnam street, met and some hot words passed between them.

A couple of nours later they again came to gether in Jack Wood's saloon, on Fifteenth street, and the quarrel was renewed. Me-Carthy was under the influence of liquor and was very abusive.

During the quarrel becaught hold of Shaw, tore his clothes and dragged him about the room, until at last Shaw, becoming angry, struck McCarthy a strong blow in the face, knocking him down. It was when he arose and went out into the street that he promised to do the murdering act. He visited the Merchants' saloon, where he tried to borrow a revolver, telling the bartender, Peter Boase, that he was going to kill a man, but there he was unsuccessful. An hour later he returned to Woods saloon with a revolver in his hand, and with-out saying a word walked up to where Shaw was standing and fired, the ball entering and odging in the fleshy part of the right leg, st above the knee. A crowd soon gathered, but not soon rough to prevent McCarthy from being mocked down and terribly pounded about the face and head.

About this time Officer Boyle arrived, placing McCarthy under arrest and taking him to the central station, where his injuries were looked after by Dr. Gapen. Shaw was taken to his room in the Redick lock, on Farnam street, and a physician called. The bullet was removed and the wound, which is a painful, though not a dangerous one, was dressed.

Prior to last night the two men had been the best of friends, and the shooting undoubtedly came about from the fact that McCarthy was drunk and was looking for a row Pierre, South Dakota.

REYNOLDS IDENTIFIED. Almost Positive Proof That He Shot

Young Nistel. The police are now positive that suspec James Reynolds, who has been in the city jail for two days, is one of the parties to the shooting of young Nistel. Yesterday afternoon he made a partial con fession to Chief Scavey, saying that he was present when the shot was fired, but claims he revolver was in the hands of his partner, whose name he refuses to divulge.

During the day I. W. Hall, an insurance agent, with offices in the Paxton block, called at the station and identified Reynolds. Mr. Hall was passing along the street the night of the shooting and was just opposite when the two thieves turned on Nistel. He got a good view of their faces, and as he walked down the corridor of the jul, when he reached the cell in which Reynolds was lodged he stopped and point-ing to that man, said: "That is the party." The other man is said to have fied to Coun ell Bluffs, where he is now being shadowed by the Omaha detectives, with a strong probbility that he will be arrested today.

The condition of William Nistel continued to improve until yesterday, but during the afternoon he grew worse and at midnight was ery weak.

The attending physician last night stated that he still had hopes of the young man's re-covery, but the chances were most decidedly against it. As yet no attempt has been mad to remove the builet.

POWER IN POVERTY.

China is the Land Where the Beggar is King.

In the course of a recent article the Chinese Times of Tien-Tsin remarks that the practical power of poverty is perhaps greater in China than anywhere else; the beggar there is king. It is a distinct force in politics, and of this there have been many examples in re-cent times. The greatest of all the statesmen of the last thirty years, and the one who is the least known, owing to his early death, was Hu Linyi, viceroy of the Hu Kuang during the time of the Taiping rebellion. It was he who thought out and organized the scheme for the suppression of that rebellion, for which his lieutenants, Tseng Kwo-fan and his brother, Tso Tsung-tang, Peng Yulin and Li Hung Chang reaped the glory. He was distinguished by his poverty, as was Tseng Kwo-fan himself, Peng Yulin and Tso.

These men wielded immense influence over the counsels of the state, chiefly on account of their-poverty, which in a Chinese official is a test of probity, an in-fluence which owes much of its strength se the attachment of the people to every man who comes unspotted through the severe temptations of Chinese official life. Everything may be forgiven in China to a poor official. The greatest blunders of Tso Tsung-tang were condoned and no eccentricity of policy or brusquerie of deportment was able permanently to diminish his influence. The greatest living example, however, is the redoubtable Viceroy Chang Chintung. who owes much to the vacuous condition of his purse. "No doubt he is by nature courageous, but his courage derives its daily sustenance from the consciousness that he has nothing to fear. No treacherous subordinate or blackmailing cen-sor can find a hole in his armor of proof, and he holds his head erect and defiant. triumphing even over his own mistakes and shortcomings.

"Who but he would have dared to allow confusion in the finances of his government, and then to coolly ask the board of revenue to pass his accounts en bloe? Only his poverty and purity could have so emboldened him. To such an official reforms are possible, because he has not a host of hungry clansmen to provide for out of the public resources, nor any personal interests of his own or his subordinates to conserve. The court does not conceal its irritation at the ways of the imperious little man, but it does not say very much, for the country is with him. He may proceed from one audacious failure to another and may spend the state's money virtually as he pleases, but he will go very far indeed before he will seriously compromise his his position in the country. fortune with the genial levity of one who is not in her debt and he has no future favors to bespeak; he is a veritable power in the state, resting on the threefold basis of his pen, his patriotism and his poverty; but the greatest of these is Strength of the Oyster and Limpet. It seems that though the oyster is one of the most tremendously powerful creatures known for its weight it isn't so strong by a good deal as the common limpet, and the Venus verrucosa, a Mediterranean cockleshell, beats the limpet. A distinguished naturalist of Brighton, Lawrence Hamilton, who sets the Venus verrucosa's strength at 2,071 times its weight, says: "At Folkestone, by means of accurate appliances. I found that the common seashore limpet, which without its shell weighed a fraction less than half an ounce, required, when pulled according to its plane of adhesion a force exceeding sixty-two pounds to remove it from its grip upon the local rock, or up-ward of 1,984 times its own dead weight. Taking the atmospheric pressure at 14.7 pounds to the square inch, this would account for 35.28 pounds, or little more than half the power exercised in the air by this sea-snail, which, acting upon immersed objects in the water, would, of have pulled a much greater weight than that of sixty-two pounds. The force required to open an oyster appears to be 1,3194 times the weight of the shelless creature.

A retired plumber thus gives a point in the Sanitary Engineer for the relief of householders: "Just before retiring at night pour into the clogged pipe enough liqid soda lye to fill the 'trap' bent part of the pipe. Be sure that no water runs into it until the next morning. During the night the lye will convert all the offal into soft soap, and the first current of water in the morning will wash it away and clear the pipe clean as new.

She Wouldn't Be Shaken. "You want to give me the shake, do you?" The words were uttered in a very high key, and the tone was considerably higher They could not fail to attract attention, and pedestrians on North First street stopped to see what was the matter. It was about 7 o'elock last evening. A young man named Lloyd Forgraves, who is well known to the police, was endeavoring to get away from a notorious prostitute, but she evidently was not disposed to have it that way. As the young man started to run he caught a stiff left-hander behind the ear, and his new spring hat landed in the gutter. His head was in the hat when he struck the paving, and it was some time before he managed to regain his feet, which meandered toward Indian creek. The woman waited until he again assumed a perpendicular atti-tude, when she smashed him again right on the top of his proboscis. He succumbed as gracefully as possible under the circum-stances, and again resumed a recumbent position. As soon as he could pull himself to-gether he shot up the alley, north of Broad-way, and the woman also skipped out the way.

The parting shot had been too long delayed and Patrolman Ryan was on hand. He tool possession of the female slugger and marched her to the station. Forgraves was not ar rested. The woman was charged with dis-turbing the peace. She gave the name of Lottie Clark. It is stated that she is Forgrave's "woman," and he was preparing to make a change in that direction, which excited her ire, and she remonstrated as na

The New Fire Rules. The new rules governing the fire department will take effect this morning. One that will be particularly noticed by the public will be the three taps of the big bell on the central fire house at 8 o'clock every morning, calling the men to early drill. Another tap will be sounded at noon and one at 8 o'clock in the evening the same as heretofore. The men will have a drill three times a day, the principal one being in the morning, when they will be put through all kinds of work, including hitching and unhitching, reeling and unrecling hose, and making couplings. The new rules are very similar to those of the Kansas City department, from which they were very largely copied. The three taps in the morning must not be misunder-stood as an alarm of fire, for it is simply the

Two Rapid Damsels. A couple of the scarlet women of the town were arrested last evening by Officer Kemp for fast driving. They were painting the central portion of the city in the most approved style, and had for company a young man from Omaha, but the latter took advantage of the opportunity to escape, and made himself very scarce when the officer appeared. The patrol wagon was called, and the pair were landed behind the bars. They gave the names of Minnie Haggerty and Mamie Lloyd. Dunn now announces that he proposes to keep up his end in the game, and says he has fifteen charges to prefer against Davidson. Two of them are for burglary, three for larceny, and the others on minor charges. He will file two more infermations this morning. He accuses Davidson of breaking open a cellar and stealing a keg of beer, and of also stealing a buggy belonging Ben Marks. He says he will push every of the cases, and thinks that by the time gets through, Davidson will be willing to let
