

THE CITY.

The bank clearings yesterday amounted to $92,423.32.

A large collection was received at the customs office from Germany for H. Wachendorf of Falmerage.

The executive committee of the republican state central committee will meet in Lincoln this evening.

The Pacific express company has commenced removing its new quarters at the corner of Fourteenth and Harney streets.

The annual examination of applicants for the position of teachers in the public schools will begin today at the high school.

The case of John Morrissey, the ex-politician, accused of a alleged assault with intent to kill, was called up yesterday and Morrissey was dismissed.

Miss Zemora Gray of Salt Lake will give a literary and musical entertainment at the young ladies' home, 109 South Seventeenth street on Wednesday evening next.

Broadstreet reports the dissolution of the firm of Cornell & Osborn at Grand Island, one of the biggest wholesale fruit and fancy grocery firms in the state. Mr. Cornell retired from the firm.

Sheriff Boyd took the following prisoners to the penitentiary yesterday: Albert Arnold, grand larceny and Lewis Coleman, burglary, both for one year; Thomas King and John Howard, burglary, two years.

A. Bohannon, colored, claimed that Annie Hoffman had stolen his watch and caused her arrest. She denied the theft, but Judge Hesley thought that five days in jail would be a good sent up to him according.

Anna Anderson has reported to the police the loss of a lot of clothing and household goods, and swore out a search warrant for a house on the north side of the city on the west side of Fifteenth between Jackson and Jones, where she has reason to believe the property has been concealed.

The Newsmen's Club of Omaha, an organization for social purposes, has filed articles of incorporation. The capital stock is $1000, divided into shares of $10 each.

The incorporators are Jacob Washington Robinson, William Thomas Lester, William A. J. Waters, A. H. Lenehan and F. B. Graves.

BOSS PRINTERS.

The annual convention of the national typists will be held in Boston, commencing on Tuesday next and will be attended by leading printing firms from all parts of the country. The delegates from this city will leave for Boston Tuesday next and comprise the following: Henry Gibson, Samuel Ross, J. Campbell of the Lincolnville printing company, C. H. Klop and Julius Fetter.

Marriage Licenses.

Judge Shields issued the following marriage licenses yesterday:

Name and address. Age.
Edward McKeon, Omaha..... 23
Julia Carroll, Omaha..... 18
William H. Davis, Omaha..... 25
Ida B. Adams, Omaha..... 21

A Strange Case.

A ten-year-old girl named Clara Moore is being cared for at police headquarters until her relatives can be found. She says she was taken to the house of a strange woman a few days ago with the understanding that she would let the girl go to her husband in the Black Hills, and the girl could not find her way home. She has a father and brother and they reside in the southern part of the city.

Supplemental School.

Contractor Garmong, who has the contract for erecting the two-room buildings on the Hickory, Saratoga and Central Park schools, has commenced the work on all the buildings, which are to be completed within thirty days. Each school is to cost $2000. The buildings are to be erected on the following sites at a cost of $344 each: Paul, Duran, New, Franklin, Amber, Davyport, Forest, Bancroft, Hickory, Lake, Center and West Side. These buildings were not as good as the specifications required in the erection of the new buildings.

Please see the non-telegraphic toilet adjuster.

Last Year's Corn.

Judge Semberg has returned from two weeks' trip through Phelps, Clay, Fillmore and Kearney counties.

"I learned one thing," said the judge, "and that is that the farmers of Nebraska are not as bad as some reports would indicate. In some cases the crop is not as good as it was a very light, while in others the prospect is very satisfactory. Most of the farmers have great rows of corn with last year's corn, and with that, 50 ears abounding, the farmers in that part of the state are all right. They haven't the usual abundance, but the increase in price on what they have will enable them to average very well."

Hot Weather and Accidents.

The mechanics and mechanics around this hot weather is fearful, but if you will take a few of Krause's Headache Capsules each day you will find the temperature will be reduced and the likelihood of sunstroke or prostration absolutely counteracted. For safety by all druggists.

Sun Stroke.

Now is the time that we accept time to prevent sunstrokes, headaches, etc. By reducing the temperature all these distressing evils will be prevented. Krause's Headache Capsules are the best.

AN OMAHA TORPEDO.

It Moves Underwater and is Fired by the Government.

Mr. J. N. H. Patrick of this city is the possessor of a torpedo which is destined to bring him a liberal supply of wealth and security.

A second experiment of the torpedo took place last Tuesday afternoon at College Point in the presence of the board of naval experts appointed by the government. The engine made nearly one-half a knot faster time than the terms of the contract required. The torpedo costs about $3000. It is forty-seven feet long and weighs about four tons.

The torpedo is fired by a propeller whose revolutions are controlled by compressed air, controlled by electricity. The electricity is conveyed from the shore through a slender cable which is coiled in the rear part of the craft and which pays out as the craft proceeds. The torpedo can be turned to starboard or port at the will of its operator or vice versa.

The explosive matter is stored in space situated at the front end of the case. The government's contract with the torpedo company provides for the building of three torpedoes having a capacity to hold 400 pounds of gunpowder. The charge must be three feet below the surface of the water, and the speed must be twenty knots per hour. The board of naval experts consists of Commanders Theodore P. Jewell of the Newport torpedo station, Commander G. A. Converse of the Enterprise, and Commander K. E. Kenney, head of the electric lighting department of the navy.

The experiment was a grand success and the torpedoes will be manufactured as soon as possible.

THE LAIR OF THE TIGER.

It is invaded by Policemen with Crowbars and Sledge-Hammers.

The battle of poker chips in vogue at the sacred precincts of the police court room yesterday, through the open door leading from Chief Seavey's office, where the head of the police department sat toying with a good-sized pile of the red, white, blue and yellow ivory discs.

Judge Hesley occasionally cast a wistful glance in the direction whence the sound emanated, but no invitation to join in a friendly little game was received. The chief was evidently playing solitaire.

Outside in the captain's office, a number of tables covered with green cloth were stacked up in one corner, and a faro "layout" peeped cautiously from between the legs of a solid piece of furniture that had apparently seen many a long day and night. There were two sets of poker players were numerous and invisible hands had been dealt, somebody by the man sitting nearest the wall.

It was a rather suspicious looking set of material and seemed altogether at odds in the noisy sanctum sanctorum of law and order. But its presence is very easily explained.

There had been an alleged raid in the gamblers' houses. What was found was a master of conjecture, but the property above mentioned is not the police court to show for it.

It was a frantic scene, for the officers, after a good deal of mysterious bustling around on the part of the chief and several of his sergeants and detectives, the patrol was gobbled away from the station filled to overflowing with brass buttons and blue coats, and the chief was gone.

The wagon hove up to Henry Hennberger's place, 1521 Douglas, to Henry Hennberger, who was there. He was an officer at both the front and rear doors.

Having failed to support the family, the boy was compelled at an early age to go into stores as errand boys, to help support their mother. About the first place Tom got was in the jewelry stores of Messrs. Gardner & Co., then located on the corner of Fourth and Locust streets in this city. The firm had the first floor for their sales room and the basement was filled up with rows of shelving on which were placed various kinds of gold and silver plate, chases on dial clock, to the more expensive six day clock. It was the duty of Tom to comb down every nook and cranny of the walls in the basement. It occurred to him that the four old men had neglected to do his duty, so he pulled up his stockings and Tom went about digging. The result of 100 dimes would up without any regard to correctness can be imagined. The noise made by the striking of the clocks nearly drove the proprietor and his wife wild and Tom was discharged.

The boy was given a note sent to his mother stating that her son was too smart for the jeweler business.

In 1891 Moffat enlisted in the First infantry Missouri state militia as a private in company A, and it was there I found him, when I was the assistant provost marshal general of the state militia.

The boy was a member of the 10th regiment of cavalry, a search warrant being the "open season" that gained for the others a ready admittance. They dashed up stairs and found about fifteen.

At Foley's they went through the same performance and found the very same thing, on a little more scale.

At Hennberger's the doors were found tightly locked and admission was refused. Search warrants were not regarded there as all powerful documents, and an officer was dispatched to get a sledge hammer and crowbar.

The wagon hove up to Henry Hennberger's place, 1521 Douglas, to Henry Hennberger, who was there. He was an officer at both the front and rear doors.

Having failed to support the family, the boy was compelled at an early age to go into stores as errand boys, to help support their mother.

Tom was a member of the 10th regiment of cavalry, a search warrant being the "open season" that gained for the others a ready admittance. They dashed up stairs and found about fifteen.

At Foley's they went through the same performance and found the very same thing, on a little more scale.

At Hennberger's the doors were found tightly locked and admission was refused. Search warrants were not regarded there as all powerful documents, and an officer was dispatched to get a sledge hammer and crowbar.

The wagon hove up to Henry Hennberger's place, 1521 Douglas, to Henry Hennberger, who was there. He was an officer at both the front and rear doors.

Having failed to support the family, the boy was compelled at an early age to go into stores as errand boys, to help support their mother.

Tom was a member of the 10th regiment of cavalry, a search warrant being the "open season" that gained for the others a ready admittance. They dashed up stairs and found about fifteen.

At Foley's they went through the same performance and found the very same thing, on a little more scale.

At Hennberger's the doors were found tightly locked and admission was refused. Search warrants were not regarded there as all powerful documents, and an officer was dispatched to get a sledge hammer and crowbar.

The wagon hove up to Henry Hennberger's place, 1521 Douglas, to Henry Hennberger, who was there. He was an officer at both the front and rear doors.

Having failed to support the family, the boy was compelled at an early age to go into stores as errand boys, to help support their mother.

Tom was a member of the 10th regiment of cavalry, a search warrant being the "open season" that gained for the others a ready admittance. They dashed up stairs and found about fifteen.

At Foley's they went through the same performance and found the very same thing, on a little more scale.

At Hennberger's the doors were found tightly locked and admission was refused. Search warrants were not regarded there as all powerful documents, and an officer was dispatched to get a sledge hammer and crowbar.

The wagon hove up to Henry Hennberger's place, 1521 Douglas, to Henry Hennberger, who was there. He was an officer at both the front and rear doors.

Having failed to support the family, the boy was compelled at an early age to go into stores as errand boys, to help support their mother.

Tom was a member of the 10th regiment of cavalry, a search warrant being the "open season" that gained for the others a ready admittance. They dashed up stairs and found about fifteen.

At Foley's they went through the same performance and found the very same thing, on a little more scale.

At Hennberger's the doors were found tightly locked and admission was refused. Search warrants were not regarded there as all powerful documents, and an officer was dispatched to get a sledge hammer and crowbar.

The wagon hove up to Henry Hennberger's place, 1521 Douglas, to Henry Hennberger, who was there. He was an officer at both the front and rear doors.

Having failed to support the family, the boy was compelled at an early age to go into stores as errand boys, to help support their mother.

Tom was a member of the 10th regiment of cavalry, a search warrant being the "open season" that gained for the others a ready admittance. They dashed up stairs and found about fifteen.

At Foley's they went through the same performance and found the very same thing, on a little more scale.

At Hennberger's the doors were found tightly locked and admission was refused. Search warrants were not regarded there as all powerful documents, and an officer was dispatched to get a sledge hammer and crowbar.

The wagon hove up to Henry Hennberger's place, 1521 Douglas, to Henry Hennberger, who was there. He was an officer at both the front and rear doors.

Having failed to support the family, the boy was compelled at an early age to go into stores as errand boys, to help support their mother.

Tom was a member of the 10th regiment of cavalry, a search warrant being the "open season" that gained for the others a ready admittance. They dashed up stairs and found about fifteen.

At Foley's they went through the same performance and found the very same thing, on a little more scale.

At Hennberger's the doors were found tightly locked and admission was refused. Search warrants were not regarded there as all powerful documents, and an officer was dispatched to get a sledge hammer and crowbar.

The wagon hove up to Henry Hennberger's place, 1521 Douglas, to Henry Hennberger, who was there. He was an officer at both the front and rear doors.

Having failed to support the family, the boy was compelled at an early age to go into stores as errand boys, to help support their mother.

Tom was a member of the 10th regiment of cavalry, a search warrant being the "open season" that gained for the others a ready admittance. They dashed up stairs and found about fifteen.

At Foley's they went through the same performance and found the very same thing, on a little more scale.

At Hennberger's the doors were found tightly locked and admission was refused. Search warrants were not regarded there as all powerful documents, and an officer was dispatched to get a sledge hammer and crowbar.

The wagon hove up to Henry Hennberger's place, 1521 Douglas, to Henry Hennberger, who was there. He was an officer at both the front and rear doors.

Having failed to support the family, the boy was compelled at an early age to go into stores as errand boys, to help support their mother.

Tom was a member of the 10th regiment of cavalry, a search warrant being the "open season" that gained for the others a ready admittance. They dashed up stairs and found about fifteen.

At Foley's they went through the same performance and found the very same thing, on a little more scale.

At Hennberger's the doors were found tightly locked and admission was refused. Search warrants were not regarded there as all powerful documents, and an officer was dispatched to get a sledge hammer and crowbar.

The wagon hove up to Henry Hennberger's place, 1521 Douglas, to Henry Hennberger, who was there. He was an officer at both the front and rear doors.

Having failed to support the family, the boy was compelled at an early age to go into stores as errand boys, to help support their mother.

Tom was a member of the 10th regiment of cavalry, a search warrant being the "open season" that gained for the others a ready admittance. They dashed up stairs and found about fifteen.

At Foley's they went through the same performance and found the very same thing, on a little more scale.

At Hennberger's the doors were found tightly locked and admission was refused. Search warrants were not regarded there as all powerful documents, and an officer was dispatched to get a sledge hammer and crowbar.

The wagon hove up to Henry Hennberger's place, 1521 Douglas, to Henry Hennberger, who was there. He was an officer at both the front and rear doors.

Having failed to support the family, the boy was compelled at an early age to go into stores as errand boys, to help support their mother.

Tom was a member of the 10th regiment of cavalry, a search warrant being the "open season" that gained for the others a ready admittance. They dashed up stairs and found about fifteen.

At Foley's they went through the same performance and found the very same thing, on a little more scale.

At Hennberger's the doors were found tightly locked and admission was refused. Search warrants were not regarded there as all powerful documents, and an officer was dispatched to get a sledge hammer and crowbar.

The wagon hove up to Henry Hennberger's place, 1521 Douglas, to Henry Hennberger, who was there. He was an officer at both the front and rear doors.

Having failed to support the family, the boy was compelled at an early age to go into stores as err