THE CORONER'S VEST POCKET.

It is the Means of Postponing the Chronister Murder Trial. DIn the vest pocket of Coroner Harrigan there are supposed to be jingling at the present time the twenty little bullets taken from the brain of William Chronister, the peddler whom Tony Frank, an Italian, is supposed to have murdered on Sunday evening, March 30, of this year. The vest pocket, the bullets and the coconer started for St. Joseph, Mo., on a short business trip three or four days ago. Prior to their departure, the county attorney neglected to secure them, with a notice that their presence would be needed on June 11, to give testimony at the trial which comes as a result of the bullets being found in Chronister's

The case was called for trial again, the third time, yesterday morning.

County Attorney Mahoney got up and said ho was sorry to inform the court that after telegraphing all around the country he had been unable to put himself in communication with Coroner Harrigan. He had learned, however, that the latter would, it was expected, be home today or tomorrow. With-out the coroner and the bullets he felt a seri-ous objection even to preceeding to impanel the jury, as that would require very little time, and when it was finished he wanted to introduce the little chunks of lead. Judge Clarkson urged in a mild way that the work of selecting a jury be proceeded preliminary steps of the trial be allowed to proceed immediately or that it be postponed Mr. Mahoney then explained that he would gladly accept a lengthy postponment were it not for the fact that there were some witnesses who had come from as far as St. Louis, and that the expense of getting them here was too great to be incurred more than The court then permitted a postponment until 2 o'clock. The case was commenced in the afternoon. Very little interest was manifested, the only person present, aside from a few of the abitues of the court, being Mrs. Reed, in whose house Chronister was killed, and her The empanelling of the jury was begun at 3 o'clock and was not completed until 5:30. During that time twenty-five men were examined. The jury as it stands is as follows: Samuel Durnell, W. M. Foster, John Hensman, J. S. Miller, John Haggerty, J. E. Shavlik, O. B. Hutson, Charles E. Silsbee, F. P. Riley, Samuel Magner, Pat Brennan and W. F. Nash

The crime with which Tony Frank is charged is the murder of William Chronister, a peddler. The affair occurred on Sunday, March 30, of this year, at a point about six miles south of Elkhorn station. Chronister was sitting in the house of a Mrs. Reed, after nightfall, when a shot was fired through the window, hitting Chronister and killing almost instantly. A chain of circumstantial evidence pointed to Frank as the probable murderer, and he was arrested and bound over on the charge of murder in the first de

The business of the present term of the United States court practically came to an end yesterday, as the last jury case was put on for trial. The judge will hold court during the balance of the week, hearing law cases and motions but will probably adjourn court Saturday evening. The last case for the jury was that of Elmendorff, Watte & Co. vs McAleer Bros. & Co. The plaintiffs are commission brokers in Chicago, while the defendants are grain dealers in Lincoln, this state. During July, 1885, the defendants concluded to do a little speculation in wheat, so they borrowed $8,500 from the Chicago men, with the understandfrom the Chicago men, with the understanding that all grain purchased at Lincoln should be consigned to Elmendorff, Watte & Co., who would charge a commission of 1 cent per bushel on wheet, 1 cent on corn. 1½ cents on barley, 1½ cents on oats and 1 cent on flax, with a portion of the proceeds of the sales to be applied upon the debt. This arrangement continued until July, 1878, when the Lincoln men suddenly changed arrangement continued until July, 1878, when the Lincoln men suddenly changed brokers and went to another Chicago firm with their business. The plaintiffs in the in the present suit claim that of the original amount, but $1,500 was ever paid, leaving a balance of $7,800 due, which is principal and interest, and for which amount that are now super. LAND AND WAGES. The Former Declining and the Lat

Very Low in England, vas Twenty years ago you could hardit buy a farm in England at any price, to never under $300 an acre, writes ld Perkins in a London letter. Now I se many farms for sale at $120 an acre. But no one wants a farm in England, No one can farm profitably here on $200 land and compete with $20 land in America, with freights 20 cents per hundred pounds from New York city. If the American farmer could once come to Europe, and realize how much better he is off than the English or German farmer, he would lift up his head and rejoice at his prosperity. He would complain no more. Yes, there is a great land depression in England.

"Many business men in Warwick shire," said Mr. Perkins, a butcher "are going into bankruptcy. the 'to let,' and 'for sale on our house, No business is paying. I am running my own business now at a loss, hoping for good times again." I got this list of wages from the laborers themselves, and not from bosses or newspapers. The house-maid at Learnington told me her wages were $1.25 per week. "And do all the girls in Learnington work as cheap as this?" I asked.

"Yes, and many cheaper," she said.

At Chester I went among the railroad employees of the Great Western railroad. In answering to my question, an English conductor, or train man, said: "I get thirty dollars a month, the engineer gets from forty to sixty dollars a month, and the fireman gets twenty-eight dollars a month. We all board ourselves." These wages are doubled in When I asked a farm laborer at Warwick about his wages he said: "I do get fourteen shilling a wee! has butcher's meat a Saturday," which is that he got $3.50 a week and boars. himself, but on Saturday had fresh meat

Other wages in Warwickshire are as follows: The house painter gets $7.20 a week, the harness maker $7, the blacksmith $6.50, the general farm hand $14 per month, and general laborer 8 cents an hour and board themselves. The printer who gets about 40 cents per thou-
