and Milwaukee sent out construction trains to begin the work of repairing. They found everything clear as far as the deck and the stowage where there was a serious washout. The track at that point had not been put in condition for the passage of trains last evening. It is reported that there is one continuous washout from this point to Underwood, a distance of nearly twenty miles. It is impossible to tell just how badly the tracks are damaged, as telegraph lines are down and there is no means of communicating with stations east of here. The officials say they have no more information regarding the situation than has already been made public. They suppose that work is going on all along the line, and are of the opinion that line men are working this year from Omaha regarding the most straggled places as far as possible. The railroad bridges at Chautauque are standing in position, although it can not be told whether they are materially damaged or not. The Burlington track is comparatively unharmed, although one or two bridges were reported as somewhat damaged, and several car loads of rock were ordered sent out to brace up the foundations.

The Milwaukee trains are running over the Northwestern between this city and Oskema, where they strike their own Sioux City line, on which they run to Manville Junction, where they gain the main line. They are not running all their trains, and the limited list of cars is nearly as good as possible. Their train which should have arrived Wednesday evening, came in about 11 o'clock yesterday morning over the Northwestern.

The Rock Island is running its trains over the Burlington to Red Oak, thence over the Burlington to Crested, where it reaches its own branch line, thence to its main line at Atlantic. They have abandoned their regular evening train and all freight until the track is repaired and again open to travel. The morning train went out as usual and the limited left on the line of the evening express. The incoming limited was about four hours late, arriving at 2:15.

One fact developed in connection with the running of the Rock Island trains over the Burlington track that shows that the great strain of two years ago has not been forgotten. When the order was issued for the Rock Island train to run over the Burlington track, Mr. Webster, to act as pilot for the Rock Island engineer from Gristwood, to the Bluffs, he received a letter from the Rock Island crew which they designated as a "scat" road. There was nothing to do but to order out a Burlington engine and crew, which brought in the train. Since then Burlington engines and Burlington crews have been pulling the Rock Island trains both ways between Gristwood and Council Bluffs.

Several of the county bridges that were supposed to have been washed out were found yesterday in their present places except to be flood subsided and it is not definitely known now that any bridges in this immediate vicinity were swept away. The approaches to several of the bridges were more or less cut away and considerable filling will be required to make some of them passable. The culvert near the park's mill bridge was washed out and the only manner of getting across yesterday was by un hitching the horses, which were led over, and then pulling the wagon over on rollers. The additional rise that was expected yesterday noon failed to appear, but no disappointment was experienced on that account.

Manana on the Rise. The effects of Wednesday's freshet are just beginning to be felt at Manana and the water in the lake is over a foot higher than it was forty-eight hours ago. The Mesquite creek flood did not cut directly into the lake, but spread over the country surrounding it.

The announcement of Manana yesterday, as seen from Fairmount park, was as if the lake were still surrounded by four larger lakes. A great deal of this surface water (for such it has now really become) is finding its way into Manana. A part of it found its way to the lake between Bay's landing and the hotel, and in this it was assisted by means of ditches which were dug by the residents of Manana for the purpose of draining the adjacent territory.

The water at Manana park but a few rods from the lake shore, was three feet deep when work was commenced, but it was never more than two feet.

Last evening of the hotel the water reached the place of Postmaster Rief, and did not damage. Mr. Rief has charge of the kennel of the Council Bluffs coursing club, and the water covered the kennel and the dogs were overturned. The total damage to residents of the southern part of the city will not exceed $8,000, and may be much less than that.

The damage in the railroad yards is merely nominal, as the current was not strong enough to wash away the roadbed in any extent inside the city limits. The receding waters left the Rock Island and Milwaukee tracks in apparently as good condition as before, but the Burlington suffered a slight washout just west of the Milwaukee roundhouse. A few car loads of clinders repaired the damage.

THE BIG STORY IN IOWA.

It Leaves Desolation and Destruction in Its Fearful Path.

RIPLEY, Ia., June 4.—[Special Telegram to THE BEE.]—A cyclone passed three miles south of this place at 3 p. m. today traveling in a northeasterly direction. The first account of it was about seven miles west of here, where it completely destroyed the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul bridge west of Dawson. The first serious damage was at Elm Robbins, five miles southwest, where it completely demolished a large frame building. There were six or seven persons in the house at the time and very many were injured. The next place struck was the Rhoades school house, about one mile north of Robbins. There were between twenty and thirty children in the school at the time of the storm, even the rock foundation was carried away. Next it completely destroyed the Backe coal shaft, three miles south of here, near which is a large frame boarding house which, although still standing, is completely wrecked. The cyclone continued on the ground for several miles north to Crested, where it wrecked and destroyed a small building. When the east it began to raise and when from eight to ten miles northeast it broke and scattered.

Carried Away as Chaff.

ANOKA, Ia., June 4.—[Special Telegram to THE BEE.]—A furious storm in the shape of a cyclone swept the country here about 3 o'clock today. Beginning at the north end of five miles to the southwest of this place it took a northeasterly course one and a half mile west of here and continued its course to the Des Moines river. The first place visited was a school house occupied by a Miss Heater and twenty-five pupils. It lifted the house nearly from its foundation and left it in a shapeless mass of debris some distance away. All received injuries, one probably fatal. The next place visited was what was formerly a large two-story frame house. Trees, fences, out-houses and all were carried away as chaff and logs and shingles were blown out in a large whirl. One man just un hitching his team, and had only partially accomplished his work, when the elements gathered horses, wagon and man up and deposited them in a large ditch some distance away. Fortunately no one at this place was killed but many received slight injuries in the shape of broken ribs and arms.

The Cyclone's Wicked Work.

ANOKA, Ia., June 4.—[Special to THE BEE.]—This afternoon at 1 o'clock an able bodied cyclone formed one half mile south of town, at which place it moved two buildings off their foundation, wrecking one of them badly. It passed over the eastern part of the town, striking on the hill across the railroad track, tearing a small barn all to pieces and driving some of the boards eight inches into the hard roadway. There were three horses in the barn and they escaped unhurt. The lightning struck a large two-story frame house, and more destructive cyclone cloud formed at 1:30 p. m., three miles northeast of town, leveling several barns and ruining orchards. It traveled north westerly and was very wicked in its appearance.

Very meager reports are yet received and no fatalities reported.

One break of the line was to fall up a large oak and place her over a wire fence, landing her safely on the other side.

It rained a very heavy rain in the night and seemed to delight in accomplishing queer and wicked freaks.

Large hogs were picked up and carried half dead, some of them dead, in
