DID SHE DIE FROM POISON?

Suspicious Circumstances Attending the Death of Emma Anderson.

DIED AFTER EATING A HEARTY MEAL.

Interview with the Parties Interested -The Dark Threat of an Unknown Woman Against Emma Anderson's Life.

Emma Anderson is dead.

Several other members of the family were taken deathly sick and one of them was pulled back from the grave only by prompt and decisive action.

And yet a physician says it was only a coincidence and due to an inexplicable freak of la grippe.

The deceased had been housekeeper in the family of Isaac S. Hascall for the past eight years. Though death resulted under most suspicious circumstances, the affair was not made public, but on the contrary every effort was made to hush the matter up, and this morning the remains were conveyed to the union depot and borne away on the 10:15 B. & M. train for the west.

The cause of death is unknown, as the only two physicians who were called in differ widely in their opinions, and each is very decided in his views regarding the true state of affairs. dine poisoning, and the other says that death resulted from congestion of the spine and oran induced by lagrippe.

All that is definitely known about the case is with reference to what occurred during the few hours intervening between the time when the deceased and several other members of the family were taken suddenly ill and when she died the next morning is the most swill serve. nost awful agony.
Tuesday noon no symptoms of illness had made their appearance so far as any member of the family was econcerned, and they sat down to dinner with no intimation of the strange sickness that was so suddenly to fol-The principal dish was boiled fresh beef, of which the Anderson woman and a nired man named John Esperson partook very freely, and the others, consisting of Martha McHeel, Mr. Rascall's sister, Victor Hascall, his son, and Annie Swanson, a ten-year-old niece of the housekeeper, ate more or less. About ten minutes later they all became violently sick with nauses, and the terrible retching continued during the afternoon. Mr. Hascall was away from home, and did not return until 11 o'clock that night, when he found all of the family completely ex-hausted, but they seemed to be recovering with the exception of Miss Anderson, who was almost unconscious and greating from the intense pain. Hascall at once started a fire and removed the sick woman to a warmer room. He did what he could to relieve her sufferings, but no dector was called until the following morning about 7:30 o'clock, when he went after Dr. Walker and asked him to hasten back with him at once. The doctor was just sitting down to breakfast, but hurwas just sitting down to breakinst, but harriedly donned his coat and accompanied Mr.

Hascall. When he entered the house, he said that the patient was suffering from a severe attack of congestion of the spine and brain.

Her skiu was cold and no pulse could be detected at the wrist or temple. The head was drawn back, punils contracted, and the was drawn back, pupils contracted and the woman was evidently dying. The doctor gave whisky internally and injected a large quantity of the stimulant hypodermically, but the attempt to revive her was unsuccessful and the stimulant by the stimul ful, and at $3:30 o'clock she was dead.

The other members of the family had rearly recovered from their sickness, but the man Esperson was still very weak and at that time his recovery was by no means cer-

Notwithstanding these suspicious circum-stances no report of the case was made to the coroner, and arrangements were quietly made for the funeral. Esperson's case was not attended to by Dr.

Esperson's case was not attended to by Dr. Walker. It seems that after recovering from the first attack of nausea, he went to the saloon at the corner of Thirteenth and Dorcas and sat down at a table. A few moments later, a man rushed into Dr. J. J. Solomon's office a few doors away and exclaimed, "For God's sake, doctor, come quick. There's a man dying right up here." Hastening to the saloon, Esperson was found in spasms. His chin was drawn down upon his chest, his teeth clenched, tongue rolled up and eyes staring. He was given a dose of tartar emetic and salt and soon afterward the emetic began to relieve the overburdened stomach. The man was laid upon a billiard table, and The man was laid upon a billiard table, and for an hour the doctor and several of the bystanders worked over him. When he recov-standers worked over him. When he recovered sufficiently to walk he was assisted back to the house. Of his experiences after that time he said this morning:

"When I got back there I found them all sick. Victor was stretched out on two chairs and Emma was in bed. I stayed a little while and then Martha said the was assisted the she was so sick she must go to bed, and I would have to go up to the eastle, Hascail's new building, where I always sleep. I told her I was so sick I couldn't go, but she said I had to, for if Hascail came home and found mesleeping there he would make a fuss. I couldnt walk up there though it was only a block and I had to take a street car. It was block and I had to take a street car. It was all I could do to get up stairs and get to bed. I was fearfully sick all night and got worse in the morning. I suppose I would have died before noon, but after Emma died some of the folks came up to see how I was I was hardly conscious and they hurried out and got Dr. Solomon again. He brought a battery and gave me medicine and after a while I came out all right. I don't suppose I will be well for a week, for my strength is will be well for a week, for my strength is all gone and my stomach is dreadfully sore. am satisfied I was poisoned, though I don't know how.

"My doctor says it was poison, but the other doctor says Emma died of a congestive chill. I don't think we all took congestive chilis at the same time. It don't seem to me that it could have been the meat. "There must have been some more of that "There must have been some more of that same meat around here somowhere, and I haven't heard of anybody outside of the family getting sick from it.

"Hascail came to me and said he didn't want to hear again of my saying that it was a case of poisoning, but I told him I would say just what I thought. I know I am in great luck to be alive today, and I think the case ought to be looked into. I have been surprised not to see anything about the case in the papers.

"I have worked for Hascall and boarded there since September.

and boarded there since September. I did the inside carpenter work on the custle, but during the winter I just chored about the house. The thing I want to know is how I happened to get sick."

Victor Hascall, a young man seventeen years of age, was asked for his opinion of the case and replied:

"There's something queer about it. The old man says Dr. Walker is right and Emma died of a chill, but I don't believe it. Common sense ought to tell anybody that half a dozen people wouldn't take a chill at the same time, as soon as they got up from the table, but the dector says a whole family might take the grip within five minutes.

"I think it was the meat, but the old man has traded with Kolbe for fifteen years and don't want to say the meat wasn't good. It seems to be a matter of friendship between him and the butcher. I don't believe any poison was used, but it was just diseased beef."

When asked about the domestic relations

When asked about the domestic relations in the family, he said everything was har-mentous, and there was no jarring in the household machinery.

The butcher, Mr. Kolbe, was very indig-nant over the diseased meat theory, and said that he would make somebody smart for it. Said he:

"I am the oldest butcher in Omaha, and a practical one, too, and I can tell diseased meat when I see it. I have property enough so that I don't have to work, and I needn't so that I don't have to work, and I needn't stoep to cuying diseased meat.

"The meat inspectors know this, and they don't even come to my shop. I sold that whole beef here, and ate some of it myself. No complaints have been heard about it. Mr. Hascall don't believe the trouble was with the meat, and when he heard that story he went right out to hush it up. He denied it to everybody he saw." It was Dr. Solomon who said that he was certain that it was a case of poisoning, and believed that the poison used was strychnine or nux vomica. Said he: "I am satisfied that the meat was all right

"I am satisfied that the meat was all right when it went to the house."

"Then you don't think it was a case of the grip!" inquired the reporter.

"Well," was the reply, "there are different kinds of grip. Dr. Walker says it was la grippe that killed his patient, but," he added, taking a heavy pair of nickel plated handcuffs from a drawer, "I think this kind of grip would suit the case better. I know that my patient was poisoned, and he got an awful dose of it too, but I managed to save him.

"Dr. Walker's patient contracted the grip under the same circumstances and at the same time and died. Why, if a doctor haln't been called to see my patient that afternoon he would have been dead in half as bour. Of course I don't know who administered that poison, but I am satisfied that it was meant for the Anderson woman.

"I thought so shortly after I heard of the case, and I now believe it more than ever. I found a man and his wife last night, and I have a written statement from them to the effect that a woman who was related to the deceased told them that she was satisfied that Miss Anderson would not die a natural death. I have this statement and will give it up and the names of the narties if the proper time comes. I don't suppose there is anything in the case for mo way or the other. "My patient is a poor Swede, and I am satisfied with saving his life, I don't know that there is anything in following up the

"There is little incentive unless there is a financial consideration, although I am a de-tective," and here the doctor showed his papers establishing his connection with Grannon's detective agency.

"I am a friend of Hascall and of Dr. Walker." he continued, "and I don't want to question their opinions regarding the case, but I certainly am entitled to my own views. What the motive for Miss Anderson's death might be I am not preson's death inight be I am not pre-pared to say. It is known that she was a single woman, yet when she left here a few years ago she went to St. Joe, where she gave birth to a cmid. She was away six months. Where the child is I do not know. I am not cognizant of the affairs of the family, but I was satisfied that there was something wrong somewhere, when I heard what that couple said last night. That woman, who for the present shall be nameless, certainly knew what she was talking about."

"What killed Emma Anderson!" was the question propounded to Dr. Walker.
"It was congestion of the spine and brain," was the reply, "and the symptoms were simi-lar to rerebro-spinal meningitis,"
"Were there no symptoms of strychnine

"The symptoms are very similar. There was contraction of the spine, the head was drawn back, and there was congestion of the stomach and bowels. I regard the attack of the other members solely as a coincidence. La grippe is a very strange malady, and it does strange things. I account for the general outbreak on the theory that the epidemic attacked different sets of nerve centers."

"Is it a common thing for a whole family to be attacked within five minutes?"

"Well, no, but, as I said before, I regard it as merely a concidence."

as merely a coincidence."
"Dr. Solomon says his patient was Yes, I know he does, but I saw the man

Wednesday on a lounge in Solomon's office, and he looked to me more as if he was scared to death than anything else. "Miss Anderson was dying when I was called in, and it was an impossibility to save her. Of course, I didn't say so at the time, for I didn't want to alarm the family, but she was most all help?"

YOUR SUNDAY DINNER.

What You Can Get for it and What it Will Cost.

It is not the season of the year when the markets are supposed to be teeming with table delicacies, but still the possessor of a well filled purse need not go hungry in

The necessity for the purse being well filled is ever greater than usual, as most kinds of eatables are very dear this season. Tomorrow the housewife will be studying the all-important question of "What shall we have for Sunday's dinner!"

A visit to the markets will furnish material for quite an elaborate menu. In the way of meats she can have a choice roast of beef or meats she can have a choice roast of beef or veal at 12½@15c per pound, or pork at 10c. If she wishes something more delicate a quarter of spring lamb at $1.25@1.50. Then there are chickens at 12½ per lb., turkeys at 18c and oysters at 40c per quart for bulk, or 60c per can for fancy counts. Those foud of game may find bleasure in a wild goose at 75c or ducks at 30@40c each, which have just commenced to arrive in the market. The next thing to be looked after are the vegetables, and in this direction there is plenty of room for selection. Lettuce, radishes, top onions, salsify and parsley can be had at 5c per head or bunch. New beets are 10c per bunch or three for 25c, asparagus 30c had at 5c per head or bunch. New beets are 10c per bunch or three for 25c, asparagus 30c 10c per bunch or three for 25c, asparagus 30c per ib, and spinach 30c per peck. Fine large cucumbers can be had at 15c a piece, cauliflower 25@30c per head, cabbage 5c per lb. In addition to this list are the standard vegetables, such as potatoes, turnips, onions, etc.

The variety of fruits on the market is rather limited, but the housewife can select oranges ranging in price from 25@35c per doz, bananas 30c per doz, for the finest and strawberries at about 45c per quart. Cranberries can be had at 15c per quart. From this assortment of meats, vegetables and this assortment of meats, vegetables an fruits will be made up Omaha's Sunday dir

COURTLAND BEACH TO HAVE A LINE.

Big Job of Paving Ordered to Be Commenced at Once-Another Big Factory is Assured.

The officers of the East Omaha land company announce yesterday that the electric motorline connecting East Omaha and Omaha will be in operation by the last of May.

Theline will extend from Sherman avenue, on Locust street, to a point opposite the Carter white lead works in East Omaha. An arrangement has just been completed by which, for the present the power for operating the line will be furnished by the street railway company of this city.

The transfer system will be complete, as parties from East Omaha will be transferred to the Sherman avenue line at Locust street and parties going to East Omaha will be transferred from any of the city lines by paying one fare.

paying one fare. About June 1 the Inter-state bridge company expects to billd and operate a spur from Locust street to Courtland beach, putfrom Locustaireet to Courtland beach, put-ting on a ten-minute service. This is inview of the fact that eastern parties have bought a tract of land on the beach and will expend $30,000 this season in putting up buildings and otherwise improving the shores of the take, making it a fashionable summer resort.

Paving evera Streets.

The East Omaha land company has let the contract for paving Avenue H from Twenty-first street in East Omaha to Eleventh street in this city. Hugh Murphy was the lucky man, and will begin putting in one and three-eighths of Color ado red sandstone as soon as the ground settles.

Most of the grading has been completed, so there is nothing to prevent the pavers from going on with their work. The contract calls for the completion of the work by June 1. The cost will be something in excess of $10.000. $60,000. Have Another Factory.

ARE MISFITS?

They are custom made clothing of merchant tailors, left on their hands for one reason or another. These we buy in large or small quantities for ready cash. For example: a suit of clothes, costing originally $40, we can, according to style and quality, sell for $15 or $20. Just think of it, a saving of 50 per cent, one half the original cost. Of pantaloons we have a good variety, ranging in price from $3 to $7, originally made from $7 to $15, many of them of the latest designs, from the best tailoring establishments throughout the country. We request an early inspection,

Merchant Tailor's Misfits and Uncalled for Garments.

They adjourned, feeling fully convinced that the origin of the Misfit Parlors was to abolish high tariffs on Clothing and the truth of the Parlors having the most elegant display of
