Attorney General Stone's Argument Supporting Iowa's Claim to East Omaha. LAW AND FACTS IN THE MATTER.

Points on Which the Attorney Hopes to Win-Where to Worship-The Last Railroad Victum Unidentified.

There has been a great amount of public interest in the Cut-Off Island case, which is now pending in supreme court. This interest has been caused largely by the steadily increasing value of the property which is in litigation, and the promise it now gives of being a favorite location for manufacturing interests. The white lead works which have been removed from Omaha to the island are the first to start up there, but it is stated that as soon as the ownership of the land is decided as regards the two states, property will begin to boom. Real estate men are therefore greatly interested in the affair, both in this city and in Omaha, and the decision of the supreme court will be looked for with considerable anxiety by those who are immediately concerned. Attorney General Stone, who has been at work upon the case in connection with City Attorney Stewart, completed the answer to the petition of the plaintiffs yesterday and sent on the papers to be filed in the supreme court at Washington. The answer consists of fourteen pages of typewritten of fourteen pages of typewritten paper and contains an exhaustive reply to the allegations of the plain-tiffs. The main points in it are as tiffs. The main points in it are follows: The defendant admits that states of lowa and Nebraska were admitted as elleged, and also that the line dividing the states was substantially as given in the petition. It alleges, however, that the changes which were made in the course of the river were not made by Imperceptible extensions, but rapidly and suddenly. It is further al-leged that the Missouri river is a river of the first-class, and that the amount of water which flows through it varies largely at different times. The plain through which it flows at present consists of a soft friable loam, which is very susceptible to the action of the water. It readily yields to the force of a current and the banks of it afford very slight resistance to the changes which the rapidly flowing Missouri is constantly making. This plain is also very nearly level. being as high at the base of the bluffs that being as new at the base of the bins that border it as it is in the centor, and therefore the force of gravity does not help to confine the river to any part of it. The current of the river is very rapid, varying at different stages of the water from five stages of the water from five to ten miles per hour. The river is subject to annual and semi-an-nual freshets, during which it rises and spreads over a large portion of the alluvial plain. During these freshets it often cuts through the necks of bends, entirely for-saking the former channel, and while it is subsiding it cuts away its banks on one side and builds them up on the other, often as rapidly as 100 to 150 feet within twenty-four lours. On account of this uncertainty the bed of the river is not in fact the channel in which it now flows, but it consists of the whole plain lying between the bluffs. Instances are cited where strips of territory hundreds of feet wide have become covered with the water of the river and after the freshet has assed away the land then became dry as efore. Large tracts of land, covering cres in extent, have been taken away from the Nebraska side of the river by the force of the current, and the river used them as its fores bed, but later in the same season the water passed away and left them dry and far re-moved from the course of the stream.

Notwithstanding these studien changes, the defendant alleges that the land that is thus washed away can be identified as being the same land, and in the same position, the changes having only affected the surface soil to a depth of a few feet. It is also claimed that all the land which is claimed by the plaintiff, has been formed by the rapid pro-gress of avuision just described. The remainder of the answer is occupied by a description of the boundary of the states as fixed by the center of the stream at the time of the admission of Jowa to the union, and the course of the river as it flowed in 1877. immediately prior to the sudden cutoff Notwithstanding these sudden changes the Trouble Over a Meat Market.

A mortgage sale was advortised to have taken place yesterday afternoon at the Initial Point meat market on Broadway near Sixth street. The mortgage was for $340 and covered all the stock and fixtures. The mortgagee was John A. Creighton of Omaha. The stock had been mortgaged by the former proprietors, Messrs. Muchoff & Peffer, and the payment of the mortgage had not been assumed by Leake. Consequently Leake claimed that he did not have to pay the mortgage, and made it decid-edly unpleasant for Deputy Marshal White when he attempted to serve the paper. White broke down the barn door and had taken possession of the horses when sud-denly Constable Evans appeared on the scene armed with a landlord's writ of attach-ment that had been issued in Justice Cones' court in favor of Martin Casey, the owner of the building, to secure the payment of the last month's rent. The landlord's writ took precedence of the mortgage, and consequently the shop is now in the possession of J. J. Stowart, the attgrave for the landlord. He did not take personal possession of the stock, however, but appointed Mr. Leake in his place to carry on the business. the payment of the mortgage had not been

In the present suit the attorneys for the de-fence realize that they must turn from the whole course of previous htigation and strike out in new and untried paths before they can hope to gain a decision in their favor. The law was plainly defined in the decision of Judge Brewer of the circuit bench and sub-sequently affirmed by the supreme court, in the case of the East Omaha land company vs Thomas Jeffries, in which it was decided that all the accretions along the shore of a river belong to the party who owns the all the accretions along the shore of a river belong to the party who owns the adjacent territory, and it was further-more decided that this law applies to the land along the Missouri river, the same as to any other. The endeavor of the attor-neys for the state is to change the decisions of the courts in the present instance, by rea-son of the great and sudden changes which are constantly being made in the course of the river, so that it is necessary to have some other boundary line from which to reckon in order to prevent continual changes in the order to prevent continual changes in the ownership of property along the banks. That is the ground upon which they hope to bring about a change in the trend of the decisions, and that is the ground upon which their

about a change in the trend of the decisions, and that is the ground upon which their hopes for success rest. In connection with the present suit, a com-munication was sent yesterday to Mayor Macrae by the city attorney in his official capacity, in which he states that it is im-possible to predict the result of the present litigation, but all sides are agreed that the matter should be settled once for all. "The rule of the supreme court," he says, "if adhered to in the present case, as it has been laid down in previous decisions, would determine the allegations of the plaintiff cor-rect. Notably is this so in the Jeffries' case. We do not consider, however, that at the facts were fully presented to the court in that in-stance, and that if the facts are fully pre-sented to the court the boundary may be changed as compared with the one claimed in the present case. In that event it may be changed to the state of Iowa. The same rule that would on one theory give us a line on the meander line of 1851 is liable to run the same line on this side of the two bridges and put them on the Nebraska side." bridges and put them on the Nebraska side,'

A Beautiful Millinery Display.

A Beautiful Milinery Display. Despite the bad weather the formal open-ing of the Council Bluffs millinery parlors by Misses Sprink & Ragsdale was a big success, and drew a large attendance during the last three days of last week. Not only in the beautifully trimmed goods displayed but in the general arrangement of everything about the parlors did the young ladies show their consumate skill. It was one of the finest Easter displays made in the city. The rooms are large, well lighted and bandsomely fur-nished. The character of the millinery is in keeping with the place, and many of the finest Easter hats worn today were pur-chased at the new place. The young ladies received many compliments, and will at once take a foremost position among the milliners of the city. The bad weather and the early Easter made it impossible to purchase the usual Easter goods, and the ladies of Council Bluffs and vicinity who have yet to select their spring millinery will find it decidedly to their advantage to visit the new parlors.

Cloth Cutters' Troubles

The investigation of the clothing cutters' lockout that is now in progress at Rochester, N. Y., is developing some racy facts. The investigation was commenced Wednesday before the state board of mediation and arbi tration, both the cutters and the clothing men being represented by attorneys.

ing his remarks the gentleman said : The first witness was Adler of Adler Brothers, who testified to the troubles with the union that led to the boy cotting of his firm. When he heard of the boycott he wrote James Hughes of Chicage, master workman of district assembly 231, Knights of Labor, to which the local cutters' assem-bly is attached. Finally he paid $469 to Walter S. Westerbrook in New York, secre-tary of the district assembly, and to Mr. Hughes $1,000. The $469 were to pay the ex-penses of declaring the boycott off and the $1,000 for the expense of getting the boycott off. Witness testified that he gave Mr. Hughes the check for $1,000 in the firm's office and the check with Mr. Hughes' en-dorsement was produced in evidence. It had been paid by the Merchanis' bank of Roch-ester. A number of threatening letters from firm. When he heard of the boycott he ciency of nourishment. As I go out upon the street, and as I study the cause (it is not idle theory), I know that this condition is due largely to the cornering of the world's goods in the hands of the few." "And do you call those who believe that this pictured social condition is real are pessi-mists." said he. "I should rather call those pessionists who believe that this is a good condition, the best condition possible, and that it must go on eternally so. I have con-fidence that the people will work themselves out of so evil a condition. I do not believe that the God who led the Israeites out of the darkness of Egypt, through the waters of the Red Sea, through carnage and devastation to ester. A number of threatening letters from Hughes to the firm were read in evidence. Witness said he had been advertising ex-

Witness said he had been advertising ex-tensively for more cutters during the past week, but has been unable to secure any. The witness' firm had put $15,000 into the treasury of the Clothiors' exchange. Henry Michaels, president of the Cloth-iers' exchange, testified as follows: "We have often required more cutters, but have been unable to obtain them.
