Stolen Mules Recovered.

The team of mules stolen from E. Morehouse, a market gardener living three miles north of the city, were located yesterday at Hastings, Ia. The mules were stolen two weeks ago, and Morehouse has spent a great deal of money tracking and searching for them.

Letters and postal cards giving a description of the outfit and the young man who stole it were sent all over the country, but the most diligent search failed to bring forth any tidings, and young White, the thief, had apparently dropped out of sight as completely as if the earth had opened and swallowed him.

On Thursday morning Morehouse put a little paragraph in the Bee giving a description of the stolen property and offering a reward for the recovery and the arrest of the thief. Yesterday morning letters and telegrams began to pour into the city marshal's office from Hastings, announcing that the boy White had been traced to a farmer near there the day after he disappeared from this city, after selling his load of vegetables. Marshal Templeton also received a telephone message from the town marshal at Hastings claiming the reward. He, with scores of other citizens of the little village, had seen the driver of the team of mules in the Bee and hastened to notify the owner.

White, the seventeen-year-old, thief, drove directly to Hastings, where he remained a short time until he succeeded in finding a farmer with a span of horses which he was willing to trade for the mules. The trade was quickly made and young White left. He claimed that he was on his way to Kansas, where he had friends, and was anxious to get there as the mules were to be sold. He was willing to give somebody a good bargain in exchange for a team of horses. Immediately after making the trade he left and it is supposed he will not be seen again.

Mr. Morehouse will go to Hastings this morning with witnesses to prove his property. It will only be a question of a short time when the boy will be captured. It is evident that he had no desire to go to Kansas, and it is thought he has sold or traded the team of the mules to some one who can be found and recovered for him at Hastings.

He Robbed the School Treasury.

A stranger, leading a freckled-faced, stock-headed youngster about fourteen years old, accosted Marshal Templeton on the street last evening and asked to be the boy locked up as a fugitive from justice. In explanation of his request he said that he was a resident of Cedar Rapids, Neb., and that the boy had robbed his father of a large sum of money and was running away from home.

The boy was a white, well-dressed, and when searched had $21.50 in his possession and a ticket for Kansas City. He confessed to the Bee reporter that the charge made by the stranger was true, and stated that his father's name was Lucius A. Templeton, and that he had been in the school district. He kept it in the house locked up in an old trunk. Night before last he and his father had a quarrel, and he had run away from home. He had no money and was hungry, and he had heard that the school treasury was open and he had decided to take some of the money.

He had been in the school treasury for some time and had taken some of the money. He had been in the school treasury for some time and had taken some of the money. He had been in the school treasury for some time and had taken some of the money.

Hotel Gordon Opens Today.

The force of men and women engaged on the work of remodeling the Bechtel house, now the Hotel Gordon, have got along better than was expected, and the newly fitted up hostelry will be opened for the reception of guests this evening.

It is a comfortable and well-furnished hotel, and cannot fail to spring into great popularity with the traveling public from the start. Everything is new, bright, clean and fresh, and the dining room and kitchen service as fine as any hotel in the country.

Colonel Clark and Day Clerk Whitely were glad to meet their friends and house full of guests today, and will assure them as comfortable a temporary home as they could wish.

A New Company.

The Iowa fuel and power company filed articles of incorporation yesterday. The document was very brief and simply set forth the statement that the place of business was to be in Council Bluffs, and the capital stock $250,000, that the purpose of the company was to manufacture gas for fuel and power purposes and to buy and sell gas.

The incorporators are William Henry Harris, Joshua O. Lee and F. B. Johnson, all Omaha parties.

THE NEWS IN THE BLUFFS.

A PRETTY WOMAN PRAYS FOR PRISONERS.

"Slippery Sam" Davis on Trial for Attempted Murder—Stolen Mules Recovered—Railway—Minor Matters.

The happiest man in the city yesterday was Peter Hansen. A stranger could have picked him out of the street by the smile, which seemed to be all over him. For over a year he has been under the charge of murder in the second degree, for having shot and killed Walter Madison at a dance in the southern part of the city. His fate was placed in the hands of twelve men yesterday forenoon, and he was on a severe nervous strain for four or five hours, waiting for the verdict. It was one of acquittal.

The suspended judge so happily ended Hansen's face beamed, and he stood at the door of the courtroom and grasp the hands of the jurymen as they passed out. There was an earnestness in his thanks which bespoke the sincerity of the giver.

The verdict was one which came as no surprise to those who had heard the testimony. The fact was undisputed that he had been previously attacked by the crowds in which he had been surrounded, and that he was suffering from fresh blows when he fired. His acquittal will be generally acquiesced in as a righteous verdict.

Praying for Prisoners.

"Is it against the rules of the jail to let me see and talk to the prisoners?"

It was a pleasant-faced young woman who propounded the question to Marshal Templeton in the office of the city jail yesterday afternoon.

"Not at all," replied the polite and kind-hearted officer, "but there are no prisoners here at this hour. They are all out on the streets at work."

"Would you object to me coming in here on Sunday morning and holding a brief religious service for the benefit of the prisoners?"

"Not at all,"

"I desire only to read the bible to them and talk to them for a few moments."

"You shall have the privilege, and if I am not here I will leave orders for the deputy marshal to show you every courtesy possible. And I will also tell the prisoners of your coming and have them prepared for the services."

The lady was about to thank the marshal and retire when the patrol wagon drove up with a very drunken man for a passenger.

"What kind of people we receive here," remarked Marshal Templeton to the lady. The invitation was accepted and she went in with the marshal's private officer.

The drunken man was brought in bolted up between two stalwart officers. His articulation was so bad that he could scarcely give his name. He was limp as a rag, and had to be held up to the desk while he was being searched.

The lady, who was very polite and courteous, was looking at him with an expression of intense pity in which there was no trace of disgust. The intoxicated man read the expression and was very sore at it. He sobbed in an instant. A moment later he turned toward her with an effort and asked what he had done to her.

"Lady, I do not know your name, but I see that you do not look upon me with disgust. Do you think I am drunk?"

"Well, it will be the last time you or anybody else will ever see me in such a condition."

The little incident showed the effect the presence of the lady who came there through sympathy and with a desire to do good had upon one man, and the marshal was very much encouraged in the belief that if the lady will keep her appointment and hold services for the benefit of the inmates of the jail that Sunday morning will receive a lesson that is new to them. The lady is the young wife of a local merchant.
