Getting Ready for the Fray.

There was hurrying to and fro in the camp last evening. All over the city meetings were held by the city authorities who are defendants in the injunction suits brought by Attorney Scabrook Judge Thornell stated last evening that the suits would not be tried today, although this merning was set as the time for hearing them several days ago. On the other hand, the attorneys for the defense state that injunction cases take precedence of all others, and they propose to have the cases decided if they have to nail up the court house doors to prevent business from being carried on. Judge Thorneli is known to be a man of some will power, and the people who are not immediately interested will take a good deal of pleasure in standing in the background and seeing how things come on.

But the chief of police and the others who are with him as defendants acted on the supposition that the trial would come off today, and they held consultations by the dozen. A meeting of the council was held in the police headquarters, though what the object was no one could be gotten to say. But it is unani-mously agreed that something very large and heavy is going to drop in the next day or two.

The attention of the county supervisors was alled to the fact some time age that the callroads have been in the habit of beating he counties, out of taxes which should be paid to them, but instead have been paid into ed in the New York Sun, the state treasury on account of a stauntory "Why?" he was asked, "I had it cut he state treasury on account of a statutory provision that all property owned by the only a week ago. roads shall be assessed by the executive ouncil Instead of by the county asessors. The grounds upon which the remonstrance s founded are various. In some of them it is diegod that the property which is claimed to se exempt from local taxation are not used in ny way in the operation of the roads. In there the records do not show that the companies own the land in question, and in nearly all the assessment of the executive council which is given it by the county assessor. The average of the valuation of the land within the city limits by the council is about $15 per lot, while the assessor places the value of lots in the same vici-nity at $60. An investigation of the case with respect to the property in the country shows the same discrepancy. The council places their value at $25 per acre, while the books of the assessor rate them at $75. The property included in the remonstrance amounts to about four hundred lots in the city limits and about four hundred acres in the country. This makes a difference to the country of about $2,000 in taxes.

The railroads which are mentioned in the remonstrance as having having been follow-ing out this plan, are the Union Pacific, the Northwestern, the Burlington, the Mil-wankee, the Rock Island, the Wabash and the St. Joe. A strong effort will be made by the county authorities to have the executive council take steps toward putting an end to the manifest injustice which the county has been suffering at the hands of the railroads. County Auditor Hendricks will accompany the remoustrance to Des Moines.

It Fell Through,

There was not so much indignation floathouse as had been expected. An announcement was made during the day by parties who had been instrumental in setting the indignation ball rolling that owing to certain reasons which they did not care to make public the meeting would be postponed. They stated, however, that the idea of having such a meeting was not to be abandoned altogether, but it would be held in the near future. It is stated, and, indeed, it seems to be the general impression, that the indignation meeting will not be held at all. When the idea was first sprung upon the public it was very popular. But as soon as people had time to think the matter over they came to the conclusion that it would be a very impositic thing to hold a meeting for the pur-pose of decrying what might prove to be an honest attempt to enforce the law. It was thought that it would antagenize some who, while strongly disposed in favor of prohibition, would at once resent any attempt to prevent the enforcement ven of the unpopular prohibitory law. On he other hand, many who are heartly op-lesed to prohibition were of the opinion that public meeting would be far from the proper sing to use as a means of downing the law. thing to use as a means of downing the law. A fear existed that after so long a time had been given conservative business men in which to cool off, it would be difficult to find citizens of any prominence who would be willing to take the lead. Consequently the meeting was pestponed, in all probability

A report was circulated yesterday that a meeting had been called for some time in the afternoon. It had been worked up very quietly, and the utmost precaution, it is said, had been used to prevent the knowledge that such a move was thought of from being made public. The cull was said to have had the enatures of a large number of the best business men in the city, but ro one seemed to know just who was in it. A number of men who it was thought might reasonably come under the head of the best business men were interviewed on the subject, but they all

One or two things have come to light in the past day or two that are inclined to startle one who has been looking for a speedy death of the saloon business in Council Bluffs. A well known attorney made the following statement yesterday. He was retained sev-eral days ago by one of the saloonists who had been served with notice that an injunction had been served with notice that an injunction suit had been begun against him. Yesterday he received a call from the salocakeeper, who stated that he had been notified by a certain party who had authority that the only way in which he could hope to get out of his trouble would be by hiring a certain other attorney to defend him. The elient was very sorry, but under the circum stances he could do nothing but change his lawyer. The same attorney says he knows of several cases of the same kind, and he is in-clined to think there is something in the wind that the general public doesn't know about.

District court was monopolized yesterday by the trial of the case of Martin Dermoddy vs George A. Murphy, et al. The case is one in which Dermoddy is trying to get damages to the amount of $1,000, which he claims he suffered by reason of a change which was made in a road running past his farm near Neola. The road which was first used was apandoned and a new one laid out by the county supervisors at the request of George A. Murphy and a number of other property owners, they promising to pay whatever damage was suffered. Dermoddy entered a protest at the time the work was done, but

On the next afternoon, the barber in the Park Avenue hotel was making his last excursion with a razor over the same man's face. "You are getting very bald," said he. "Now what a gigantic mystery it is this subject of the hair. I am bald; you are getting bald. Neither executive council for assessment. He then of us would try to save a thousand dollars if that would have kept us a full head of hair, but neither money nor skill nor wisdom will save any man a single hair of his head. For my part, the only knowledge I have, after being in the barber business twenty years, is purely negative. I think that if you don't have your hair cut it will not fail

> "What? Never have it cut?" "Stop a minute. Did you ever see a bald-headed woman? You never did. Well, such a thing as a bald-headed woman exists, but they are very rare. Now, why are women practically never bald, and why are men growing bald in greater numbers every year? You naturally reply-or you would if you had thought about it as much as I-that the reason lies in the hats women wear. Their hats amount to nothing. The avrage bonnet does not weigh two ounces. Their hats are open and there is more or less ventilation under and through them, whereas men's hats are heavy boxes that enclose and weigh down and stifle the hair."

"I never thought of that."

"Well, that amounts to nothing," said he barber. "It sounds important, but shatever we say in favor of women's hats is offset by the fact that they wear them twice as many hours at a time as men wear theirs. Women often put a hat on in the morning and don't remove it till dinner; they wear their bonnets in church, at the theater, during their alls, everywhere and all the time. The mportant difference between the sexes is, after all, that boys and men have their hair cut and girls and women don't. A little girl's hair is nursed after she passes early childhood. Some fathers who re obliged to keep their families in the insist that their babies' hair shall be cut, and the mothers yield in the cases of the girls with great reluctance, but after the little girls are four or five years old the women fight to have heir hair uncut thenceforward, and such is the rule with most girls. After thinking it all over for twenty years am of the opinion that haircutting produces baldness.

"See," continued the barber," "what wonderful heads of hair the Indians have. How thick it is; how splendid are the braids they wear down their backs. It is so with all savages-all have plenty of hair and none ever cut it. The white men who live in wild ing around loose in the vicinity of the court | countries or on our border exemplify the same thing. They wear their hair down on their shoulders and it is thick and uxuriant; but it has not been cut in the time they have lived the life of the rude people around them. My calm deision is that if you want to escape baldness you must keep the seissors away from your head. No medicine will remedy baldness. To find a physic that will do so is the surest road to a giant fortune, and men have been experimenting for more than a century without finding

A Husband Who Will Have Peace.

James Galbraith is the most good naured man in Pittsburg. He does not object to his wife living with another man as long as they don't bother him. Galbraith left his home for a visit to relatives. When he returned he found that his wife had taken the household goods and set up another home on the next street, with Joseph Stern, a bachefor, as masculine head of the family. The new establishment was being run upon money belonging to the absent husband. Instead of becoming excited at this turn of affairs. Galbraith called apon his wife, congratulated her on her election of a companion, and then reurned to his own house to dwell in lone liness. Mrs. Galbraith and Stern were ejected from the house they were occu pying, and they moved back to their old me. The house was not calculated to hold two husbands and one wife. It was crowding matters to much, Galbraith hought, so he gathered up a few of his belongings and left. He is a patient man, but he says that if his wife and her lover follow him around any more, bothering him, he will have the law on them. He wants peace, and is now trying to find it at the residence of a cousin.

"Sousing" a Drunk. The employment of the tavern trough as a ducking stool, was accidentally discovered, quite recently, by a lady well known to us, says the San Francisco Chronicie. She was passing such a trough, when the saloonkeeper, a big. burly fellow, came out of his door dragging a poor old man about half his size The old man was rather the worse for liquor, and of course unable to resist. The saloonkeeper through the old man bodily into the trough and drenched him thoroughly. As the lady stood obthe supervisor disregarded it. Babies Washed by a Machine. Mrs. Hannah Dober, the mother of five little Dobers, has invented the most mique tellet apparatus on record, says the Tacoma Times. It is a machine that bathes, rinses, drips and dries the entire Dober brood simultaneously by the simple turning of a crank,

The Dobers live on the water front, near the old salmon cannery, back of Old Town. Like many of the houses in that vicinity, the home of the Dobers is built on piles. At high tide the back porch of this humble home extends over the water, and this fact was favorable to the idea which Mother Dober had worn concented in her mind for some time With the assistance of her husband, the enterprising, but overworked woman cut a hole in the flooring of the back porch about four feet square, and then built a windlass like those in use on oldfashioned well-curbs. Then she got a quantity of stout wire gauge or screens and made a crate or basket that would easily slip through the hole in the floor, This basket, which was about three feet deep, was hung in slings fastened at the four corners and then attached to the drum of the windlass. The baby washer was now complete and ready to be put in operation.

Bright and early every morning the five little Dobers are hustled out of bed The eldest, a girl of nine, though smal for her age, is an extremely handy young miss, and a great help to her mother. She peels the nightest off her little brothers 65 of her little brothers and sisters, likewise her own, and loads them into the wire basket. Next she throws in a handful of wafered soap then joins the fittle band of candidates for immersion. When every-thing is ready Mother Dober who has been attending to her household duties n the meantime, comes out and mans the windlass crank. She lowers her happy little flock down into the clear, cold water and gives them a thorough dousing by working the crank backward and forward. This movement and the commotion made in the basket by the children produces a lather from the soap, and cleanses the kids in a manner equal. if not superior, to the regulation hand

Unlike most children, who kick and raise a fuss when being scrubbed, the litthe Dobers actually enjoy their maturinal plunge bath. The cold water imparts a healthy glow to their pink skin, and their eyes sparkle with delight as they duck and tumble over one another in the basket. The voungest, a laughing little youngster only eight menths old, fairly shricks with delight at the prospects of a plunge, and cries when his mother thinks it too cold for him to go down in

When Airs, Dober thinks her brood is clean enough to last till the next morning she hauls the basket up flush with the platform, fastens the crank and lets them dry awhile. This operation and and the gentle zephyrs that blow in from Bellingham bay remove all traces of moisture, so that no towels are needed for drying the infants, which is an important saving of material as well an

Plucky Captain Saves a Refugee. A London letter tells how a Siberian political prisoner named Bourtzeff was aided by a British captain to escape from the czar. After many adventures and after cluding his guards in the Siberian prison Bourtzeff planted his foot firmly on the deck of the British steamer Ashlands, commanded by a stalwart, good-hearted Welshman, Captain Rees. The steamer proceed to Constantinople, where the authorities had been notified by the Russian government that a Russian prisoner was on board and was to be got off by some means or other. The first spy managed to get on board and when Captain Rees steamed from the Black Sea into the Bosphoru he found himself surrounded by Turkish patrol boats. He determined, however, hat Bourtzeff should be safe and sound so far as he could insure it on a British He was ordered on shore to the authorities, but he took good care to get Bourtzeff entered under an assumed name as a steward of the vessel and then he braved the Turk. He was examined and cross-examined as to his problematical steward of whose evolution the spy had managed to acquaint the authorities, and finally on the Turkish theory that a man will do anything for money, bribes were offered to Captain Rees ranging from £160 to £500. But the sturdy captain refused all such offers, denied the right to search his vessel and took a bold stand on the 'Romanus sum' basis. He went back to his ship, got up steam, and followed by the Turkish boats, raced down the Dardanelles into the Ægean sea with both Bourtzeff and the Russian spy on board, the latter not leaving the vessel until it reached Gibraltar. Then they made for England and Bourtzeff was landed safely on the London docks.

When the story got out Captain Rees was overwhelmed with congratulations and he has been made much of by the members of the National Liberal club.

The action of Chrncellor isims in or-dering the junior class of the Syracuse (N. Y.) university to omit dancing at helr coming reception has stirred ege life to its foundations. Before chapel the other morning one of the members of the faculty addressed the students and begged them not to hazard the name and standing of the university No one made reply. At the meeting of he executive committee of the junior class it was decided to hold the junio reception in the college parlors on Feb runry 12 and to forego dancing. At th same time there is a considerable ele ment in the class, particularly among the young women, who regard the att ude of the faculty as a curtailment o their personal rights, and arrangements are already afoot to give a dancing party on another date, to show their independ

C. Pass. Agt. Gen. Agt. Smitten by Conscience,

A sensational episode was witnessed in the United States court room in Parkersburg, W. Va., when it was crowded with witnesses, spectators and court officials. William Edgell was arraygued for violating the pension laws and pleaded, with much earnestness and bravado, "not guilty." The trial was proceeding when, without a word of warning, he fell to the floor unconscious, He was removed, restoratives applied and soon returned to consciousness. came in shortly afterward and pleaded "guilty." When questioned about his actions he said that his conscience accused him so strongly after making the false plea that he fainted away, and recovering himself concluded to tell the truth. He received a light sentence.
