originally placed in Squire Holmes' hands a bill for eight speeches at $50 apiece, but, finding that $200 was the limit of the squire's jurisdiction, he cut the figures down to that amount. The mayor referred to the matter as a great, big, uncalled-for, cruel joke, and re-

It has been alleged that it had not been the doctor's intention to make a will, and that the summons to the attorney to draw it up had been authorized by a brother instead of the doctor himself. It is also asserted that on the day the latter died the moving spirit was in such condition that he brandished a revolver with more carelessness than was conducive to the comfort of those surround ing. The Coroner's Investigation of the Murder of Nistel.

The inquest on the remains of William Nistel, the clerk of Julius Bamberger who was murdered on April 30, was continued esterday in Coroner Harrigan's office.

Julius Bamberger testified that two thieves, on the night in question, had stolen two pairs of shoes from in front of his shoe department, near Harney and Thirtcenth streets. One of his clerks, David Klein, saw the act and gave the alarm. Nistel, together with several of his fellow-clerks, followed the thieves, while Mr. Bamberger remained at the store to protect his property. The thieves the store to protect his property. The thieves walked across the street and ran up the alley pursued by the clerks. Mr. Bamberger heard two shots fired and had heard that Nistel was wounded. There were two traveling men in his store at the time of the robbery, and one of them, a Mr. Schultz, had followed the murderers, and had told him that it was the big man (presumably Reynolds) who had done the shooting.

Officer John Sebek stated that he was reporting to the central station at the box on the corner of Thirteenth and Jackson streets when he heard the shots fired. He also heard

David Klein, a clerk in Bamberger's, stated that he had seen two men steal the shoes; that the larger man of the twain had shoved the shoes under his overcoat which he carried on his arm and run. He called out to a a fellow-clerk, "Come out Billy, some thieves are stealing goods," and started in pursuit. The men, he said, ran into the alley between Twelfth and Thirteenth streets and were pursued through it across Eleventh street into the alley. When ten feet in the alley the the alley. William Richards, a night watchman in the employ of Homan & Carey, liverymen, said that he had seen the men run into the alley pursual by the clerks. It was very dark at the time, as the moon had not risen, consequently he could not identify any one in the party. After they had passed him and had gene to the end of the alley, as near as he could judge, he heard two shots fired and then heard Nistel cry out.

This ended the examination for the morning, and Assistant County Attorney Shea stated that on account of the absence of several important witnesses he would be compelled to postpone the inquest until 3 o'clock in the afternoon.

The coroner's jury returned the following verdict in the afternoon:

"We, the jury, find that William Nistel, while in the pursuit of the two men who committed the theft at the store of Julius Bamberger, at the southeast corner of Thirteenth and Harney streets, came to his death from a bullet fired from a pistol in the hands of one of the thieves. The said shooting was done with malicious and felonious intent."

The deliberations of the jury consumed two or three hours, and were somewhat debative. The evidence throughout was incomplete, the police force contributing very litle to throw light on the subject and help the jury in placing the guilt where it belongs.

The latter, though a short line, will, on account of an immense tunnel that must be cut through the mountains near Jones' ranch cost a great deal of meney. It is estimated that this tunnel will be at least 1,800 feet long and be cut much of the way through solid rock. The company had expected to reach Deadwood eventually but was not expecting to get there so soon until the Burlington commenced building a line from Crawford to that point.

He says the was in town yesterday evening. He says the preliminary work goes very slowly, but hopes to commence grading soon. The negotiations by General Managers Clark and Holdrege for joint right-of-way through new Fort Omaha reservation are still pending and with no probable results other than an agreement to disagree. Mr. Lewis has surveyed, located and reported on no less than three routes, one of which will be selected in case an agreement is not made to use the Burlington's track between Plattsmouth and South Omaha. It is expected that General Manager Clark will be expected that General Manager Clark will be

A New Candidate.

The speculations and predictions of those nterested in promotions of Burlington men to succeed General Manager Ripley have developed a new candidate. At first it was reveloped a new candidate. At first it was re-ported that Mr. Merrill would certainly be the lucky aspirant, but certain parties who claim to know say that W. C. Brown, now superintendent of the Iowa division, will se-cure the position. Color is given to this from the fact that Second Vice President Harris said when in Omaha last Saturday that he would assume the management for a while at would assume the management for a winter at least. His assection is taken as an indication that Mr. Merrill has been dropped out of consideration. A Creston gentleman who was in Omaha yesterday said he overheard two Burlington officials talking, and one of them made the remark that Brown would be promoted to Ripley's place next fall.

Dickenson and the Conductors.

The Union Pacific conductors received General Manager Dickenson's reply to their ultimatum last Saturday but have not as yet had an opportunity to act upon it. If the terms offered by him are accepted, the proposed great meeting June 2 with Vice President Holcomb will not be held. But there is a disposition not to decide the matter defi-nitely until after the Rochester convention, which meets next Tuesday.

They also asked for less mileage. Mr. Dickenson grants four extra crews, two on the main line between Omaha and Cheyenne, and two on the Kansas Pacific division between Kinsas City and Denver.

The ultimatum demanded a conductor and, at least, one brakeman be sent out with every train. This, Mr. Dickenson informs them, is a matter resting with the management. It is only in cases where officers, sometimes, go on a special, that neither conductors nor break-men are needed. Then, the roadmaster and engineer can attend to the business. "I would be perfectly willing," declares the general manager, "to fashion the schedule after that of any road they decide to select. It would be largely in the company's favor, because, as a whole, we pay our trainmen bigger salaries than any western road. There may be a few instances in which passenger conductors get a little more, but there is no a line that pays its brakemen and baggage men as much

"As to the question of overtime, we never had a ruling on that subject. I made one. In substance it is that a man's time begins from substance it is that a man's time begins from the moment his train is marked to go out. The conductors also wanted the extra time

The conductors also wanted the extra time rated at ten miles an hour, but Mr. Dickenson could not agree with them.

The general manager feels that these demands were more than his company could stand. He concedes that the mileage was large. It has been reduced, "but I could not," says Mr. Dickenson, "consent to reduce mileage and at the same time raise the pay. They cannot accuse me of treating pay. They cannot accuse me of treating them unfairly.
