TWO ARCH ENEMIES OF LABOR

The Shameless Manipulation of the Alliance by Powers and Burrows.

METHODS OF POLITICAL SCHEMERS.

A Scathing Arrangement by Master Workman Helvey of the Alliance Bosses--With the Knights En-dorse Such Knavery?

NEBRASKA CITY, Neb., Oct. 29.--To the Knights of Labor of Nebraska: For months past you have received an unlimited amount of advice from men, both within and without the order, as to the proper disposition of your ballot on the coming 4th day of November. Knowing the facts, as I have from the beginning, I have up to this date refrained from public expression on what is known as the people's independent movement simply because of the many honest men as well as personal friends who espoused its cause, and the fact that it would ill-become me to pose as the antagonist of any reform movement, even though I knew it to be in hands that, so far as I knew it to be in hands that are concerned, peruse it a parody on honesty either of purpose or intention. I would be silent even now, but matters have gone from bad to worse, and today one man by some unaccountable centralization of power stands forth as the absolute dictator of a movement originally built by honest men and willing hearts; to exalt whom he may see fit, to damn whom he may please, and to create on his political gallows and inter in his private graveyard men who were in the front of the battle for the great common people when he was a babe in swaddling clothes. This state of affairs certainly indicates something radically wrong, not on the part of the honest farmers and workmen who in the beginning contested the rank and file of the movement, but on the part of those whose intimate knowledge of all the arts of political chicanery, intrigue and manipulation enabled him to secure almost absolute control of a movement in which all others came together as honest men, and no man felt the necessity of watching his neighbor. Let us see if a few straws will not betray the direction of the wind.

Some time previous to the meeting of the people's convention in Lincoln I was in a certain city in this state on business and while there met several gentlemen interested in this movement. In a private conversation with one I was urged to become a candidate for nomination on the state ticket, with the inference attached that it could be arranged. I declined unqualifiedly, not recognizing that the people were speaking to me, and of those brought prominently to my attention at the time, all have since gone to their graves; they have places on the state or congressional ticket of the independent party. This man, Burrows, created much of the excitement, and it was for the instant that the name of "No Quarter" ringing in their ears, Coleman and his knight of labor friends, walked the plank while the Captain Kidd stood by and smiled. General C. H. Van Wyck, one of the truest friends the knights ever had in this or any other state, has recently been conducted over this same plank because he would not, at the dictation of Burrows, publicly falsify the record of an honest man who was a candidate for congress on an opposing ticket.

But how was this state of affairs brought about? Very easily. This Napoleon of politics had a long list of political enemies, and the appointment of delegates to the convention would place almost dictatorial powers in his hands and change the old order to a new one, "vix barones, vox populi." John H. Powers, who was, in a measure, to be one of the beneficiaries of this movement, was Custom Dressmaking Department. 5th Floor.

An invitation is extended to ladies to call and give our custom dressmaking department a trial.

Whether your materials were purchased from us or not we are willing to make your dress, knowing that we will have gained a customer when you see the class of work we are doing.

It is not by any means an experiment with us--we have already turned out work that for FINISH, FIT and ELEGANCE of style is equal to any done in the world.

For the present we are making dresses at ONE HALF the price charged for similar work in New York, Boston, Philadelphia or Chicago.

Our efforts to establish, with the aid of the best talent from Paris and Berlin, a first class dressmaking establishment in Omaha, has been greeted with flattering success, and we hope that Omaha ladies will see that it is to their interest to aid us in carrying on such an establishment.

Although we have a complete stock of dress patterns, trimmings, etc., brought from Paris by our representative especially for this department, yet it by no means follows that you must purchase from us in order to have your goods made. Bring in your materials--we will show you what we can do.

DRESS GOODS. New Scotch Cheviot Plaids, $1.25

We have a very rich line of neat cloth colors in genuine Scotch Cheviots, equal to any shown in New York for $1.50, our price $1.25. Velvets and silks to match.

undoubtedly acquainted with and assisted in the program.

So the two men, Powers and Burrows, who wanted, in an unfair manner, to control the state alliance, were determined to have control of the independent convention. They ordered that two persons should do all the work of calling, organizing and filing the appointments of the convention; a great responsibility for two men to assume. But they feared if more than two were appointed they could not control, so they would not allow three to be designated, and then they soon planned that they should control the two men, or rather one man, for that was all intended. So Burrows ordered Thompson, secretary of the alliance, and his own secretary, who obeys implicitly his orders, to name one member; of course that was Burrows and Mr. Craddock, secretary of the Knights, was to name the other. Craddock declined to do that duty, and Burrows, with the aid of Powers, did the work with one object--that they should have complete control. No sane man, no man with the least honesty in his nature, could have committed so great a wrong upon political parties in the beginning of a reform movement where the interests of so many laborers and producers were dependent. Powers schemed at the convention to secure his own nomination for governor. Then he schemed at the third congressional convention to nominate McKeighan to secure nomination for governor. Then, as Powers and Burrows were open and active prohibitionists, strong prohibition counties which they could control were given a representative far beyond their population. They played for labor votes, the greatest outrage by this pair of rogues, who were actually selling out the labor element from its just proportion of representation.

For labor friends at the state convention felt this outrage, and were determined to force at least an appearance of justice even then, but other counsels prevailed, and with the hope that in the future fair treatment might in measure atone for so glaring a wrong, it was passed by in silence but discontent.

But these two, Powers and Burrows, would not stop; they insisted that men who followed their lead must be absolute slaves; they must not question their orders; must read no papers at all, no speakers except such as were commissioned by them. It has become apparent, too, that only one old political party must be benefited by their action, as was pointed out when McKeighan was nominated, a democrat, and endorsed by the democratic, whereas when Ken was nominated, a republican, the ex-senator refused to endorse. When Burrows issued a slander against V. Harlan and ex-Senator Van Wyck as his ally, he was a man and personal friend of Harlan, repeated charges, a charge which all parties know to be false, the losses of Powers and Burrows, would not tolerate the exercise of manhood on the part of ex-Senator Van Wyck, and they determined to force him out and destroy his influence. Burrows was a good man for this work. He is a good man to undertake to banish ex-Senator Van Wyck, and they determined to force him out and destroy his influence. Burrows was a good man for this work. He is a good man to undertake to banish ex-Senator Van Wyck, and they determined to force him out and destroy his influence.
