WORLD'S FAIR SITE SETTLED.

A Story That New York is Jealous and Trying to Create Prejudice in Excrope Against the Exposition.

Cincago, Sept. 22. - The world's fair site question has been settled by today's action. In the morning the South park commissioners agreed to add Washington park to that portion of the South park system already offered to the commission. This was in accordance with the resolution adopted by the national commission last Saturday. At this afternoon's session of the national commission the amended site was unmirrously

Thesite thus provided for includes Washington and Jackson parks, the midway plaisance connecting them and Lake Front park, in all about one thousand acres. In a sense the chosen site is a unit, comprising as it does the entire south park sys-tem of Chicago, the inest in the city. The enthusiasm with which the tender was received by the national commission showed in market contrast with the reception of the marked contrast with the reception of the previous propositions. By a resolution adopted early in the day the national commission pledged itself to regard the offers of such site as "final settlement of all questions relating to the site," and when the park commissioners promptly responded and the exact location of the big expection was at last finally fixed there was an outburst of cheers. finally fixed there was an outburst of cheers. Stepping from the doors of the city's railroad depots, hotels and business houses, visitors to the world's fair will, as it were, enter di-rectly the vestibule of the exposition on the rectly the vistibile of the exposition on the lake front. This "lake front" is a strip of park comprising sixty acres, bordering the shore of Lake Michigas. Leading from itthe finest boulevard of the city goes directly to Washington park, and connecting with the latter is a midway pluisance which ends in Jackson park. Like the lake front, one side of Jackson park is washed by the waves of Lake Michigan. The greater portion of the site is one vast network of pleasure drives, enclosing great stretches of meadows and groves of oak. Adjoining Washington park is a face track, capable of accommodating lifty track, capable of accommodating sity thousand people, and this the local directory intend to make a part also of the site for the purpose of a speed display and live stock show. This improved race track, where the live stock show will be made is within one hundred yards of the point selected for the main building, thus placing the whole fair in one compact quarter of the city, including the government display and displays to be made by the various states, in conjunction with the main exposition building. The site selected and the plans of the buildings proposedure generally regarded as especially gratifying to the live stock men of the coun-

in-Law in Chicago.

CHICAGO, Sept. 22. - Tonight a fatal street affray between brothers-in-law ended a remarkable contest for a fortune of $100,000. Alfred Richner several years ago was the husband of a noted brothel keeper. Notwithstanding this and his unsavory feeerd Richner succeeded in clandestinely working himself into the good graces of the daughter of a wealthy flour and feed dealer named Kessler. Upon Kossler's death the daughter, who seems to be somewhat simple-minded, disclosed her attachment for Richner. The instant opposition of the family to any recognition of that worthy resulted in the prompt elopement of the couple to Montreal. Richner laterwent through the form of obtaining a divorce from through the form of obtaining a divorce from the brothel-keeper and having his marriage with Miss Kessler legalized. They then returned to Chicago and a feud was soon engendered between Richner and his new wife's brother. The latter accused Richner of being actuated solely with a desire to lay hands on the fortune of his sister. Legal struggles and personal encounters between Richner and young Kessler have been frequent. Recently, it is alleged, Richner, failing in his efforts to get at the Kessler patrimony, has threatened to kill every member of the famthreatened to kill every member of the fam-ily. Tonight he met Young Kessler on State street and attacked him with a case. Kessler drew a revolver and fired several shots into Richner's body, inflicting fatal injuries. Kessler gave himself up and said he had been advised to arm himself by the city chief of detectives and his attorney, General John C. Black. The affray took place in a crowded part of State street, and for a short time created a wild stampede.

TARIFF CONFEREES.

The Report Will be Ready for Debate

Tomorrow or Thurday. Washisston, Sept. 22-At a late hour tonight it was the confident expectation of the republican conferes on the tariff bill that Wednesday or Thursday at the latest will witness the opening of the debate on the conference report. While the three disputed questions of most importance—sugar, binding twine, and steel duties-were not settledthe conferees are near enough to warrant them in saying that they had no doubt some basis of agreement would be reached tomor row. The bonding period, about which there has been so much talk, has been definitely settled for February 1. There is, it is thought, good reason to predict that the free agar standard will be placed at No. 13 and not at No. 10, as proposed by the house, that a compromise generally favorable to the house rates will be the outcome of the tisputes over various items - in the metal chedule, and that binding twine also will be the subject of a compromise. Southern re-publican congressmen have adopted resolu-tions declaring it essential to the interests of their constituents that the tax on tobacco should be left as fixed by the house.

WINGED A BURGLAR. The Remarkable Nerve Displayed by

Miss Cora Simonds Burglars met with a warm reception yesterday morning when they visited Madame Gilmere's residence and dress making rooms at 2021 California street. It was about 4 o'clock in the morning when Madame Gilmore and Mrs. Thompson were awakened by the mising of a window, and realized that someone was trying to get late the room. They demanded to know what was wanted, but there was no reply, and after a short period of time the burglars renewed their workand one of them was soon in the room Madame Gilmore then called to Miss Cora Simonds and Miss Anna Beanchamp, who were sleeping up stairs, to bring down the revolver. It must not be imagined for a single instant that Miss Simonds was too cowardly to respond. She promptly shouldered her gun and mawhed down on adouble quick to meet the enemy. When she reached the lower floor he was just leaving through the lower floor he was just leaving through the back door. She wanted to shoot through the window, but Madame Gilmore would not permit it, and the young lady then hastened back up stairs, and took a shot from a back window. The burglars fled, but when morning dawned it was discovered that one of them left a trail of blood that could be followed for some dis-tance showing that the shot hast recommender.

tance, showing that the shot had not missed It was likewise found that Madame Gilnore's pocket book containing $50, which was in her dress in the room, was also gone. There were several burglars in the gang, and while a part of them were in the Gilmore residence others went through the residence of Charles J. Barber, next door. That they were frightened away by the pistol shot was evidenced by a lot of jewelry and a pair of opera glasses that they had gathered together and left lying on the dresser. They took with them a revolver and a pair of pants belonging to Mr. Barber. There was no one in the house but Mrs. Barber's sister and the children, Mr. Barber and his wife havingleft the

A Complete Representation of the Factors Which Make Up Commercial and Industrial Prosperity.

There were crowds and crowds of people at the Coliseum last night on the occasion of the inauguration of the exposition. Extra cable cars began carrying their gayly attired freightage long before the hour set for the opening, and by the time the rmin entrance was thrown open, a veritable stream of men, women and childlen were there and poured into the building. ing day of the Queen City Driving club trots.

Once within, and a most entrancing spectacle greeted the eye, with its pyramids and pagodas of rare and beautiful things, its flaunting flags and labyriaths of plants and flowers and artistically arranged displays. The score stirring, beautiful and exhibarating as it could be, resembled some fabulous kaliedoscope more than anything else. Indeed, the merchants and mechanics, builders, tradesmen and manufacturers of Onaha can well feel proud over the magnificent exhibit their combined efforts have furnished the people, and it is notex traves furnished the people, and it is notex traves and to say that no other city in the country could equal it in the same time allotted its energetic managers, M. It is more extensive in size and incascalably more interesting and meriterious in character.

After an appropriate invocation by Dean Gardner the Musical union band of fifty artists, under the direction of H. T. Irvine, filled the huge structure with the resounding and reverberating melody of Sousa's grandling march, improvised for the occasion and Yelent, "The Interstate Exposition."

Then Mayor Cashing, who was surrounded upon the elevated platform by a coteric of Omaha's most distinguished citizens, delivered the opening address. He said that as a citizen of Omaha it afforded him unspeakable pleasure to well-game as large an audicine of pleasure to welcome so large an audience at the opening of this grand interstate exposition. Then he spoke of the incalculable benefits that must accrue to the city and the people from such an enterprise, commended the zeal of our mere bants and manufacturers, and how it produced the most corent proof that Omaha was keeping pace with the fore-most cities in the land, and how her merchants must mevitably attain rank with the largest thriftiest and most enterprising and liberal in the land. He would not attempt to de-scribe the grandeur and completedess of Omaha's splendid exhibition for 1890. Sufomana's special exhibition for 1830. Saffice it to say that it was simply marvelous, and in it she outranked many of the older and bigger cities. "The statistics of our recent census show a growth for Omaha so wonderful, so un pre-edented, so beyond all calculation that we find ourselves suddenly become the marvel of the eastern and the envy and despair of the western cities. Omaha is famous, and to the exposition of such a city it is my pleasant duty to welcome you this evening. It is the duty to welcome you has evening. And index to the immeasurable resources of our state, and is something that one and all can feel a justifiable pride in. The beautiful display which surrounds us shows that Omaha's citizens are not compelled to go to New York, Boston or Chicago to pur-chase choice and rare goods, but can find

"Messrs, Roed! & Bell, the managers, lecting this grand affair, are entitled to the unstinted honor and support of our business men and chizens generally and should be liberally patronized until its close. In their behalf I declare the interstate exposition of Omaha now open to the world."

The mayor's eloquent address was greeted with a thunder of applause, and then the throngs of people radiated in all directions and turned their attention to examining the countless wonders and beautiful things on all hands encompassing them. "The Prince and the Pauper," as made known at the Boyd last evening, is hardly more than a cleverly teld sketch, rather than a melodrama, which theater-goers were led to expect. The story seemed very like "The Fallen Idol" and "Vice Versa" idenlized into something more elegant and less humorous through the medium of a clever child with

Description flaxer hair.
The story is simplicity itself and seems to the story is samplicity itself and seems to be more the sort of thing to which you would take a child to improve its manners and give it a good lesson, disguised under the mask of pleasure, than a performance to be enjoyed by people who have got past the stage when by people who have got past the stage when they want to be lectured from the other side of the footlights.

Elsie Leslie, who plays the dual role of the Prince and the Pauper, alternating them in marvelously quick time, is heavily overweighted. She has been given quite too much to do, and per consequence the play dragsvery laboriously at times. Then again, the action becomes more rapid, interest is aroused in the varying fortunes of Tom Cantey and Edward, prince of Wales, and the audience is on the gui vive for the denouement, which somehow or other becomes a anti-climax.

But there can not be any doubt that Elsie But there can not be any doubt that Elsie Leslie is the prettiest of the child actresses. She seems, too, to have retained actrain amount of unconsciousness which is very charming. As the young king she is most successful, the assumption of princely state being very sweetly and prettily done. Again, in the last act, as the pauper, she inflaces a good deal of humor into the situation, sitting upon the throne which has been digraffed by the Tadors, the Stuarts and the Plantaquets, cracking English walnuts with the scentre. cracking Eaglish walnuts with the scotter scattering the balls about the royal palace. Scattering the halls about the royal palace.

Neither the prince nor the pauper, however, are the chief characters in the play, but Miles Hendon, a soldier of fortune, delightfully played by Arthur Elliott. The scene where Miles takes the lost prince into his own room and humors his fancies is one of the best in the play, and Mr. Elliott invests the situation with a bluff heartiness which is necessary for the part of the soldier as opposed to the patrician delicacy and refinement of the vagrant prince. It is a delicious ment of the vagrant prince. It is a delicious bit of the whole play.

The other characters act simply as feeders. They are nothing more than side lights throwing their reflected rays upon the central figure, Elsie Leslie.

PERSONAL RIGHTS LEAGUE. The Membership Increasing at a Remarkably Rapid Rate.

Thecommittees of the Douglas county peronal rights league held the regular weekly neeting at Garfield hall last night. In addition to the members, a large number of the people of the city were in attendance. Thereport of the secretary was read and eccepted. This report shows that leagues
