It was a decided change from her old plays, and a welcome ome. In the new play she found a part which suited her stately grace better than anything which she had before attempted; then, too, it created a new interest in the actress and in her work. Landlord Livermore Opened Letters to His Serrow.

Sam Livermore has learned that the mere fact that he runs a hotel does not confer upon him the right to open his guests' letters. One Sunday, about a month ago, Sam called at the postoffice and asked for all the mail for his house, including any for his boarders. The mail was turned over to him and among the letters was one for Mrs. Julia Felber, a boarder at the Hotel Livermore. Samknew that his boarder had been execting some money by mail and after inpecting the letter he concluded there was ome money inside. It was but the work of as instant to tear the letter open and he was rewarded by finding $6 inside. He tucked the money away in his inside

OMAHA, April 1, 1891.

"Board of Trade Souvenir." H. N. Blood & Co. have issued a very creditable publication setting forth the advantages and resources of Omaha. The work was done under the auspices of the Omaha board of trade. It contains ninety half-tone portraits of leading citizens and twenty cuts of Omaha business buildings and residences. Typographically it is well-nigh perfect. It is printed on the highest quality of book paper from the press of the Rees printing company of this city. The binding is in keeping with the mechanical excellence, being of padded leather, beveled edges. It may be said that the subject matter of this publication cannot be adequately treated in 100 pages. This may be true, but the essential features of Omaha' greatness are put well to the fore, present-ing a very good idea of the commercial im-portance of this city. The work is designed for distribution outside of Omaha among prospective investors. Several styles of binding have been adopted to facilitate its distribution through the mails. All in all, it is a creditable work, and the publishers will reap handsome returns for their labor.

Will He Veto It?

Whether or not Mayor Cushing will veto the Ballou ordinance passed by the city council Thursday night is a mooted question with the councilmen.

The mayor, yesterday, said: "All I know about the ordinance is what I read in the newspapers, and for this reason I cannot say what I shall do. To tell the truth, I have never seen the ordinance and have not talked with the councilmen about its provisions."

The few councilmen who opposed the passage claim that the mayor will attach his veto. They also claim that the friends of veto. They also claim that the friends of the move cannot raise it over his veto.

The ten members who voted in the affirmative on the passage of the ordinance talk in a different strain. They do not think that the mayor will exercise his veto, but if he should conclude to do so, they state that walked mayor will exercise his veto, but if he should conclude to do so, they state that walked the mayor will be should conclude to do so, they state that walked the mayor will be should conclude to do so, they state that walked the mayor will be should conclude the state of the twelve members will vote to have the ordi-nance become a law.

on the Veto. Governor Boyd's veto of the Newberry bill was the leading topic of conversation yesterday on the street, in public offices, and among all classes of men who are interested in the work of the state legislature.

Mayor Cushing said: "I have not read the Newberry bill, but judging from what I have heard and read about it, I should think that Governor Boyd had done about the right thing in refusing to sign the bill. If the bill is unconstitutional, he has, of course, done the only thing his duty requires. It strikes me that the farmers of this state make a great mistake when they attempt this state make a great mistake when they attempt this srbitrary and radical legislation, affecting the great financial interests of the state. The trouble with these maximum rate bills is that they ignore a principle which is recognized in every other line of business, and that is this: A railroad company may see fit to had one line of goods for much less per handred than some other lines of goods, just as a grocer sells sugar at a price which brings no profit while he lines of goods, just as a grocer sells sugar at a price which brings no profit while he makes 39 per cent on some other line of goods, sold to the same customer who bought the sugar. The grocer could not afford to sell all his goods at a price which would allow no profit, neither can a railroad company do business that way. I believe there should be a good deal of give and take in dealing with railroads, just as we do with every other line of business. These are bad times to begin to cut and slash at our great enterprises."

Brad Slaughter said: "I am very glad that it was a democratic governor who had to handle the Newberry bill, but at the same time I think Governor Boyd's head is level. I have think Governor Boyd's head is level. I have not read the bill, but judging from the criticisms I have read of it, I believe it is an iniquitous bill and would have done great injury to the manufacturing and jobbing interests of the state. Look at lowa for an example. There is no such thing as getting a through rate from Des Moines or any of the distributing points in lowa that will enable the jobbers and manufacturers to compete with those of Nebraska, Minnesota or Chicago. The Iowa local rate and the interstate commerce regulations work so disadvantageously that the long haul from any point in Iowa has become ruinous to the jobbers and manufacturers. If the local rates were placed under the same restrictions in were placed under the same restrictions in Nebraska that they are in lowa, we would see the same results here. The jobbers and manufacturers would be driven to Chicago, where they can get a cheap long haul rate."

WELCOME TO THE EXECUTIVE Plans Discussed for the Entertainment of President Harrison, Information from Washington states that President Harrison and party will, in all probability, pass through Omaha about May 10 on the way east from the Pacific coast.

The people of Omaha will, of course, be anxious to give President Harrison a reception that will in somedegree express the good will and loyalty of this great and prosperous western city. How to entertain the president most agreeably and appropriately is the question that will demand very careful consideration and perfect harmony on the part of the leading cities of Organ. itizens of Omana.

Mayor Cushing said yesterday, when speak-ing of the anticipated visit of the chief executive:

"If President Harrison visits Omaha I feel "If President Harrison visits Omaha I feel safe in saying that our people will accord him a reception befitting the occasion. Omaha will not be found wanting when the chief executive of the nation makes us a visit. If the president can give us a day or part of a day I should think a short drive about the city, with a banquet at one of the clubs or hotels, might be a pleasant way to show our respect. It is not pleasant way to show our respect. It is too soon, however, to say anything about the character of the reception, because we don't know how much time he will spendin Omana whether he will be here at all. When those questions are decided we can arrange the rest to suit."

Major Clarkson, the postmaster, said:
"We should give President Harrison a reception commensurate with the fact that he is president of the United States. I have nothing definite to suggest as yet, for we know nothing definite about his call here. When his tour across the country has been more definitely arranged then we shall know what to do when he reaches Omaha. I am in favor of doing the handsome thing Omaha by a visit."

Collector Peters of the revenue office said:
"I will do my part to assist the citizens of Omsha in giving to the president a reception in keeping with the occasion."

General Brooke said: "Do not ask me to anticipate what the citizens of Omaha will undoubtedly do in excellent style. I will say nothing about what the troops may do, but you ought to know that if the president of the United States visits Omaha he will be quite sure to see about all the soldiers in the

The chop house rioters' trial commences in police court at 3:30 o'clock vesterday afternoon. Agreat crowd was in attendance. Many colored people were there to see the outcome of the affair. Officer Jesse Newman was the first witness for the prosecution. He told the story of the fight, which was substantially the same as printed in THE BEE at the time. Officer Newman said: "Hopewell came to me at the commencement of the row and told me to get out, at the same time pushing me. Then Hopewell hit me and I arrested him. The fight then became general."

Officers Rouser and Godola followed, then Pride and Young told their story. At the closing hour of court the prosecution had not finished, and the case will be continued at

Moore's Tree of Life

Dr. J. B. Moore, Dear Sir:-I have been troubled with kidney complaint for over twenty years, for about eight years with diabetes, and when at my study have been compelled to relieve myself as often as three or four times an hour. I have been troubled with seven attacks of sick headache once a week for ten years, and it has been a combination, some times amfitting me for my pastoral dulles, and my presiding elder. George Miller, of Carlisle, Ia, advised me to try a bottle of Moore's Tree of Life, as he had been greatly benefited by it. I did so, and the very fir t bottle gave me great relief. I have taken in all 3 bottles, the first about five months ago, and I have been troubled but very little since I commenced it use. Yours truly, Rev David Fyr. TESTIMONIAL:
