HOW OMAHA KNOCKED HER OUT. Wrote the Stationary Engineers' Convention From Haggly Buffalo. A VERY INTERESTING DISCUSSION. The Gathering Will Bring a Thousand Strangers to Omaha and How it is Proposed to Entertain Them. J. W. Matthews and George Bush, delegates from No. 1 of Nebraska national association stationary engineers, have returned from New York, where they were in attendance at the sixth annual convention of the order as the delegates from this state. They feel highly elated over the fact that the next annual convention of the order will be held in this city. The convention assembled in the Excelsior opera-house and continued for four days. It was attended by nearly six hundred delegates, every state in the union being represented. The first day of the session was devoted to receiving the delegates. On the second day the convention assembled at 10 o'clock in the morning, and after organizing an ocean trip was taken on the iron steamer Sirius, through New York bay and the narrows, around the shipyard at Sandy Hook with a city in the sea at Rockaway. The next day, Wednesday, the convention concluded the morning business and in the afternoon the members were driven about the city, taking in Central and Riverside parks and other points of interest. In the evening a banquet was given by the New York engineers at the opera house. The menu was as follows: Soup.

Mock Turtle, Patties a la Reine, Bisque of Lobster, Fried Chicken, Baked Blue, Boiled Sea Bass, Princess Potatoes, Chicken, Lobster, Cucumber, Lettuce, Entrees, Fillet of Beef, Mushrooms a la Jardiniere, Chicken Croquettes, Tomato Sauce, Roasts, Turkey, Cranberry Sauce, Duck, Guava Jelly, Chicken, Apple Jelly, Roman Punch, Dessert, Queen Puffins, Cakes and Fruits, Ice Cream and Ices, Coffee. Thursday was devoted to the holding of sessions and hearing the reports of the committees, though in the evening the members found time to indulge in a grand ball that was given by the national association of New York and vicinity. Friday morning the regular business of the session was completed and the convention adjourned to accept an invitation for an excursion on the steamer Pomona to Glen Island and return. The important business of the convention was transacted Friday afternoon, as then the election of officers was held and the place for holding the next convention decided upon. The eastern delegates were of the opinion that Buffalo, N. Y., had a sure thing on the convention and for this reason were willing to concede all of the officers to the west. The election of officers resulted as follows: President, Joseph J. Hinesworth of Utica, N. Y.; vice president, William Ponell of Cleveland, O.; secretary, A. G. Carley of Pittsburg, Pa.; treasurer, W. H. Crowley of Jersey City, N. J.; doorkeeper, H. J. Smith of San Francisco, Cal.; grand conductor, J. J. McGinnis of New Orleans, La. During the election, when the office of grand conductor was reached, Frank McNally of Kansas City arose and placed J. W. Matthews in nomination. He had not sat down when a Buffalo delegate arose and in eloquent speech seconded the nomination, urging that Omaha was entitled to a place and that one of the grand officers should be at Omaha. As soon as the Buffalo man was seated Mr. Matthews gained the floor, and in a neat little speech said: "Omaha does not want the earth, Omaha does not want any of the offices, the next convention she does want and expects to get." The men from the western states cheered and howled, but Mr. Matthews still held the floor and when the noise had subsided, he placed in nomination McGinnis of New Orleans, who was elected on the first ballot. Speeches were made by the several officers elect and then the work of the convention began, but it was of short duration. John Trux of Detroit moved that the convention be held in Omaha in September, 1891. The motion was seconded by the delegates from Colorado, California and Illinois. Joby Monk of Buffalo moved as an amendment that the word Omaha be stricken out and Buffalo inserted. Upon the amendment he spoke for half an hour, satirizing that Omaha, a more country town, could not care for and accommodate the delegates and visitors. "There is nothing there," said he, "and if there were, why should the delegates go half way across the continent?" This roused the ire of Mr. Hensley of Denver and he scored the Buffalo man to a finish. He said: "The gentleman forgets that many of the members would be compelled to travel thousands of miles to reach Buffalo. He also forgets that there is nothing in Omaha. Let him come and we will show him, and if we can do so better, we will give him a 'buffalo' hunt." Mr. Matthews again addressed the convention, and holding a copy of Trux's annual he produced positive proof that Omaha has the largest number in the world, miles of paved streets, eighty-five miles of electric street railway, the third largest pork packing market in the world and scores of other industries. But this was not all. They had the figures and showed that Omaha's population is 140,000. This was met with deafening cheers and the vote of states was called on the amendment offered by the Buffalo gentleman. It was defeated by a two-thirds majority, after which the main question was put and carried by the same majority. In speaking of the 191 convention Mr. Matthews said to the Buffalo reporter: "It will bring fully 1,000 visitors to Omaha, one half of whom will be engineers and the other half will be exhibitors. We will have no trouble in accommodating them. The hotel rooms are ample and the hall facilities are excellent. We can secure the Grand opera house, if we wish, just the thing. We can hold our sessions in the theater and Exposition hall will be an excellent place for the display of machinery that will come. "The question of business does not trouble us. We know that the business men will contribute, but should they not, the other associations in the west have pledged support sufficient to carry the enterprise through." At the next meeting of the association Mr. Matthews will submit his report after which the various committees will be appointed and the beginning of the work of making arrangements outlined. While at the convention we met a large number of manufacturers who were looking for a point at which to invest, and you can rest assured that the advantages of Omaha were shown up to the greatest extent. "The interests of the steam users of the west will be greatly enhanced by the holding of this convention and it will certainly be of great benefit to the business and industry of Omaha." Again Working Long Hours. The members of the clerks' employ, K. of L., gave an inch and their employers took an ell. And now the former feel as though they had lost what they fought all summer to gain. Before the opening of the Douglas county fair, a card hung in the window of nearly every leading store in the city, on which was printed: "This store closes at 6:30 o'clock p. m." The clerks are a generous lot of people and knowing that many strangers would be in the city during fair week, they suggested that the proprietors keep their stores open as late at night as trade continued to come their way. This pleased the store owners and the cards were taken down and piled away, as they do not possess, to be put in position again the following Monday morning. All the week they worked on, putting in from twelve to sixteen hours per day. They went home Saturday night feeling happy, happy to think that the next week would again bring their shorter hours, but they have been disappointed. Monday morning following the close of fair week, the cards did not go into the windows. News and delight rolled around and still these same cards remained under the counters. Then it was the young men say that they had lost by their generosity. They agreed with their employers, but the shorter hours did not come. A meeting was held and resolutions were passed, but the situation remained unchanged. The man who had worked so hard during the early part of the season, once more put on the harness and went out to canvas for members who would sign for earlier closing hours. They met with indifferent success and henceforward it is more than probable that they will work even earlier hours than they are now. The Douglas street dealers will again adopt the early closing plan. The Lock-out of Saddlers. The lock-out in Mack's Brothers' saddlery continued without any prospect of an early settlement of the difficulty. The emergency committee of the Central Labor union held several sessions with the proprietors last week, but were unable to accomplish anything in the way of an adjustment of the troubles. During the week a number of journeymen arrived, but he is refused to return if he is a union man; if he is not, he is taken into the union and taken care of until he can secure work in some other town. Both proprietors and workmen stand firm and declare they will fight it out on the line on which they have staked. The Brotherhood of Telegraphers. The telegraph operators of the city will hold a meeting this afternoon for the purpose of organizing a local branch of the brotherhood of telegraphers in Omaha. E. L. Randall of Kansas City, the man who was the original founder of the order of railroad telegraphers, an organization that flourished some years ago, has been in the city during the past week, and has worked upon similar interest among the boys. At the present time, the brotherhood is upon a sound financial basis and is rapidly increasing its membership. Circulars that have been distributed in this city, state that the organization is intended for benevolent purposes, to protect the rights of its members by arbitration, and to form a federation with other corporations, employers for defensive and reciprocal purposes. The organization insures the life of each member in the sum of $1,000, and has a mutual plan and provides for the sick and destitute. Liberal Carpenters. Carpenters union No. 55, is making arrangements for holding a fair some time during the latter part of this month. The idea is to rent a large hall where booths will be erected and various articles placed on sale. The fair will probably continue a week and close with a grand ball on Saturday night. The object of this is to replenish the cash in the treasury. With this union, the protective fund has been exhausted and according to the rules, the treasury must not remain empty for a period of three months. The money has not been squandered, but it has been sent out to help the organizations in the east, and particularly those in Chicago. Early in the season, when the Chicago strike was declared, union is responded and since that time it has not only sent out $12, but has made an extra assessment of $1 upon each member and forwarded that on to help the strikers. In their fight for what they believed to be right and just. The other unions in the city have responded liberally, but as the strike continues, it has been compelled to bear the heavy drain upon its treasury. Local Knights Favor Eight Hours. The members of the Knights of Labor assemblies and the various trades unions of Omaha are actively engaged in the work of urging the senate of the United States to pass the eight-hour bill which recently went through the house by a large majority. Owing to the fact that the adjournment of congress is near at hand, they consider it doubtful if the bill will be reached at the present session, but hope to be prepared for the adjournment next winter. They are circulating petitions among all of the labor organizations for signatures. Their petitions set forth the necessity of the passage of the bill, and close with the request that the Nebraska congressmen do all that lies in their power to secure the early passage of the measure. Dr. Birney cures catarrh, Bee bldg. Army Notes. Major J. N.
