OVER THE TOMB OF GARFIELD.

The Magnificent Memorial Just Completed in Lake View Cemetery.

TEMPLE, STATUE AND CRYPT.

An Imposing and Artistically Decorated Structure Now Marks the Resting Place of the Dead President—The Dedication.

A Cleveland correspondent of the Chicago Herald sends that paper a description of the magnificent Garfield memorial just completed under the direction of the National Memorial Association.

The memorial is located in Lake View cemetery, in the eastern suburb of Cleveland, and nearly at the top of the bluff that forms the southern boundary of that part of the city.

At the base of the tower on the north projects a square porch which contains reception rooms for visitors and the office of the custodian.

Two of the historical panels referred to abound in admirable portraiture. The one representing Garfield as a soldier illustrates an incident of the battle of Chickamauga.

by a great country in memory of JAMES ABRAHAM GARFIELD, Twelfth President of the UNITED STATES OF AMERICA.

The circular court, or aisle, surrounding the memorial temple, and separated therefrom only by the granite columns that are shown on the plan, is a light, airy, and is lighted by ten stained glass windows.

The plain surfaces of the walls between the memorial windows are beautifully frescoed in oil to harmonize with the other decorations.

One of the most remarkable features of the memorial structure is its echoes. The slightest sounds reverberate through its vaulted chambers and turret stairways, all of solid masonry, with bewildering effect. A laugh or shout, which some are irreverent enough to venture to test the echoing power, rolls back and forth for half a minute, and seems to be repeated in a way that is almost uncanny.

Cleveland contributed $75,000 and other contributions from the state bring the total to $1,000,000. Every state and territory contributed something. The total of the contributions was $1,000,000, which was ultimately increased to about $1,500,000 by interest received from the banks on the deposits.

The dedication of the memorial, which will be held on May 30, will be one of the greatest events in the history of Cleveland. It will be attended by the president and a large number of the most prominent public men of the nation.

THE WIDOWS OF BRAVE MEN.

How They Have Been Provided For by the Government.

MRS. LOGAN AND HER HOME.

Memorial Hall the Object of Her Tenderest Care—Mrs. Sheridan and Her Interesting Children—Objects of Special Bounty.

WASHINGTON, May 7.—[Special to THE BEE.]—The recent introduction of the bill before congress suggesting the payment of a pension of $3,000 to the late Indian war veterans, a central figure in the ranks, is Mrs. Mary A. Logan, who, by special act of congress in 1881, is in receipt of a pension of $106.65 monthly, or a $2,600 a year.

Situated upon Columbia Heights, commanding one of the finest and most extensive views in the District, bounded by the green-clad Virginia hills and the circuitous windings of the Potomac, with its handsome memorial hall designed with such loving pride by the sorrowing widow and daughter of the gallant warrior whose trophies in war and records of statesmanship are grouped on every side; the place is numbered among the most attractive spots among the numerous objects of the memorial.

Another familiar figure in Washington is the widow of General Phil Sheridan. Since her husband's death in 1866, Mrs. Sheridan has lived in the same home on Massachusetts avenue, surrounded by an interesting family of young children—three daughters and one son, a noble image of his father.

It is generally known that the widow of General Kilpatrick is petitioning congress for an increase of pension and it is understood that the bill will be eventually passed. The announcement of the engagement of Mrs. Kilpatrick to General Schofield has been made a topic of general gossip, and the opposition of her daughters to the match is an open secret.

For several years past Mrs. Hancock has been in possession of her fine brick apartment house, situated in one of the most desirable locations of the west end, not far from Massachusetts avenue extension, the most valuable property in the district.

Among the many widows drawing from $1,000 to $2,000 yearly, two of the best known names are those of Mrs. Virginia L. Farragut, widow of Admiral Farragut, and Mrs. Appoline A. Blair, widow of General Blair.

The social career of Mrs. Ricketts and her position in the various societies and clubs, her fortune through which she has been called to pass, give unmistakable evidence of the brave and unselfish nature of this woman.

The marked revival of the leg of mutton sleeve is apparent on all gowns, even of tailor-cut, but although it continually grows larger and higher, it has not yet approached anything like the original grandmother sleeve.

HONEY FOR THE LADIES.

Most delicate and beautiful are the new parasols made of white silk muslin of the same shade put on plaited frills over the entire surface, and finished with a bow at the top.

A Letter from the Countess Walderssee.

OMAHA, Neb., May 7.—[To the Editor of THE BEE:] In the issue of THE BEE of March 27, appeared an article written by Mr. Fannie G. Klone, Albion, Neb., headed "Romance of the Countess of Walderssee," reading as follows:

ALBION, Neb., Feb. 27.—[To the Editor of THE BEE:] After reading the article in THE BEE of Tuesday and Friday of last week about the Countess Walderssee, and finding some statements which are untrue, let me as one of her intimate friends give you the romance of her life as told to me by herself.

At her home in Berlin, with those sister, the Baroness von Waechter, he is personally acquainted. The following letter, received this morning in the countess's handwriting, is a copy of the original in my possession:

BADEB BADEB, April 24, 1880.—SIR: I return you the enclosed slip, which, as you rightly judge, is an error. The name of my husband, and as such, in several points, is incorrect. The Baroness von Waechter is, as you infer, my sister, and we are the daughters of the name of Lee, from New York. I thank you for your trouble in wishing to right a wrong statement concerning me and remain, yours truly, FANNIE G. KLONE.

Widows are sometimes embarrassed to know what disposition to make of the diamond wedding ring. It should be removed as soon as the lady who has pledged her troth, for no lady should wear a diamond ring after the death of her betrothed.

Jackets are getting perfectly unprincipled in their loss of ornate display, and appropriate any gorgeousness they can, no matter if it has been from time immemorial devoted to higher and more remunerative functions.

An original entertainment, which bids fair to become very popular, is occasionally given in New York society nowadays. Invitations are sent out for a play to be given by amateur actors in the evening, thus leaving the time devoted to dinner comparatively undisturbed.

The latest device of fashion is that ladies shall discard pins and brooches of all kinds to wear instead at the throat a soft rosette of bright silk. These rosettes are seen in all shades in the London shops, and only for the purpose just mentioned, but ladies who deftly transform a last year's bonnet with two or three of these crowded close together, can give it a new and original look.

Mme. Carnot, the wife of the president of the French republic, is said to be one of the most graceful figures in Parisian society. Unassuming in manner and prepossessing in appearance, she is in every way charming, and her toilet is a model of taste.
