A Motor Conductor Assaulted. J. A. Reeder, a conductor on the Sherman avenue motor line, will carry his eye on crutches for several days to come. A couple of individuals with noisy jags boarded his car last evening and grew so boisterous between Douglas and Douge streets that the lady passengers were annoyed. They re-belled against Reeder's remonstrances, but he called a policeman and they quieted down. The car went on, but no sooner was the policeman left behind than one of the fellows struck the conductor over the eve with some weapon, inflicting a painful wound. A Monkey and a Squirrel Suffer Terrible Torture.

Two fatalities were reported last evening as directly attributable to vesterday's scorching sun. Max Geisler, taxidermist and proprictor of the bird store at No. 417 South Fifteenth street, forgot to lower his awaing yesterday morning to protect the monkey and squirrels displayed in the window. The hot rays pouring through the glass were almost sufficient to have blistered the poor tertured animals, and their sufferings attracted the attention or nearly every passer-by. There was no water in the cages, and what little there was to eat was The poor creatures were choking with thirst and were literally being cooked alive. Late in the afternoon one of the sqirrels died and the monkey shared the same fate soon after. The bird cages were arranged along the wail out of the sun, but the temperature of the room was so high that the feathered songsters suffered terricly. When the place was opened last evening the steach that poured out was overpowering. When water was given the suffering animals in the window they drank until their skins seemed ready to burst. Hundreds of passers by who witnessed the seeme during the afternoon would gladly have lowered the awning, but it was a patent roller affair and could not be moved.

Three divisions, Omaha, No. 12; Lilly, No. 8, and Black Eastle, No. 17, assembled at the armory of No. 12, corner Twenty-second and Curning streets, about 8 o'clock. The wives and sweethearts of the sir knights also assembled to assist them in getting ready for Omaha division mustered twenty-three men, including the officers. Lily division had sixteen men and Black Eagle had about sixteen men. The battation was under command of Cantain John Hay ward. Headed by the Union Pacific band, with inciden men, under the leadership of Mr.

Fred Rhyser, the battailon marched through the principal streets attracting attention all along the route. The friends of the members brought up the rear in curriages, followed by several wagons loaded with baggage.

At the depot the Omaha contingent was joined by Colonel Harry Downs, Adjutant Richard O'Neil and Lieutenant Colonel Douglas of the First regiment, Major O. L. Green of Kearney, A. D. C. of the Nebraska brignide; Adjutant D. C. of the Nebraska brigade; Adjutant W. L. Cook of the Third regiment, of Kearney, and Colonel Allan Jamieson of Canon City, Col., A. D. C. on the staff of the major general. Seven staff officers of the Omaka regiment accompanied the party.

A large number of ladies were in the party, and they were decorated with distinctive badges showing their relation to the order.

The party occupied two sleepers and two chair cars on the Northwestern train. It had been decided to repudiate the suggestion of General Dayton that all the Knights go via the Burlington route, and a number of criticisms were heard on the action of the general is allowing himself to be used as a tool by the Burlington people.
Colonel Downs of the First regiment stated that four divisions of that regiment, numbering about eighty men, left via the North-western yesterday morning. These divisions were Hebron, Falls City, A. D. Marshall, and a composite division made up of members from Ashland, Beatrice and neighboring bottom was a lify, the symbol of the order. These badges were bound with red cord and formed very pretty decorations.

The members of Omaha division No. 12 were decorated with a handsome badge, the design of Captain Hayward. It was hand-painted on colluloid, and bore at the top two trossed guidons, under which were the words, "Omaha Division, No. 12." At the bottom was allly, the symbol of the order.

As the train pulled out the band played "The Girl I Left Behind Me," while the numerous wiles and sweethearts of the gallant sir knights waved their hands and wished them Godspeed.

The boys will arrive in Milwaukee at noon today and will take a maximum part today and will be a maximum part today and will be a maximum part to a maxim oday and will take a prominent part in the roccedings.

Omaha division will enter the lists for a prize, and there is every indication that the livision, under the able command of Captain Hayward, will return crowned with laurels and a prize.

Appropriate Services in Memory of the Bohemian Martyr.

With the Bohemians, yesterday was a no tional holiday. It was the day sacred to the memory of John Huss, their patron saint, and from early morning until night the Bohemian settlement in the souther portion of the city legal regulations is a mere exagwas bright and gay with thousands of flags and yards of bunting that floated from store fronts and residences.

In the evening a large audience gathered at Metz' hall on South Thirteenth street, where speeches landing the character of John Huss were delivered by a pumber of the prominent Bohemians of the city. The songs of Bohemia were sung in the national tongue and all went as merry as a marriage bell until nearly midnight.

The interior of the hall was artistically arranged, choice tropical plants and hot house flowers being everywhere. The stage was a perfect bower of roses, while suspended from the columns and supports wrought in flowers, surrounded by wreaths of evergreens, were Bohemian mottoes inscribed to the memory of the departed saint.

Her love affair with Prince Alexander of Battenberg and Bulgaria was entirely of her own seeking, and many of he relatives were in favor of her marrying him simply on the score of propriety and to avoid any further worry her. When Prince Alexander forsook her and married MdHe. Loisinger, she was beside herself with disappointment police court he drove out to the grounds with and rage, so that for a time the question of putting her under forcible restraint was considered. Her relatives redoubled their guardianship of her, and also their efforts to find her a husband, in which latter they have now succeeded.

Prince Adolphus is, it is true, only the youngest son of a very petty and insig-nificant German princelet. The realm of Schaumberg-Lippe only comprises about one hundred and thirty-three square miles and less than forty thousand inhabitants. And Prince Adolphus has no prospect of coming even to this petty throne, since he has three brothers older than himself and the eldest of them has several children. But the prince is a rather fine and spirited young soldier, of good address, who will, as one of the members of the court bluntly expressed it, "be able to stand all the love-making Victoria wants to give him."

It is likely that the couple will go to England to live. Not long ago, in despair of finding a husband for her, it was arranged that the princess should go to London and occupy a suite of rooms in Kensington Palace, where she would be under the watchful eye of her grand-mother, the queen. The Empress Frederick and Emperor William, the mother and brother of the young lady, agreed to provide her with a sufficient income to keen up her household in proper style. To this she agreed, and was about to go to London when Prince Adolphus was hit upon as a bridegroom. The apart-ments are still engaged for her, however, and she and her husband will probably fly thither after their honeymoon The date of the wedding is not yet fixed, but it certainly will be very soon. mosquitoes are also promised during the hot

A Boy Congress, After the house adjourned Congressman Belden of New York brought the gavel down with great dignity, and called the pages to order, writes Amos J. Cummings. A page three feet high moved that the house go into committee of the whole on the state of the union for the consideration of a bill increasing the salaries of the employes of the house. Belden put the question with the most profound gravity, and it was carried. Thereupon the genial congressman called the smallest page on the floor to the chair, retired to his seat, and enjoyed the fun for an hour or more.

Then a tow-headed page moved that the committee rise and report the bill favorably to the bouse. The motion was carried, and Mr. Belden again re-sumed the chair. The three-foot page descended and appeared at the bar. He reported the proceedings of the committee with precision and despatch. Then the previous question was ordered, the bill received its third reading and was put upon its final passage. It was car ried. The little page gravely moved to reconsider it and lay that motion upon the table. "There being no objection," said Belden, "It is so ordered." Young Dean Halford, a nephew of Whistling Elijah, then moved that the house ad journ. This was carried, and Mr. Bel-
