The attendance at all of the churches yesterday was very large. The day was very pleasant and all of the absent ministers had returned to their pulpits.

The Presbyterian and Congregational churches, which have had no preaching for several Sundays, resumed yesterday, their pastors having returned from their vaca-

The butchers had a grand time at their pierte at Loveland yesterday, and everything passed off quietly and harmoniously until a few moments before the train started for town. Then some of the boys who accompanied it got into a little difficulty and were obliged to bring home some discolored eyes. It is intimated that some sensational developments in connection with the Maher shooting will be forthcoming in a few days. There various stories affoat bearing upon the importance than is now given to it. The sensational story that Officer Neyes had left the city and could not be found, which was published in a morning paper yesterday, is entirely without foundation. The officer was at the police station all afternoon and until 9 o'clock Saturday night, and spent the remainder of the sight at his home by the bedside of his sick wife. He is still suffering seriously from the effects of theterrible beat-

A trio of toughs, composed of Elmer Smith, Joe Weir and Charles Young, alias Butch, got into a fight near the Northwestern depot yesterday and were run in. The arrests were made upon warrants issued from Schurz's ccurt and charged them with assault and bat-tery and disturbing the peace. Knives were drawn and a serious cutting affray was nar-rowly averted. Young is the fellow who was arrested for adultery with the Birchler woman of Omaha a few days ago and Smith is another of the inmates of the dive run by Mrs. Hamiltor, at 1222 Second avenue. Nettle Baker has filed a petition in the distriet court asking for a divorce from E. D. Baker, jr., and the case will come up at this term of court. The petition of the plaintiff alleges that she was married to the defendant in April, 1888, and of course she has al ways been a true and loving wife. Her ground of complaint is that last spring, in February, and at different other times which the plaintiff does not specify, the defendant committed the crime of adultery with one Sarah Bennett. He has also abused and neglected his wife, and so she wants a di-

John Maher, oneof the victims of Officer Noves' revolver, is still at the Ogden house and resting quite comfortably. Dr. Bellenger asserts that he has about six chances in ten of recovery and feels very sanguine that he (will pull him through, Another effort will be made today to locate the ball, and it will be decided whether or not it is necessary to erform a surgical operation for its removal. Im Maher, the other victim, is at St. Berard's hospital, and is feeling quite comfortable. At 11 o'clock today the surgeons will not out the bullet that is located in the fieshy part of his leg.

A warrant was issued late Saturday night by Justice Schurz for the arrest of Officer Noyes. The information was filed by Ed with intent to kill his two brothers, John and Jim. The warrant was placed in the hands of Constable Covalt, and he spent a large portion of the night in company with some of Maher's friends endeavoring to find the officer. Yesterday Noyes came to the police station and surrendered himself, and a bond was fixed up by County Attorney Organ for $1,000 for his appearance today in Schurz's court.

A serious runaway and smashup occurred on Sixth street in front of the postoffice yes terday afternoon, in which two carpenters whose names could not be learned, had a narrow escape from death. They were both slightly under the influence of intoxicants. and in attempting to turn the corner of Broadway and Sixth street while going at a lively gait the top buggy they were riding in was overturned. The horse ran away, drag-ging the two men in the wreck. The legs of one of them were protruding through the wheel, and both were under the buggy as it was dragged over the pavement on its side. The horse was stopped before it had gone far and the men were taken out. Both were se verely braised, but not seriously hurt. The

It is reported that a stranger, whose name could not be learned, visited several saloon Saturday night and got drunk. He had about $300 in his pockets. At the saloon next to the Revere house it is said he lost $50 of the money shaking dice. He was taken in tow there by a well known crook, who knew that he had money on his person, and led off or South Eighth street and into the weeds be tween Fifth and Sixth avenues. Holder was told to follow, and he did so to the end of his beat. There he left two men to follow the crook and his com-panion while he went to make bis hourly repanion while he went to make the vicinity the nort. When he returned to the vicinity the en were gone, as were also the stranger and e crook. A Number of Prominent Citizens Talk About the School Board Difficulty.

Complimenting the Work of the Deaf and Dumb Pupils-Was the Stranger Robbed?-Personal

REV. FRANKLIN TALKS OF PALACES.

Points and News Notes. The school board muddle continues to attract a great deal of attention, and the gentlemen who imagined they solved the knotty problems that confronted them by heroically cutting the Gordian knot are finding the higher element of public opinion is not sustaining them with the unanimity they desired and hoped for. Yesterday opinions were very freely expressed concerning the summary treatment accorded Prof. Mc-Naughton, and the concensus THE BEE is nabled to reflect strongly condemns the action of the board. The project of calling a reeting of prominent citizens and demanding the reinstatement of Dr. McNaughton was carnestly discussed yesterday. Said one citizen whose taxes annually amount to thousands of dollars: "I do not approve the action of the board, the excuse that the sumand mary dismissal of both the superintendent and the principal of the high school was the only way to solve the difficulty is not well taken. In fact it is no excuse at all. Being familiar with the history of the difficulty in all its minutia I am prepared to express an intelligent opinion. The members of the board who congratulate themselves that they applied heroic cautery to the bleeding wounds of the board and its employes will realize that they have used a club and an axe instead of delicate surgical instruments; that they attempted to get rid of the unpleasantness of a little inflamed boil by lopping off the arm upon which the infected little finger

"The only justification I have heard advanced by the members of the board who voted for the dismissal of Dr. McNaughton," said another, "was their desire to promote harmony in the board and remove auses of friction that are operating so dele-criously against the interests of the public schools of the city. The position is not sus-tained by the facts. They claim that there was an irreconcilable conflict between the superintendent and the principal of the high school that disturbed the harmony of the board and the schools. This could not be. There could be no quarrel between such men as Prof. McNaughton and Prof. Stevens. Stevens may have been ambitious and schem-ing and working to overthrow the superintendent, which is the undoubted fact, but McNaughton was not and could not have been disturbed by it. It unquestionably disturbed the harmony of the board, but it did not affect the city schools, and if the gentlemen of the board were so deeply affected by it and their claim that they were working only for the best interests of the schools was true and their only desire was to protect the school interests, their proper course would have been to have resigned themselves instend of insisting on the resignation of others.

was located and killing the patient.

"There was more, much more, trouble between the members of the board," other gentleman, "than there was in the superintendency of the schools, and it seems to me that it would have been much more appropriate if the gentlemen had happened to have thought of it, to have tendered their own resignations as members of the board instead of throwing out the heads of the schools at the last moment. This would have worked no hardship to anybody, and no charge of in-justice could ever be made and no demoralization of the schools could have followed.'

"I have nobody to defend or attack," said another citizen, "out I think a grave mistake was made by firing the superintendent and the principal of the high school at the last moment. I have heard that other teachers than Prof. Stevens were unable to work harmoniously with Superintendent McNaughton, and I have seen letters in which some say that they would not return and fill their contracts with the board if McNaughton was retained, but I think it would have been a good deal better for the board to have let any of the subordinate teachers go than to demoralize the whole school system by throwing out the superinand the others alluded to and their vacancies could have been filled without delay or trouble, but it will be difficult to find any new man capable of jumping in here and picking up the work that McNaughton has ione so successfully for the past seven

"While I do not desire to reflect in the least upon any of the members of the present board, for they are all gentlemen whom I esteem highly as my personal friends," re marked another man after carnestly dis-cussing the deplorable situation, "the whole trouble is the result of lugging the public schools into the camps of the political parties and dragging them through the filthy mire The whole thing is political and the party lines are drawn as distinctly as they are in the city and state administra tions. The result is deplorable and dis-heartening to those who desire to see the schools prosper. Teachers, and even the anitors, are selected with reference to their Palaces.

"Palaces" was the very pleasant subject of an interesting address by Rev. Franklin at the First Methodist church yesterday moraing. It was the last service to be held in the old building, which is to be tern down at once to give place to the spleadid palace of brick and stone that is soon to be reared there. The speaker found his text in the thirty-fifth chapter of Exodus, twenty-nigth verse, He described the present as the age of palaces, and referred to the corn palace at Sioux City, the sugar palace at Grand Island, the coal palace at Ottumwa and the blue grass palace at Creston. Every industry had reared its palace, and great enterprises occupy the thought and care of men on every side, enterprises looking toward material improvement and blessing. Men are anxious. The speculative world is alive, anxious and active. Opportunities are cagerly sought for. Tircless, restless activity abounds everywhere. America scorns and laughs at the pessimist. The radical, hopeful, energetic, enterprising, pushing man of today; is an optimist. He sees the bow of promise. He hears the song of triumph. He feels the thrill and inspiration of a new life. He ventures freely where doors stand open wide. God looks approvingly upon the bisy man along every line of human industry. man along every line of human industry. The world abounds with illustrations of his favor and blessings. Agriculture, art, music, architecture, everything where He directs the best may be found. Read the accounts of the building of the tabernacle the, plans and specifications drawn in heaven, rich with gold, silver and brass, fine linen, blue, purple and scarlet. And they made the plate of the holy crown of pure gold and wrote upon it a writing like to the engravings of a signet, "holiness to the o do, dare and suffer today as ever.

He spoke of the heroism of the church builders all over the world, and detailed the history of the church in which he was speak-ing. Twenty-six years ago it was the site of one of the worst saloons, dance halls and gambling hells in the city and was called the Ocean Wave. It was the source of nearly all wickedness, woe and crime to be poured upon the city. It wielded an influence that blighted the whole city and balefully cast its poison after the departing emigrants on their way toward the setting sun. But prayers, tears, importunities and the restless desire of the Christian people for its removal ac-complished its destruction. Fire from heaven consumed it. Upon the ashes that covered the site where crime had reared its altar there arose through the efforts of Brother Knotts and other Christians the present church, that has stood until God has strengthened his work here until a more glorious temple has been made possi-ble. This old church and the newpalace that is to be rearred on its foundations of heroic faith in God. Who may measure the scope of the influence and power of the old brisk church since the day the now sainted Eddy and Bishop Ames dedicated it. It has stood for twenty-six years facing Broadway, the beacon light of all. This pulpit has not at any time given out an emasculated gospel.

The speaker recounted in a dramatic man-er the great work that the church had witnessed since its dedication, how it had been the means of bringing salvation to young and old, how it had been the marriage altar where many of the old citizens had pledged their vows before God, and how its altar had een shrouded for the dead who passed rough it to the beyond. He then asked all iose who had been present at the dedication twenty-six years ago to stand up. The re-sponse brought a little band of sixteen out of he thousand who witnessed the cerem he speaker then described the new building hat was soon to be erected under the care of the efficial board, and then spoke of the tre-mendous progress of the gospel, not only here, but all over the world. It is like the mighty ocean that rolls its waves on the widespreading waves of a hundred empires, cet repleaishes and fills with its tide the lit The onward march of the King is full of triumph.

The Work of the Deaf. Superintendent Rothert and a force of eachers have completed at Des Moines, for the state fair, a display of the educational and industrial progress of the state institution for the deaf and dumb, located in Council Bluffs. The Register has this to say of it: The society unfortunately gave the institution only a very small area for the purpose of the display. It is located in the north-west corner of the exposition hall. Cheap, jewelry-for-sale affairs occupy more space, but the Council Bluffs state institution has at least made a good start. It is a good place to make such an exhibition. lowa's institutions are scattered over the state so that it is im possible for any large number of people to visit them. The next best thing is to have an honest representation of the work brought to the state fair, where thousands of people from all over the state come together. None should pass by Superintendent Rothert's display. The work that is on exhibition is all of real merit and shows that good use has been made of the time of the pupils. In the art department there are oil paintings, crayon portraits and pastel work, all executed with considerable skill. There is a crayon picture of the Angelus, made after a photograph of that famous French masterpiece. The ladies will be interested in the really fine speci-mens of needle and fancy work. There are all kinds of embroidery to be seen; pretty crazy work, shams, throws, handkerchiefs and everything that goes to make a pretty display. The more useful work is not for-gotten. There are brooms made by the pupils, carving work, etc. New fall goods just received at Reiter's, mer-

The Bar Docket.

The bar docket for the September term of court has been issued. It shows that there are now on the district court docket here 768 eases, of which forty-six are criminal, 340 equity and 382 law. There are thirty-eight divorce cases. Among the interesting cases which appear on the docket are some instituted by the East Omaha land company against the squatters with whom the com pany was unable to make a settlement, and the suits brought against the company by Henry Combs and others over the same mat-The ancient suit of H. The crimmal docket is unusually large and the cases which appear on the list unusually important. The shooting of Friday night and the subsequent arrests will add to the number some five cases and will make the total, therefore, more than fifty.

A Little Blaze. The fire department was called out at 10 o'clock last night to suppress an incipient conflagration that had started in the Frank lin printing office opposite the Rink livery stable. The office is owned by Francis Ainsworth, and he is engaged in moving it to another location. About half of the material has been taken out, and last night the proprietor was in the place planning the morning's work. He had set a glass kerosene lamp on a box, and in passing by it knocked it over. The lamp was broken the fall and the oil ignited by the wick. It spread over a pile of greasy paper that laid near one of the presses, and in an instant the whole mass was in flames. The department responded quickly but by the time the first water was turned or the whole interior of the room was scorched by the flames. The fire was quickly subducd The building is owned by John Churchil and was not damaged to any extent beyond the blistering of the woodwork in the one room. The owner of the printing office can-not make any estimate of his damage, but it will be considerable, confined to the printing

The Denver Republican thus refers to Dad Clarke: "Old Dad Clarke, a weather-beaten scow, with a face resembling the bow of a rivertag, was in the box for the visitors. Dad soon made his presence felt by his ability to kick, which far excelled his delivery, and war-soon made the butt of the few wags wh had braved the cold to witness these exponents of the national game." All of which Dad enjoys immensely, as, so he says, it saves ad-vertising expenses.

Secretary Roche says in the Pioneer-Press "For the benefit of those interested, it is stated once more that the disputed game be-tween Minneapolis and Milwaukee is credited to Mianenpolis, and the so-called exhibi-tion game between Des Moiaes and Kansas City and won by the former, July 18, is eliminated from the record. It remains for the board of directors to say whether this game will be counted or not. The reason it is now aken out of the record is that both manage agreed to make it an exhibition game, and so notified the umpire. The Milwaukee-Minne-apolis game will also have to be decided by the association's directory.

Sandy Girard Vassar Griswold, the newly married sporting editor of The Omana Bee, gives the following accurate description of one of the Sioux City's pitchers: Widner has a peculiar delivery and the fans guyed him unmercifully. BAt present the Kansas City team has decidedly the best show to unfurl the coveted flag The players are putting up a superior quality of ball, the pitchers are in excellent condition and all are imbued with the idea that they nust either win the pennant of quit the ball ield. Manager Manning also keeps his men well in hand, and although he is not more than and average player, he has a knack of using his men to the best advantage possible. It is an indisputable fact that since he has taken the helm the Blues have made rapid progress toward the top. With the closeness of the race and the advantage on their side, they can be looked upon as almost sure pennant winners. With a percentage of .616, and thirty-three games yet to play, fifteen of which will be played upon their own diamond, at which place they finish the season, there is no reason why the ex-American association team should not carry off the honors .- Den-

RIDDEN BY A SKELETON.

An Uncanny Scene to be Witnessed in Swedish Seas.

Who does not remember the crow that, as Æsop and La Fontaise relate, in imitation of an eagle it has seen, pounced down on an old rain, and instead of bearing it away in triumph, which it doubt-less expected to do, found its talons hopeentangled in the ram's wool, and so fell a victim to its own folly?

As usual, however, the truth is stranger the the fable, writes J. Carter Beard in Frank Leslie's Monthly, for it is the eagle itself that is trapped in this manner, many incidents having occurred of the death or capture of the bird while vainly struggling to carry off animals that miscalculation of its strength and its power of flight had led it to attack. An instance of the kind is related of an eagle that had, for years, occupied a nest in a pine tree on the bank of the Raquette lake in the Adirondackregion. The bird was seen to strike a large fish swimming near the surface; and so firmly did he fix his powerful talons in the back of his victim, that, when the startled fish made a sudden dive, he carried the eagle with him out of sight a short space of time, when they again appeared, and the bird succeeded in raising the great fish from the water, only to fall and be dragged under a second time. As it became evident that the eagle had struck his crooked talons so deeply into the back of the fish that they could not be readily withdrawn, it became a question, after a full half minute elapsed since they had vanished, whether they would ever be seen again. But at last the bird reappeared, and exerted his utmost strength to rise; this he could not do, nor did the salmontrout seem able to again carry him under the water and keep him there. So the struggle continued until at last the eagle succeeded; fortunately for himself, in loosening his clutch, and soared heavily. wet and exhausted, to his nest, where he sat dejected and moody for a long time, doubless resolving never to attempt such large game again.

But captors are not always so fortunate. Eckstrom, Rev. M. Moller and other writers assert that in Sweden, when the kite, sea eagle, osprey, and other fish-eating birds prey upon the pike; they occasionally strike a fish large and powerful enough to drag them under and drown them; in which case, strange as it may seem, the wounds cause by the talons the bird was unable to disengage gradually heal, while the bird, like the Old Man of the Sea on Sin bad the Sailor's shoulders, continues to cling where it first fixed itself, and at length, reduced to a skeleton, is continually carried about on the back of the

As the fish swims on or near the surface of the water, the weird birk-skeleton seems to glide, by some occult power of its own, over the surface of the and is regarded with dread and herror by the fishermen, who look upon it as an apparition presaging disaster. One of these skeletons in particularly described as appearing at times in Lake Wetter; it was so old as to have acquired a green-ish tinge, and yet still held together sufficiently to frighten all beholders who did not understand its nature. Another such skeleton is spoken of by Mr. Lloyd as haunting the Fryksdal lake, borne on the back of a fish. It was known by the residents in the vicinity as the Sjotrotl, or water sprite, and was the object of superstitious fear on the part of the fisher-men. "It is said to have appeared like the horns of a moose or reindeer moving rapidly on the surface of the water, writes Mr. H. G. Seeley; "but at last Lieutenant J. Lekander put a shot in the pike that carried it, and solved the mystery by proving the water sprite to be the skeleton of a sea engle."

Mr. Dresser saw an osprey unable to struck, and asserts that, after having been dragged under several times, the bird was carried out to sea. This happened in the Bay of Fundy. "Some-imes," says P. Martin Duncan, "on landing its prey, the osprey is unable to extricate its talons, and is captured

Instances of the kind have happened on our own coast, where fish have been found left stranded by the retreating tide, with parts of fish hawks attached to the talons which projected from the ore-part of the back where they had

Were not these facts attested by such redible authorities they might well be called in question, but a host of eye witlesses have testified to their truth, and there can be no doubt as to their correct ness; nor is it as inexcusable on the part of a fish hawk to miscalculate the size and probable weight of a fish dimly seen under the surface of the water as it is on the part of birds of prey that in equally well authenticated instances have tacked, in broad daylight, victims altogether too heavy and vigorous to be carried away by their captors.

Thus "fact" is in this instance, as in every other, found to be not only "stranger than fiction," but the best autidote to superstitious fears and the deadly enemy of "water-sprites," as well as of every other kind of boggy and hob-

INTERVIEWING GREAT MEN. Blaine's Conversion to Belief in the Newspaper as a Medium.

Until recently Mr. Blaine has been one of the most difficult men in the country to interview and even now will only talk for publication with his most intimate friends in the profession, and then almost always insists upon revising the interview, writes Frank A. Burr in Lip-pincott's Magazine. Alexander H. Stephens was equally particular. Time and again when Mr. Blaine was engaged in his hardest political struggles I have tried to get a few words for my papers upon the results he had accomplished. I remember that only two years before he was beaten for the presidential nomina-tion in 1880 and then became the secretary of state in Garfield's cabinet I a guest at his house in Augusta. He had just won one of the most bitterly contested state campaigns in his political career. I asked him for a statement of the situation and some little story of how he had won the battle. Senator Hale was present at the moment. Blaine turned to me quickly and said pleasantly:

"O, interview Hale. He can tell you all about it. I do detest being quoted in the newspapers in the form of an inter-

Two years later, when he was assailed about his South American policy, one of the most important incidents of his remarkable career, he at once sought the form of an interview, and two long ones from him were printed in nearly every newspaper in the land. He wanted to reach the general public as well as the statesmen of the country, and he acknowledged that the only way to do it successfully was in a conversational form. Since that time he has always sought the interview when attacked upon any important matter which he desires to answer. No greater tribute could be paid to the efficiency of this class of newspaper work.

General Grant was the best man to interview I ever met. He would only talk to persons whom he knew well, and then he could tell exactly what you wanted to know in fewer words than any man I ever made an inquiry of. He was very pleasant to newspaper men in whom he had confidence, but when one came about whom he did not know or trust, you coulen't get a word out of him with crowbar, His never cared much to talk for publication, and never did to may extent upon public matters except to John Russell Young, who, by the way, is one of the ablest and most successful inter viewers of any time. He alone among ores of dally tollers with the pen of this day is equally able as an editor, cor

Roscoe Conkling was the only public man I ever met who never would be interviewed for publication upon any subject whatever. He once told me that he would rather have a mad dog set upon him than to have a newspaper man sent after him for a talk. Two or three times n his life interviews were printed with him which he never intended should go beyond the privacy of his room, and he never forgave the men who quoted him. He had one able correspondent dis-charged from the Herald for publishing a talk with him which occurred at the breakfast table, and Mr. Bennett di rected that he should never again write for his paper. David Davis could not be interviewed. While he was a justice of the supreme court it would not have been proper, and after he became a United States senator e always believed himself to be on the high road to the presidency, and was afraid to talk lest he might injure his chances of getting there. I never appreached him but once, and that was for the story of how Lincoln was nominated in 1860. I told him that I had already secured the recollections of two of the men who then operated with them, when he drew himself up and said, very seri-

"There are only four men who know the history of Mr. Lincoln's nomination and any one of them would be a fool to Charles Sumner was by no means an easy man to be led into a talk upon publie matters. After the passage of the treaty of Washington I once interviewed him as to the meaning of the damage clause of that instrument. He was ex ceedingly dignified although in his own apartments with his dressing gown on. He spoke with great deliberation and to the point, I could readily remember everything that he said-although he was talking upon a very important sub-

Colonel Robert G. Ingersoll, like General Gerdon of Georgia, is just the kind of a man that a journalist likes to meet for business purposes. Both are fine talkers and say original things. If the subject is very important Colonel Inger-soll will write it out for you while you wait. He does dislike to be misquoted, and he says that interviewers so often miss the mark that he prefers to do the work himself when he will talk at all. John Sherman is a difficult man to in terview, but he does not seriously object to it. In fact, he is very pleasant to a writer whom he knows. But despite his great ability, he is not fluent, and it is evry hard to get from him the very best work with him anything more than a cold Senator Edmunds can never be interviewed upon any subject. His cham while in the senate, nicknamed the "Old Roman," was very much like him. General Ben Butles is a capital subject for the interviewer. He likes that form of addressing the public. He always talks with spirit and originality. man to whom he will speak at all can always get a good story from him, that is full of ment; but he usually wants to re-vise it is printed. He is very particular. Ex-President Cleveland is usually a good man to seek information from. He good man to seek information from. is quite easy of access and does not waste any words in what he has to say. Ex-Governor Foster of Ohio, next to General Grant, is the most perfect man I ever met for interviewing purposes. He always gets in a good deal of his per sonality and imparts a zest to his words. Business men, as a rule, are rather un desirrble customers for the journalist. They are careful about what they say and have few entertaining subjects to talk about. To a greater or less extent this is true of lawyers. Ex-Governor Hoadley of Ohio is, however, a decided exception to the rule. Senator Ingalls does not object to talking to the public second hand, and of all the prominent public men of the day he undoubtedly talks best.

M. L. Blair, alderman 5th ward, Scranton, Pa., stated Nov. 9, '83; He had used Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil for sprains, burns, cuts, bruises and rheumatism. Cured every

A Singular Application. A very singular pension application comes from Bradley county, Tennessee. The petitioner avers that when he was a boy of thirteen an engagement between union and confederate cavalry occurred in his village which so fright ened him that he has not been right since. He claims that he lost a straw hat, has no inclination for work, and dislikes to get up in the morning, for which he holds his scare responsible.
