

THE WORLD'S FAIR PRESIDENT

Ex-Minister Palmer and His Peculiar Interests for the Position.

HIS MILLIONS AND HOW HE MADE THEM.

Something About His Great Farm and His Theory of Money-Making— "Plunger" Watson's Career— The Harrison Cottage.

WASHINGTON, July 9.—[Special to THE BEE.]—Ex-Minister Palmer's appointment as the head of the fair is very popular in Washington. He was one of the richest members of the "Millionaires' club" and was pointed out as one of the "millionaire gold-bags" when he first came here. After a short time, however, he showed himself to be a man of broad culture and a thinker. He made several speeches which read like the old English classics, and at the end of the first year he was known as the coldest and brainiest of the new senators. A short experience with him showed that he did not worship his money and he put on more airs than the poorest messenger who stood at the senate doors. He rented the big mansion on Scott Circle which Winston then owned and kept open house. The year following he built a lot and built his $5,000,000 brown stone palace on MacPherson square and entertained magnificently. One of the doctrines in his philosophy of life is that a man should cultivate his social nature and that of his friends. Palmer did this. He went on the principle that it was just as easy to say a pleasant thing as a mean one, and his actions led him friends as fast as though they had been so many Australian rabbits. Before his term was over he had the friendship of all his neighbors.

How Bills Through

for his constituents than any man from the northeast. Palmer is a man of strong friendship and he sticks to his friends. He is also a man of few enemies, and hence told me that life was so short for revenge, and that he could not afford to spend time thinking how to get even with a man who did him an injury. These features of his character made him an excellent minister in Spain, and they will make him strong as a diplomat's helper. He is a diplomat with a diplomat's hypersthesy, and he will make the fair popular in this country and the world over. He will travel over the United States in his interest, will know all of the governors before 1892, and will have every one of these working for him to make the exposition a success. If I hear of a governor who will take a run over to Europe and look up matters there this year or next, and the acquaintance he has will do wonders.

Senator Palmer is in many respects like Chancey Dewey. He can make nearly as good an after-dinner speech as Chancey and there is no man in public life who can equal him in singing Methodist hymns or Moody and Sankey songs. Like Mr. Dewey he has a temper amounting to the Law of God in his gentlest mood. Nothing ever worries him. He doesn't fret, and he never loses his head. If he is ever annoyed he doesn't show it, and he can do.

An Immense Amount of Work

while pretending to do nothing. He understands how to make others work for him, and he carries on one of the biggest businesses of the country with no friction.

Just how much Senator Palmer is worth I don't know. I believe if I asked him he would tell me in a lazy, unostentatious way, without thinking. I know, however, that he has his millions, and that his lumber mills, his pine forests, his great salt wells, and his real estate put under the hammer would bring in a pile that would have bought out John times over, that would have made the queen of Sheba bow down to him as she did to Solomon, and would have released Midas from the lot of iron mold. His wife is also worth several millions, and the two control one of the biggest fortunes of the country. This fortune was made in lumber, and Senator Palmer married the daughter of his partner. When he began life he was for a time unsuccessful, but after his marriage, in connection with his father-in-law, he made money hand over fist, and after he got to the top he turned to gold. He once told me that a man ought to work hard until his property brought him an income of $10,000 a year, and after that he ought to let it do things as it will. "Everything comes to the man who waits," said he, "and if you keep your eyes open, you're sure to make by and by. I don't believe that a big fortune makes a man any happier and after he gets to a certain point he reaches the limit of his spending power. There is no man in the world who can, for his personal gratification, use more than 4 per cent on a million dollars, and as for me, I am satisfied with little."

Still Senator Palmer has a number of

Very Expensive Luxuries. His farm near Detroit is one of them, but the income is the value of the land has made this pay for itself many times over. If he could move this farm to the city he would be one of the great slugs of the exposition. It contains 67 acres and it is laid out like a great English park. There is a big forest in it, in which are shady glens and romantic drives and where you may wander through all the thazens of Rosamond's lower and see yourself in it. Every one of the walks has its name and some of these make a capital for the summer's friends. I remember Marlborough avenue and Sherman's hill, and I saw a gray squirrel playing on Evar's knoll. The senator has sixty fine Percheron horses, each of which is worth at least $1,000. He bought some of them over from France and he has one horse three years old which weighs 2,000 pounds. He has four months old colts which weigh as much as the colts of 1888, and he has his own theory of horse breeding. He fell in love with the Percheron horse in making a study of Ross Bonheur's famous picture, "The Horse Fair," and he believes it is the finest horse that walks. He claims that it is a cross between the Arabian and the Norman, and it was with this idea that he sent his farm manager to Jerusalem to pick him out in the stable for his son. A year ago he found that very few of the Arabian horses were sound, and Palmer's permit from the sultan to take away a horse from his dominion amounted to nothing. Outside of Percheron horses Senator Palmer runs to Jersey cows. His butter costs him $1 a pound, but he gets $2 worth of fun out of every pound, and he gets cows which he keeps as a perpetual source of amusement to him. I wish could give you a picture of his barn. The cow stable is as

and the back of where the animals stand is so clean that you could drop a cubic handkerchief on it and pick it up without soiling. The woodwork of this stable is polished yellow pine finished in oil, and it is as well finished as that of many cottages. Senator Palmer's care in his treatment of his cattle and horses, and he has raised in the stable for his son. A whip is never used on his horses and no lead words can be spoken to the cows. A regular record is kept of the milk each animal gives, and each cow has its name and its page in the herd book. It takes a steam engine to do the work of these cow stables. The hay is raised to the second story by a crane. The stall and corn are ground into meal in the same way and the water is pumped on and I age it up by steam. Senator Palmer believes in modern inventions. He blows out his stumps by dynamite in clearing up his land and he has a pond in front of his house into which the water of which is kept fresh by the pumping of a steam engine.

This Log Cabin

of Senator Palmer's is, I judge, fifty feet square. He lives in it throughout the summer and he tells me it is way ahead of a castle in Spain. There is a wide hall running through its center and on one side of this is an immense sitting room or parlor filled with antique furniture which Palmer got at the old Vermont store and brought out to Detroit. On the other side of the hall is a dining room which must be fully twenty feet square. This is also furnished in the style of our forefathers and if you take a meal with the senator you will find he has the most delicious ham in his larder and that his spring chickens are tender. He has a good cook and it is a recommendation for the man to know that the keeps his servants a long time. Some of Mr. Palmer's girls have been with her for years and the senator is so careful of their comforts as of his own.

I was one of the party of Washington correspondents who visited Cape May last week as the guests of the Pennsylvania railroad company. While there we stopped at the Stockton hotel, which is now kept by W. Walton, the man who made himself famous by his horse-racing bets in England some years ago. He looks like and has given up betting and settled down to keeping hotel on the same scale that he played the book-makers. Picture to yourself a well-filled old man of middle height, with a big, round head and a complexion as fair as the girls of old Ireland. Let him have eyes as blue as the sides of Greece, with a pleasant smile about a well-shaped mouth and you have some idea of the "Plunger." He is a gentleman from the ground up and he tells me that he has never got any good out of money made on horse races. He does not like to talk of his own horse racing experiences, and says he has not been on a race since 1884 and that he has come down to legitimate business. He is a man with ability and I found out of him some things of history. He talks of some of the thousands in the most modest manner, and in the enterprises where he has flourished he has played dollars and other men play cents. "I made," said he, "$100,000 a year as an oil broker, at the time of the oil excitement, and I acted as agent for Sam Piny when he bought all the whisky in the country just before the tax was put on. At this time I made $50,000 a year and got me for $100,000. I have never been anything but a money maker, and since I have been old enough to work I have made at least $25,000 every year."

Tell me something of your political experience," said I.

"I was a candidate for sheriff in Philadelphia in 1872. There were two other candidates—ones named Lewis, and another Harry Blushka, now the member of congress. Well, Lewis was elected, and the next year they nominated me for the recorder of deeds. I went into the thing systematic ally, organized six hundred election districts, spent $50,000 and was elected. Shortly after this I took charge of the big hotels at the Centennial exposition and owned the Continental and the Globe. This was a hot summer and the people wouldn't patronize us and I made nothing. I tried to get on my feet by buying Pennsylvania railroad stock and I had at one time 34,000 shares. I went down and I lost $50,000 but I then bought the St. James hotel in New York and made it pay, got into trouble about the purchase of it from the owners and in 1881 found myself

Down with Nervous Prostration.

"I went down to Europe, and I was with this time about $300,000. I went to Bohemia and got cured and returned to London on my way home just about the time of the derby. I went out intending not to bet a dollar, and made there what the world would call fortune. I first put $100,000 on one of my friends' horses at five to one and made $500. I put another $100 on the horse of another friend and made $1,000. I then went to the 6000 more. I now had $1,100. I took $1,000 of it and put it on Iruquois at six to one and Iruquois brought me in $6,000. Shortly after this I put $100,000 on Peter at the Royal Hunt Cup against $35,000 and Peter won. At the St. Leger I put $4,000 on Iruquois against $9,000 and I won again. After other winnings I backed Foxhall for the Derby and put up $40,000 against $40,000 and Foxhall walked in. I then backed him to win the Cambriggshire for $35,000 and he stuck on his tongue and won it. It was so with other ventures, and my winnings all told amounted to $1,000,000. I had gone to betting as an amusement and I was thunderstruck when I found upon my return to America that I was loaded upon by horse men and had become famous as "The Plunger." I don't like the title nor the reputation. I am a man of a family and I expect to earn my money from now on by the sweat of my brow and brain. My advice to young men and to old men who are investing in races is to

and till the soil and to make racing unprofitable to not patronizing it. "What do you think of Cape May?" I asked. "I think it's going to be the greatest seaside resort along the Atlantic coast," was the reply. "I made $20,000 of this hotel last year, and I am going to make $400,000 this year. I bought it for $60,000 when it was losing money and when I put $50,000 on it in repairs they said I was a fool. I believe that Cape May is going to be the great spring resort of the United States. We have warm weather here in winter as at Fort Monroe and I think no reason why we should not have all the spring resorts of the United States build a sun parlor 400 feet long and I'll put $50,000 more into fitting this place up as a spring watering place. The Hygieia hotel at Fort Monroe makes $400,000 a year and there is no reason why a Cape May hotel should not do equally well."

While at Cape May I took a ride up to the president's cottage. It is located about two miles from the main city and it stands back here on the edge of the waves. It is by no means an expensive cottage and at a glance I should say it could be replicated for $5,000. There are no fancy fireplaces about it and it is painted a light drab, is full of stories and has wide galleries running around it. Mrs. Harrison, I understand, has been much worried over the criticisms which have been made as to her acceptance of it, and I understand that the president did not know that the cottage was to be given until after the transfer had been made and the deeds recorded.

George Alfred Townsend tells me that his novel entitled "Alexander Hamilton and Mrs. Reynolds" is selling well. Its first edition of 2,000 has been sold and a second edition of 2,000 is now being issued. The book is Mr. Townsend's first novel. It was originally one hundred pages longer than it is now and he had to cut it down to suit the ideas of the publisher. The probability is that he will make some money out of it. He made $600 out of "The Entailed Hat" and he once told me that the same time that he had put upon this book would have netted him over $30,000. He made $1,000 out of his book in Washington which he published ten years ago, and he has been making $3,000 a year and upwards on newspaper correspondence since the war. His newspaper work now nets him about $11,000 a year. One of the brightest newspaper writers of today is Frank A. Burr, who is now on his way to London to write syndicate letters. Burr paid Parson Newman $200 to write the death bed scene of General Grant for his biography of Grant and he makes a great deal of money in literature.

Spent in Newspaper Writing

John Moran is a will, the proprietor of the Norfolk Herald, last week and was surprised to hear him say that the Herald had not a great national circulation. He tells me that Williams, the man who does all the funny work on the Herald, and whose letters are copied all over the country, writes two and a half columns a day, and that he is one of the finest general paragraphs in the United States. He writes a half a column of funny matter every day, and his salary is less than a hundred dollars a month. This is all the Herald can afford to pay and Mr. Williams, although he has had many other good offers, prefers to stay where he can make a small salary without friction.

The Bells.

The editor of Sartain's Magazine, speaking of Poe's poem, "The Bells," shortly after its first publication said: "The Bells," by Mr. Poe, which was published in our last number, has been very generally commended. It is a curious piece of literary history connected with the poem which we may as well give now as at any other time. It illustrates the gradual development of an idea in the mind of a man of original genius. This poem came into our possession about a year ago. At that time it consisted of eighteen lines. About six months after this we received the poem enlarged and altered nearly to its present size and form, and about three months after the author's death it was enlarged and enlarged in its composition, in which condition the poem was left at the time of his death. We may remark in passing that this is not Mr. Poe's last poem, as some of the papers have asserted. We have on hand one of his which is probably his last. It was received in the same manner as this. We will give it in the January number."

The following is the poem of eighteen lines which Mr. Sartain says the poet first sent him:

THE BELLS. [A Song.] The bells! Hear the bells! The merry wedding bells! How fairly-like a melody they swell! From the silver tinkling bells Of the bells, bells, bells! Of the bells! The bells!—at the bells! The bells!—at the bells! Hear the tolling of the bells, Hear the tolling of the bells, Hear the tolling of the bells, Hear the tolling of the bells! How horrible a melody these flats From their throats— From their throats— How I shudder at the notes From the silver tinkling bells Of the bells, bells, bells! Of the bells.

A GYPSY ON DREAMS.

Read This, Then Go Home and Eat Too Much Cheese.

According to the gypsy, to dream that you bathe in clear water is a sign that you will enjoy good health; if muddy, the death of relatives or friends. To see a bath, anger; to take a warm bath denotes happiness; if you take one either too hot or too cold, trouble. If you dream without going into the water you may expect trouble, but it will soon pass away; a sea bath is a sign of honor and increase of fortune. If any one dream that he or she is ascending to heaven or is ascending to his delights, it shows that some joyful event is to happen, such as the birth of an heir to childless people, good fortune to those who are poor, distinction to the wealthy and high honors to the ambitious. To have such a dream if foretells an early marriage under the most auspicious circumstances, and that their wedding will be attended with troops of congratulating friends, who will shower presents upon them. On the other hand, to dream that you are descending to hell, or that you are in a dream, it foretells an early marriage under the most auspicious circumstances, and that their wedding will be attended with troops of congratulating friends, who will shower presents upon them.
