The Coroner's Jury Begins an Investigation of the Affair and Examines a Number of Vitnesses-The Testimony

Brandran, Neb., Feb. 16.- [Special relegram to THE BEE. | Detective Liddard of this place arrested a party here this even ing, supposed to be Joe Dwyer, the slayer of John Connors, who was stabbed to death in the lodging house Sunday morning. He wave the name of Wolfe, then that of Snyder. He claims to have lodged that place on Friday night, but says he left Omaha Saturday morning and was in jail in South Omaha Saturday night and Sunday. He fully answers the discription of Dwyer as sent out by Chief Seavey in this morning's Ber. Sergeant Graves of the Omaha police force and Al Bebout, city jailer of Omaha, came in this even-ing at 10:30. After seeing Wolfe they think him to be the right party and will take him to Omaha at 5 a. m. tomorrow.

The Inquest.

An inquest to determine the cause of the death of John Conners, who was killed in the lodging house at Eleventh and Farnam streets Saturday night, was commenced at Heafey's undertaking rooms yesterday after-

Hon. M. V. Gannon appeared on behalf of as state at the request of the county attorney, who was otherwise engaged.

Considerable delay was experienced in getting witnesses. The whole crowd of inmates of the lodging house had been placed under arrest Saturday night, but through a mistake on the part of one of the assistant county attorneys they were all released from custody yesterday morning. Several policemen were detailed to look them up and at 4 o'clock a few had been found and the inquest

Lewis H. Wall was the first witness. He was in the room at the time the fracas occurred along with fifteen or twenty other men. He was slightly acquainted with the dead man, having been at work cutting ice with him. The witness did not board at the house where the racket occurred, but was passing there about midnight with his chum, and one of the men whom he knew invited them in and they entered. They had only been there about five minutes when the man known as "Shorty" asked the witness to "chip in" and help buy a can of beer. The collection being taken, the money was turned over to Cushing, who started for the beer. He returned in a few minutes, saying he could not get any beer, but could not account for the money. Shorty and Cushing got into a squabble and the latter slapped Shorty. The fraces continued for a few seconds, when It became evident that Cushing was too the became evident that Cushing was too much for Shorty and the latter went into a small room partitioned off from the room where the crowd was and closed the door. Cushing tried to get the door open, but at this point Connors stepped up and endeavored to quiet him. Then Cushing and a man named Flannery started to fight. Connors was standing near. At this point Shorty came out of the room with a knife in his hand and struck right and left at the crowd. The witness did not see Shorty stab Connors, but he was striking at random as fast as he could. When the Facket was stopped Connors was on the floor. He was picked up and placed on a chair and Shorty disappeared up the stairway. Some one suggested that whisky be given to Connors, but witness felt of his pulse and annors, but witness let do

Joseph L. Williams was the next witness. He was with the last witness and saw the whole affair. His testimony was corroborative of the foregoing up to the point when Shorty withdrew into the small room. According to this witness Connors persuaded Cushing to put down a coffee cup, with which he intended to hit Shorty, and told him that if he must fight he should "fight square." While he was talking to him in this strain, both was talking to him in this strain, both feet from the door af the room where Shorty was, the latter came out and walked up be-hind Conners. He reached around in front of the latter and struck him twice. The witpess saw the knife in Shorty's hand, but did bot know Conners had been stabbed. Cushing started out, but Flannery stopped him, saying, "You've got to fight, Shorty." They plinched and Shorty ran up and stabbed Cushing in the back and then ran upstairs. Connors sat down on a chair and never uttered a word after he was struck. He died sitting up and leaning against the wall. The witness was positive that Connors and Shorty were sober. He described Shorty as being about five feet in described Shorty as being about five feet in height, weight 175 pounds, thick set, long body, short legs, knock kneed; twenty-five years old, blue eyes, complexion "bleached" from working in the mines; a few freekles en s face. The witness did not see what Shorty

The next witness was Clifford A. Knight. one of the lodgers in the house. He was in the bedroom which was partitioned off from the large room when the fracas occurred.

Was in bed, but was awake. He heard the racket and saw Shorty come in from the other room. He shut the door and leaned against it with his back while he reached into his pants pocket and pulled cut a knife, which he opened. The door then flew open and Shorty stabled at Conners twice. stabbed at Connors twice.

Frank C. Dillon was next examined. He had injured his back a short time ago and was doing chores about the house. The day after the murder he found the knife with which the cutting had been done. It was in the bedroom off the large room where the fight occurred and was on the floor between the bricks and the wall. A man called "Kan" or "Kansas," who worked around the lodging house, told the witness that after the rutting Shorty ran up stairs and then came down again and went into the bedroom. He crept into one of the bunks behind a man who had retired and pulled his coat up over his head. He remained there until the police officer announced that the man was dead and told all in the house to consider themselves under arrest. When he heard this Shorty trembled until he shook the whole tier of bunks. r "Kansas," who worked around the lodgbled until he shook the whole tier of bunks He then opened a small hatchway which had been cut through the wall near the bunk where he had taken refuge and climbed out, dropping the knife from his pocket as he The witness did not know where "Kan"

The ladies who are at the head of the movement held a meeting in the parlors of the Young Men's Christian association building yesterday to hear the report of the finance committee. This report shows $1,155 on hand with $800 more in sight, with Trinity, Newman, Seward and the First Methodist churches to hear from.

The amount asked for was $2,000, and as nearly all of this sum has been raised the ladies feel greatly encouraged. The proposition now before the society is to rent a house of twelve rooms to start with, furnish nine of them for sick wards and use the others for kitchen, dining room, parlor and office purposes, combining the parlor and office in one room. Already enough furnitare has been donated to furnish eight rooms and has been donated to furnish eight rooms and the rest will be secured at once,

The ladies stated that a deaconess home and training school for nurses would be added to the hospital within a short time, making it one of the most complete institutions of its kind in the country.

> The Commercial club of Kansas City, recognizing the advantages of Houston, the Texas metropolis, has accepted the invitation of the Commercial club of the latter city to visit it upon the occasion of the next excursion, occurring in the first part of next month, says the Daily Star.

Houston, situated upon the Buffalo bayou r river, is fifty miles from the sea and fifty feet above the sea level, having a population of 40,000 people within the nine square miles embraced within the city limits, and this number is being greatly increased by the large number of homeseekers arriving in the city

Yet there is no boom; it is a steady, healthy growth, due to the excellent financial condition of the city. For example, the First National bank of Houston stands unprecedented among the banks of America as having never borrowed a dollar, never rediscounted a bill, never issued a dollar, its surplus being twice its capital stock, its deposits sixteen times its capital stock, and its president claims that it can loan its money at 2 per cent and pay a 10 per cent dividend to its stockhold-transacted weekly, ranking it at the head in banking clearings of any city in the United States having 40,000 population. Houston is pre-eminently the working-man's city. In the time of booms real estate is placed at fictitious values, the cost of living is high, while wages are not increased pro-portionately, and the laborer is unable to cope with the high prices. But in Houston there is no boom and the mechanics can live cheaper there than in any place in Texas and for nearly one-half what it costs in the north. A $500 house there is as comfortable as any $1,000 house in Kansas City. Building mate-rial is chean, for there are vast forests of pine and valuable hard woods at the very pine and valuable hard woods at the very door. Vegetables and meats are soid at less than one-half the prices of the north. Hents and fuel are both low. The warm winter re-quires but little fire for heating purposes and thus an important item of expense is saved. Already eleven railroads, employing over 2,000 men in Houston alone, are in operation and five more have had charters granted them. Houston is a terminal raint and the them. Houston is a terminal point and the shops and general offices of nearly all of these roads are located here.

Over $260,000 is distributed monthly from the railroad offices alone, while from the 280 factories, manufactures and other industrial companies employing men over twenty thou-sand people get their daily bread. The wages paid are higher than those paid in Missouri,

Examination of the freight tariffs from all points to Houston by railroads, steamships and sailing vessels, will show that Houston has territory around her in every direction of 200 miles, over which she can do business practically without competition, thus making er the best jobbing and manufacturing point n Texas.

The saving of wharfage and lighterage by navigation on the Buffaloriver and the ex-cellent railroad facilities have made Houston the largest interior cotton market in the world, as well as causing her to be an impor-tant point for the shipment of freight.

A wide field is open here for enterprises, such as cotton and woolen factories, flour mills, furniture, sash and door plants, mahine shops, car shops, wagon and plow works, and, in fact, for any line of business. works, and, in fact, for any line of business.

Money is abundant, banking capital ample, rates of interest reasonable, the citizens public spirited and up with the times.

Of the thirty-four largest American cities Houston has the lowest death rate.

This was the conversation that concluded a long discussion at the board of health meeting yesterday on the question of caring for strangers who reach the city in a desti-tute condition and frequently suffering from contention and frequently suffering from contagious diseases.

"It's the county's business to care for such cases," said Mayor Cushing, "and if they don't care for them there's a way to make them do it. The city pays nine-tenths of the county taxes and the law especially provides that such cases come under the county's care. I would be in favor of creating a new county, conversive with the limits of the city and coextensive with the limits of the city and thus settle this matter."

ANNOUNCEMENT—I would respectfully inform my friends and the public that I am prepared to perform work in the most approved style of the Dental Art. I refine my gold, manufacture my plates, and he sitate not to say that I am performing operations in a style to challenge competition. All work is warranted to give satisfaction, and would here especially invite all, who have failed from any cause in receiving full satisfaction, to call and try work skillfully made. I am also prepared to insert Artificial Paintes, and am warranted in assuring the public who may be afflicted with malformation or loss of this organ, whether congenital, accidental or occasioned by disease, that they will be successfully treated.
