THE LOUNGER IN THE LOBBY.

Rose Coghlan and Her Reminiscences of Old Wallack Days. ATTRACTIONS FOR THE PRESENT WEEK. Musical and Dramatic Items of Interest to the Great Army of Theater-Goers Throughout the Country. For a considerable number of years Miss Rose Coghlan has occupied a foremost place in the ranks of the dramatic profession...

What are my plans for the future? Well, if every thing turns out as I anticipate I shall be my own manager next season, my contract ending with Mr. Pitou early next year. My brother, Mr. Charles Coghlan, is writing a new comedy, which I shall produce one of the New York theaters next May with the strongest cast that can be obtained...

I have to become his wife again, in order to place myself right before the public which has been kind to me. Greatly agitated over the wrongs she had suffered, with even traces of tears on her face, I felt that if there were a woman who had suffered as she had, I would have done as she did...

With this parting shot the late owner of Helen Danvers's big, Irish setter turned and walked out of the stage door of the Standard theater. King had been brought there by his master in response to Miss Danvers's request, and thought the man was willing to sell the animal he did not have any idea that his friend would be called upon to act...

Support the Apollo Club. The Apollo club has sent out this week a number of circulars announcing the beginning of the season's work, and soliciting subscriptions for carrying on the work outlined for the greater part of the year...

An Historic Tea Caddy. The tea caddy which held the fragrant leaves, the infusion of which Sarah Siddons drank in her dressing-room in the intervals of her acting, has been brought to New York from over the ocean, and will probably be presented by its owner, Mr. W. J. Florence, to the Players' club...

Another View of Boucicault. A view of Dan Boucicault, and one of the best, is given by the authoress who collaborated with him lately. She says: "I was the last person with whom he did any literary work. We were chatting one day on the subjects of plots for novels and plays, and he expressed a doubt of the possibility of anything absolutely new in that line..."
