REV. SCOTT ON PROHIBITION.

Yesterday Morning's Sermon at St. Mary's Avenue Congregational Church.

AN ANALYSIS OF THE SLOCUMB LAW.

Why the Proposed Amendment Is Impracticable-More Study and Less Shouting Essential to True Reform,

Rev. Willard Scott spoke in his own church on Sunday morning to a large congregation on the Nebraska prohibition campaign, so called. In part he said:

"I am led to speak of this matter because of the prominence it is now taking in current affairs, and because of a report I have lately received that this pulpit is opposed to prohibition. In what I shall say I shall aim to speak intelligently, with a view to a better analysis of the subject rather than to the conversion of any one to any particular opinion which I may hold. We need light rather than heat. Too many are preaching, and too few studying and teaching.

"The campaign before us is a move against a law, which already exists, with a view to securing a better one. What is that law! "It is commonly known as the 'Slocumb high license law,' which was finally passed after a long struggle, about midnight on Febafter a long struggle, about midnight on February 23, 1881, on the thirty-seventh day of the legislature—62 voting for it, 16 against it, and 6 absent or not voting. Previously in the session a prohibition bill and an earlier high license bill, which made the license $1,000 for all cities and towns, had failed of a majority, and nothing remained but to unite on this or to put the issue over for two years. So it became a compromise law, heavily So it became a compromise law, heavily loaded with amendments, and more prohibi tory in its actual character than is generally recognized. It directed the proper authori-ties to issue licenses or to refuse them upon their discretion, but prohibited their licens-ing for less than a specified sum—for more than one municipal year—without thirty free-holders' signatures, or the publication of the application a given time for protest in the newspaper having the largest circulation in the community. It prohibited them from issuing to an applicant of evil repute or to one who had previously misused his privilege, or to any person or in any locality where for any reason it was in their judgment unwise, and there was no appeal from their decision. They might absolutely refuse to issue even They might absolutely refuse to issue ever one license, or might make the license so high above the minimum set by law as to be out of above the minimum set by law as to be out of reach of the business, in either case securing full prohibition for the community.

"When the license was issued it carried a long list of prohibitions in itself. It pro-hibited screened doors or windows; selling to minors, servants, apprentices, Indians, a drunken person, or to an habitual drunkard, even when he was sober; selling on Sundays, election days, at fairs traces militare, en-even when he was soor; sering on Sundays, election days, at fairs, races, military encampments or near country churches; treating or giving away liquor; and it made the saloon keeper liable for all evil results of his business to individuals or the community, and wives and citizens could recover damages from him. It was practically a prohibiages from him. It was practically a prohibitory law wherever it was operated by a strong prohibitory sentiment; and it remains so today. It has done away with the grocery and store saleons of the years previous to 1881, and has been a temperence measure from the beginning.

Its passage aroused at the time a vigorous protest. Mr. Slocumb was denounced generally, but especially by the liquor interests. Efforts were made to prove the law unconstitutional, or to show that the license must be issued if asked, both of which failed. The be issued if asked, both of which failed. The legislature of 1883 was urged to repeal it. In Omaha the full license could not at first be safely collected, and quarterly payments were allowed. No attempts at Sunday clos-ing or unscreened doors succeeded. The en-deavor to establish a police commission was bitterly fought. Local politics turned on the attitude of candidates toward this law. The disorderly element steadily opposed it and the orderly element defended it. If today the saloon vote is to be east for it, which may well be doubted, it is merely because it fears prohibition more. It is therefore plainly un-fair to say of an order loving citizen who believes our present laws is the best we can now get, that he is on the side of the saloon interest. When did the saloon interest come over to this side! How long will it stay if the fear of prohibition is removed. "But we are asked by two parties to repeal this in favor of something else. One wishes it repealed in favor of a mere license law, without prohibitory elements. To do this would be to retreat from our present this would be to retreat from our present position. No order-loving citizen will vote for it. Whoever proposed that amendment meant mischief to good order. It is a true liquer bill. But the other party wishes it repealed in favor of a prohibitory law. Is this desirable! And can we do it! I believe it is desirable for these reasons:

"It is nearer our ideal when we pray, thingdom come, in carthacter."

"Thy kingdom come, in earth as it is in 2. It is a constitutional means of public safety.

'3. It does prohibit.

"3. It does promote.

"4. It tends to remove the saloon as a temptation for youth.

"5. It makes the traffic illegal.

"6. It will ultimately, if not immediately, produce prosperity in the community.

"7. It is coming in the near future, and we may as well get on and ride.

may as well get on and ride.

"8. What the saloon people want to prevent I want to secure.
"But can we get it? Perhaps not now. Certainly not if temperance people cannot unite and work in common fellowship and union. If we would succeed we must learn how to fellowship the moral-suasion man, the legal-suasion man, and the man who thinks we have the best law we can get at present. We must learn how to unite the blue ribbon, white ribbon and no ribbon people who be-lieve in sobriety and good order. We must study and teach more, and shout and use vio-lent language less. We must be willing to take what we can get, and not what we want. We must surrender the cry, 'This thing or nothing.' If we cannot get the amendment let us save and stiffen our present law and be good natured. We must remember that Jesus good-natured. We must remember that Jesus taught that laws were less than life. The law works on the outside; the life from within. When the life is right the law is unnecessary, and when it is not right the law is steadily broken down. Jesus never cast out an evil spirit except by putting a good spirit in its place. He dispossessed evil by possessing with good. Mere prohibition is unworthy of endeaver. The man who builds is the savior. So he who is creating a public moral and religious sentiment, if he never says "prohibition" or "law," is building up both, which the noisy prohibitionist may possibly be only hindering. Let us build up the sentiment, and the law will come in up the sentiment, and the law will come in its time. Slavery would never return to South Carolina if the amendment forbidding it were now erased. The people would not allow it. When we think as seriously and soundly of the evils of saloons as we now do of the evils of slavery it will not exist. will not allow it. Hasten that day! And if we need a prohibitory law to help bring it in, as apparently we do, let us vote for it. whether we have a law or not, for the po

MAYNE'S LAND SYNDICATE.

One of the Greatest Organizations of the Kind Ever Effected. When C. E. Mayne arrived here last week from Ogden, Utah, his new home, he told a Bug man that upon his return from Sloux City, Ia., where he was then en route, he would tell him something. The promise was made good yesterday, Taking the reporter into his room at the Paxton hotel Mr. Mayne showed him the signed papers in the organization of the greatest land syndicate ever effected in the greatest land syndicate ever effected in the west. It will be known as the Mayne Syndicate and has a capital of $2,000,0000. Among the leading and heaviest stockholders are the following widely known capitalists:

W. A. Paxton of this city, who will be the trustee of the syndicate; D. T. Hedges, president, and Edward Hawkenson, secretary of the union stock yards, Sioux City; James Booge, vice president of the Sioux City; James Booge, vice president of the Sioux City & Northern railroad company; F. V. Parker, broker, Boston; J. T. Waterbury, vice president of the Manhattan Trust company, New York; Wendell Goodwin, president, and Donald McLean, general manager of the construction company now building the Pacific Short line railroad, and A. S. Garretson, president of the Sioux National bank, Sioux City.

Every one of the gentlemen named is more than a millionaire, and the nine names reprosent a combined wealth of $75,000,000.

One fact in connection with the organization of this syndicate that will prove an especially great surprise to business circles in Omaha is that W. V. Wood, paying teller ci the National Bank of Commerce, this city, has been made secretary and treasurer of the syndicate. Mr. Wood severed his connection with the bank on Saturday, and leaves for Ogden today, The syndicate will do a general land bush The syndicate will do a general land business. As a starter it has purchased outright 1,000 acres of land adjoining the stock yards and between them and the city of Ogden, together with all the choicest and most desirae property, both business and residence, in ad around Ogden.

Mr. Mayne, who will be general manager for the syndicate at Ogden, has, during the few days he has spent in Omaha while on his present visit here, sold a score or more of fine pieces of Ogden property to persons living in this city. He returns to Ogden today,

FELL THIRTY FEET.

Sullivan, an Old Man, Meets With a Terrible Death. John Sullivan, an old man living with his daughter, Mrs. Daniel Carey, at 1111 South Twelfth street, met with a terrible death yesterday morning. At this point on Eleventh street the ground to the front and north of the Carey dwelling has been graded away, leaving the house some thirty feet above the street grade. Sullivan slept in an upper room of the house, and arising before daylight he was heard to open the door and go out. Two hours later the members of the family arose, prepared the breakfast, one of the children being sent up-stairs to call the grandfather. A moment later the child came back and reported that grandpa's clothes were beside the bed, but he was not there. The house was searched and their attention was turned to the outside, when, upon look-ing over the high bank, a distance of thirty feet below lay the cold and lifeless body of John Sullivan, his head crushed and his en-John Sullivan, his head crushed and his en-tire face cut off, by coming in contact with the corner of the roof of the coal house, which he struck as he fell.

The body was left where it was lying and the coroner notified. Upon his arrival the remains were taken to Heafey's morgue, where an inquest will be held this afternoon. Mrs. Carey, the daughter, was seen. She stated that her father was ninety-five years of age and had been in poor health for some time. Her theory of the accident is that Sullivan arose before daylight, walked down stairs, and as he opened the door, stumbled and fell, and before he could recover his footing slipped over the embankmene, which is only about four feet from the door.

came, as the patient opened his eyes they rested upon a handsome bouquet which a friend had sent in and which was sitting on a table at the bedside. A smile lit up the wan features of the suf-ferer as he said: "Now I know why I have been permitted to live so long. I will be buried among the flowers."

All nature in southern California was at that time in her most luxuriant dress. Flowers were blooming everywhere and the was heavy with their fragrance. Himebaugh passed away a few days after his wish had been uttered and in accordance with it his body now rests on a gentle slope in one of the most picturesque spots in the Los Angeles cemetery.
