A Discovery Recalling Indian Atrocites Two Hundred Years Ago,

A discovery of historical interest has recently been made by Mr. W. H. D. Blake on his farm near New Paltz vil-lage says a Middletown (N. Y.) dispatch to the St. Louis Globe-Democrat. farm was originally purchased of the Indians and cleared up more than 200 years ago by Lewis Dubois, one of the pioneer French Huguenot settlers of the region. The farm remained a cherished possession of the descendants of the original owner until it recently became the property of Mr. Blake. On the farm, and not far from the old Dubois mansion, is a knoll which overlooks the adjacent portion of the valley of Walkill River. It has been a matter of commonly received tradition that this knoll was the scene, during what is known in history al the second Esopus war with the Indians, of one of the cruelest of the many atrocites perpetrated by the savages on the white settlers of th region.

The war opened on June 7, 1663, with the surprise and massacre of the inhabitants of Kingston and Hurley-then known as Wiltuick and New. Dorb-by combined bands of Esopus, Minsie and Wapping Indians. Among the prisoners carried off from Henleye by one band of the savages, was Catharine, wife of Louis Dubois, who afterward removed to the farm at New Paltz, and three other women whose names have not been preserved by the local annals. The sav age band retreated with prisoners and spoils toward the distant Shawangunk Mountains. Tradition has it that the first halt was made at the knoll in question, and that there one of the women. who was in a delicate condition and unable to keep up with the swift march of her captors, was cruelly put to death.

The story of her fate as handed down by tradition and old narratives, is that she was burned at the stake. It is told that when the flames rose up around her and as long as her voice could be heard, she joined with the rest of the captives in singing the grand old 137th psalm of the Reformed Dutch church collection, which gives expression to abiding faith triumphant over pain and death. tory of the hot and vengeful pursuit of the Indians by a party of settlers under the command of Louis Dubois, and of the happy rescue of the leader's wife, Catherine, and her female companions, is a familiar incident in the history of the times. Mr. Blake, the present owner of the Dubois place, says up to the pres-ent spring no plow had disturbed the soil at the head of the historic knoll within the memory of any person living. A few days ago he set a plow at work with the result that the share turned up lection of charred sticks of wood and ashes. Among this debris of a long extinct fire were found a number of fragments of human bones. This discover having been noised abroad it attracted a wide interest, and the local antiquaries readily connect the revelation with the tradition of the atrocity perpetrated there during the cruel Indian wars. It is suggested that the legend of the martyrdom of the woman captive and the facts of the present discovery be investi-gated by the Huguenot society of Amer-ica, and if properly substantiated that the society shall erect a suitable monument on the knoll.

The Day of Wonders. Barnum and "Nero" will soon be with us. Two performances of the greatest show on earth and stupenduously glorious dramatic spectacles which were the craze of London, the talk of Europe and are continuously attracting the most tremendous crowds ever known in America. Wait.

STEEL SHIRT BRAVES. Gamblers and Detectives Who Have

No Fear of Bullets. A little dark-complexioned man walked into a gambling house on Broadway last night with a parcel under his arm. He found the proprietor and was led by him into a private room. When the lit-tle man came out he had $250 in his pocket and the gambler was the possessor of a mailed shirt.

Inquiry by a reporter showed it to be an astonishing fact that nearly all the gamblers and private detectives in the city are in the habit of wearing chain armor, if not next to the skin, at least very close to it. The calling of these two particular classes of society frequently places them in the position of becoming targets for friends and enimies. Says the New York Morning Journal As no gentleman is anxious to experiance the results of big pistol bullet plowing through his vitals or a keen knife handled by angry adopt in carving, the mailed shirt has been almost universally adopted. "Why," said the gambler whom the reporter saw buying the armor, "I get shot at about once every six months, and the sensation of looking into the muzzle of a pistol that seems as big as a barrel is not pleasant. I am generally sitting at a table when some crank who has lost his money on a sure thing jumps up and begins to pepper me. If I have my shirt I am invulnerable, except in the head, and everybody knows that is a hard place

"Will the armor turn a bullet?" asked the reporter incredulously The gambler led the way into a private com. There, lying on the table, was the defense against lead and steel. The gambler picked it up, it steel links rat-tling musically against each other as he allowed the folds to softly slip through ordinary pin. The whole shirt was flexible and could almost be concealed in one hand. Each link was welded to the next one and all were composed of the finest steel. It was sleeveless, high in the neck and was longer in front than on the sides, which barely covered the points of the hips.

"You see," said the gambler going to a drawer and extracting a garment,
"this is a chamois skin vest made to go next to the skin. Over this the armor is worn and then your ordinary garments measure back, "For with the same are placed above. It doesn't impede a measure that ye mete withal, it shall be man's motions in the slightest and the measured to you again."

and the links are so fine that no rattling can be heard, notwithstanding the mo tions made by the body. It cost me $250 and it is worth every cent I paid.' Further investigation showed that the armor was serviceable. The gambler, spreading the shirt on the table, took a long dirk from a drawer, and raising the knife to the height of his arm, brought it down with all his force on the tiny links. The point of the knife snapped off cleanly, and a minute examination of the shirt could not discover a single dent. The resewood table bore just a scratch, evidently owing to a movement of the shirt when struck. At the private detective offices it was admitted that a few of these garments were kept on hand for the operatives to use when a particularly dangerous man had to be arrested.

"Of course, the idea dates back to the dark ages," said the chief of the Wilkinson bureau. "But we utilize it on the suggestion of one of our operatives who is an Australian. He knew a bushranger there for whom a reward was offered dead or alive. The desperado had often been shot at and presumably hit, but never fell. One day in a close fight the robber was seen to fall and was captured. It was then found that he had been shot in the leg below the chain mail shirt which enclosed his body. We thought it a good idea, and as we don't care to lose a good operative, ordered a couple of shirts and have never re-

York and Hordesly of Wheeling, are here investigating the remarkable discoveries of an old German farmer, G. W. Hamrick, who lives in a house just outside of town, says a dispatch from Philippi, W. Va., to the Chicago Times. It has been discovered that the house is full of mummies, both of brutes and human beings. In this house lie the bodies of two adults, natural almost as in life, every particle of the skin exposed to the air, and with blood, brains and viscera remaining. In the veins and arteries the blue and black blood stands out as clear and natural as when these people lived and walked. For two years, exposed to the air, without decay or odor, these bodies have lain. His process is a discovery of his own. Mr. Hamrick claims that in an hour he can prepare a body without making an incision of any sort or removing any part of the body, so that it may be taken around the world without ice or arsen-
