A BUSINESS CHANGE.

H. S. Pickering Becomes Western Agent for the Campbill Presses. Mr. H. S. Pickering, well known to printers all the way from the Missouri river to the Rocky mountains, has re cently resigned as treasurer and man ager of the Omaha type foundry, which he has filled, with conspicuous success, for the past three years. He has opened offices at 1114-1116 Farnam street as the western agent for the well known

Campbell printing presses. Mr. Pickering has had long experience in handling of printers' supplies and materials, and is entirely competent to fill the important position which he has now accepted. For seventeen years he has devoted himself exclusively to this line of business. Before coming to Omaha he was employed for five years as cashier of the Chicago house of the Campbell Printing Press and Manufacfice in New York and its principal shops at Taunton, Mass. As western agent for this great house Mr. Pickering will control all the territory between Des Moines and Utab. He will deal in new and second hand presses, printer's ink, varnishes and printer's supplies. The Campbell company now makes all classes of presses, from the Webb perfecting to the small est cylinder boon presses. machinery has an enviable reputation and ranks as a standard for finest class of work. An important feature of Mr. Pickering's business will be a complete repair shop, which he expects will grow into an industry of considerable importance. It is, perhaps, not too much to say that no western business man has a wider acquaintance among the editors and printers of this section than Mr. Pickering. His popularity with them has been frequently demonstrated, and there is good reason to predict the success of his present undertaking.

To Consumers of Oils and Gasoline We presume every family recognizes prices being charged today oil and gasoline, but perhaps few know how this change has been brought about. A few months ago we established a branch house here to sell oils and gaso line to the trade in competition with that gigantic monopoly, the Standard Oil Co. At that time W. W. oil was selling at retail for 11 cents, and gasoline at 11 cents.

Through our competition the prices today to the retail trade are reduced about 3 cents on oil and same on gasoline, which means the saving of a great many dollars a year to every workingman, and which, but for our competition, would go to swell the profits of the oil monopoly.

The Standard oil trust does not like our competition, and spare no efforts to work against us; but it is to the interest of the workingman to maintain us in your market, and you can do this by denanding our oil from your grocer. that you get no other. SCOFIELD, SHURMER & TEAGLE,

Out. "I was placer mining and prospecting on the American river in the early '50's with a chum who knew it as well as I did," remarked Major Hancock Dennis of the Virginia (Nev.) Chronic le recently to a number of pioneers, "and we left from $8 to $20 a day to join a new excitement. We prospected wherever we saw a chance to prospect, as we journeyed with our blankets on our backs We were joined by a young tenderfoot, who was a very agreeable fellow, and who endeavored in every way to lighten our burdens. He wanted to learn how to prospect and how to pan dirt, and we showed him the common process fol-

"We came to a beautiful place on the American river, where the rocks stood out abruptly to majestic heights, at the base of which the soil was not over six inches deep, covered by a luxuriant growth of vegetation. My pard and I simply looked at the nutritious grass and wished we had pack animals to it, but not so with our tenderfoot. He hurried to build a camp fire and mix the flour for flapjacks, and slice a little bacon, remarking: I want to prospect some of this dirt, and will you attend to the cooking? "'Certainly,' we replied, winking and blinking at each other like owls in the glaring sunlight. 'By all means go and prospect that dirt; you might find some banknotes in there. He looked at us inquiringly and some what imploringly, as our remarks eemed to shake him in his purpose. However, he scooped up a pan of dirt from a little naturally formed riffle at the base of the rocky precipice, and he washed it at a little spring near by, and to our utter astonishment, complete discomfiture and unbounded delight, he produced over $5 worth of coarse gold

Oranges in Arizona. The Arizona Improvement company has recently placed its order for three car loads of Fiorida orange trees, budded varieties. The past three years have fully demonstrated the fact that the Salt River valley will produce oranges as large in size and fine in flavor, and inferior in no particular, to the finest produced anywhere. Hundreds of acres will be put out this spring. A large number of Kansas farmers have recently settled in the Salt River valley. An other colony, much larger, is now on the road, and will arrive in a few days. They have been attracted by the wonderful fertility of the soil and general healthfulness of the valley.

Her Ex-Husband Tattooed in His Sleep. Charles Bush of Strousetown, Pa., is a victim of a curious assault while asleep. He is twenty-four years of age and is engaged as a handle fitter in a shovel factory at that place, where he is one of the leading lights of the Methodist church. About nine months ago he married a young lady of Brownville. They lived together peaceably until about six months ago, when trouble arose and they inally agreed to separate. The young wife left town, but the husband continued on in the shovel factory and went to board with a neighbor. From time to time since their separation Bush has been in receipt of communications warning him to leave town at He paid no attention to these missives, which were invariably signed with a cross. On December 17 last he received a long communication telling him that if he did not leave in a few days he would be marked in such a way that he would carry it to the grave. Last Sunday night the young man, as sual, attended services at the church of which he is a member. During the night, after he had retired, he heard a noise, and that was the last he remembers until the next morning, when he awoke to find a large blue printed on his face. It extends from the top of his hair down over his nose, with crosspiece over the forehead, The odor of chloroform, which filled the room, indicated that he had been under its influence. An examination by a physician dis closed that the cross had been picked or cattooed with India ink. In the centet were the letters "N. to C." Last night received another communication from the same source telling him he must leave the city inside of twenty-exception of his wife. Something of a Snake.

Tom Ward went out hunting, taking with him his liver-colored dog, says the Uvalde Reflector. After being out all morning he went to the camp of the guards near the pesthouse, out on the slough, two miles from the town, to take dinner. After the meal he and John C. McCarthy took up their guns and started out hunting again. The dog wandered ahead of them some distance. and after a while they heard him barking in a furious manner, and shortly after they heard a sharp yelp, accompanied by confused sounds of a desperate struggle. The gentlemen ran on, but were unable for quite a while to locate the spot whence the sound came. Finally they separated, and McCarthy, puruing the search, came to a place where the brush was broken down and the grass torn up, and suddenly he heard the ound of the rattles of a monster rattlesnake, and, looking round to his right, observed the largest of that species ever before seen or heard of in the world. He fired his Winchester into the monster's head killed it. Mr. Ward came up, and the two proceeded to open the serpent's stomach, whereupon the lost dog sprang out alive and unhurt, with the exception of a few bruises and a severe fright. They skinned the snake and brought the hide to town and turned it over to Joe Townsend to stuff.

This morning Mr. Townsend brought the stuffed skin to this office and it is now in our possession. The skin measures thirty-six feet long and eighteen feet in diameter. It is said that the snake when alive was much larger. The gentlemen named in the foregoing are well known in Uvalde county and are of unquestioned verac ity, and they and other citizens who saw the snake and dog on the ground are ready to make oath to the truth of the statement given above. Any one wishing to see the snake skin will please call efore January 1, for then we intend to send it to the Smithsonian institute at Washington. The dog can be seen any day at the home of Tom Ward, in the western part of the city.

Omaha, Neb. MARRIED TO ESCAPE MARRYING A Los Angeles Girl Objected to a Rich Old Bachelor. On the 21st of May last Miss Dora Elliott, a young lady of a neighboring city, and George Rogers, a young man of the same place, were united in mar-riage, says the Los Angeles Times. They separated in less than an hour after the holy man pronounced them one, and since that time they have met as strangers only. Miss Dora, or Mrs. Rogers, who is highly educated and belongs to a wealthy and highly respectable family is now in this city earning her several years or just after the young woman completed her education and entered society. Among her mother's friends at that time was an old and ugly bachelor, but to make up for his face he possessed much wealth in the shape of lands and bank notes, and as Miss Dora's mamma had a sharp eye for the main chance she began to scheme as soon as her daughter returned from school. The rich man suddenly discovered that he had such a thing as a heart, and when his ancient eyes were first lit up Dora's lovely face and trim figure, he made up his mind to offer her his hand and a fair share of his worldly goods.

moment for months and perhaps years the match was arranged in true French style on the spot, and the next morning poor Dora woke up an engaged girl, without even being consulted. It is easier to imagine the scene when mother and daughter met than to describe it. There were tears and all that kind of thing, but the young girl was given to understand that she and the ancient lover would be married on a certain day, even if the heavens should cave in

A few days before she was to be married to "Money Bags" she called on young Rogers, who was brought up by an old-school southern gentleman, and in consequence stands ever ready spill his heart's blood in defense of any female in distress. Dora told George her sad story and asked him to help her out. warm blood was up to fighting heat in a second, and had it not been for the girl's cooler head the old party who wanted to sacrifice a tender lamb would have been devoured by cemetery bugs long ere this. Dora explained that the only way to save her from a fate worse than death was to marry her himself and forever knock the ancient party out of the ring. George did not love the girl and he knew that she did not love him, but he had promised to save her, and, as she insisted on the marriage plan, sented, and the day was set for the next morning at an early hour. Dora reurned home a happy girl and slept a sweetly that night for the first time in many months.

e next morning the couple met at the house of a kind minister, who had promised to tie the knot, and, as a icense had been secured, the couple were soon made one, so far as the laws of California are concerned. The bride was duly kissed by her husband and the minister, and in less than five minutes she was on her way to her mother. But she did not confide in the old lady in the regular runaway match style. She went to her room, packed a few clothes, keepsakes, etc., in a grip, wrote a note to mamma, asking her to call on the minister, and took the next train for Los Angeles. She proved so cute that her family
