

FRISCO'S BRUTAL HOODLUMS.

Revolving Story of an Atrocious Assault on an Aged Woman.

JAMES ANDERSON'S FEARFUL MANIA.

He Mutilates Himself with an Axe—Colorado Courtship—Oyster Charlie's Last Spree—Other Western News.

While returning from a visit to her two children in the South San Francisco orphan asylum one night Mrs. Murphy, a weak old woman, was waylaid and brutally outraged by eight hoodlums, says the Chronicle. The crime was committed by members of the same gang of ruffians of which "Fat" Jack King and C. S. Joslyn were shining lights before they were sent to the Quentin prison for fifty and forty years respectively, their victim dying from the effects of the maltreatment she received. The imprisonment of King and Joslyn struck terror to the hearts of the gang, but the paragon of the leaders by Governor McCreary as he was inspired them with fresh contempt for the law.

The assault on Mrs. Murphy was peculiarly atrocious. As the lady, who is nearly fifty years old, was passing a pile of lumber, she was seized by two men. One of the assailants threw his arms around her neck and forcing her head backward, smothered her cries by placing his hand over her mouth. His companion gathered the blind up in his arms and they carried her to a den by lumber yard. Before she lost her strength they beat her unmercifully. Blows were showered on her face and body, the men using their clenched fists. Several times she essayed to scream, but the sounds were drowned in her throat by the choking to which she was subjected. At last she had exhausted her last vestige of strength in the struggle nature asserted itself and Mrs. Murphy lost consciousness. Her senses returned and she saw that her assailants had been reinforced by six or seven men. The poor old woman appealed to them in the name of everything good to let her go, but she was only derided. Then she struggled again, and one of the wretches stabbed her in the side with a knife. Her day light faded and she lay motionless. Mrs. Murphy, almost dead from exhaustion and loss of blood, crawled to a near-by house, the occupants of which rendered assistance to her. It was not until the next morning as she lay in bed. The bandages on her head and the bruises and scratches on her face and hands bear testimony to the brutality of the assault.

During the night the ruffians had a quarrel among themselves and one hoodlum cut another on the hand. Police men took William of St. Paul to prison on suspicion of being one of the assailants. He exhibited a lacerated forehead. Mrs. Murphy picked him out from a batch of three prisoners who were taken from her and identified him as one of her assailants. He was then formally arrested. Mark says he was asleep at home at the time the crime was committed. The spot where Mrs. Murphy had her terrible experience is situated only half a block from the scene of the King-Joslyn crime.

Wouldn't lose his Stake. McDonald, ex-policeman of Butte, Mont., and doorkeeper at the Theatre Comique, went to visit a sick friend at Granite. He says that he was at the notorious house of "Dutch Matt" and played several games of "cut-throat" and finally played a game for $3, which he won, when a woman grabbed the money and ran out doors. He chased her into the saloon and told her he would arrest her for gambling without a license. Frank McKee, a saloonkeeper, and McDonald had a quarrel, and McDonald would not be arrested, and taking hold of her arm attempted to pull her out. McDonald had the chair and held on to her. The two men had some words, McKee remembering that McDonald or no other—McDonald could see a man in the face. McDonald then stepped back in the face. McKee pulled a large sized 44-caliber revolver and McDonald grasped with him but seemed unable to wrest the gun from him. Two shots were fired in the scuffle. The two first shots did no damage but the third took effect in McDonald's groin, shattering the bone and he fell through the door. McDonald walked down to his own saloon where he gave himself into the hands of the police.

Crazed by His Son's Disgrace. James Anderson, a middle aged man living with his wife and son near San Leandro, Cal., while in a fit of temporary insanity deliberately cut off his left leg below the knee and his left hand with a broom. His case is a peculiar one. About three weeks ago his son became engaged in a quarrel with another young man in which the latter received a heavy blow on the head. Young Anderson was arrested for the assault and fined $10 and costs. This scandal of Anderson's family seems to have unsettled his mind, and during the past two weeks he had had frequent spells of insanity. About three weeks ago Anderson took his son to Napa, in the hope that there he might be restored to his right mind, but she would listen to no such arrangement. Anderson states that his injuries are not necessarily fatal, but as he seems to be wild he will be bandaged up. His wounds fears are entertained that he may yet do himself more bodily harm. He is being constantly watched by his friends.

Trying to End Courtship. While young Joe Mitchell was returning home from Erie, Col., one night, when about half a mile northwest of town he met two men who said "hello" and one pointed a pistol at him. Joe knocked it up with his arm, it was discharged, the ball going through the crown of his hat. Joe reached for his gun but he slipped and fell. The would-be murderers probably thinking they had killed their man ran away. Joe shot at them five times, unfortunately missing them. About three weeks ago he offered $1,000 for the arrest of the men who attempted to murder his son. Several young lads have started with certain young ladies home from church or party at night, they have been suspiciously followed by two unknown men, the boys even chasing their girlfriends home. The girls were followed without success as to their identity. No cause can be given as to the trouble other than the would-be murderers objected to the boys leaving company with certain young ladies, all of whom are highly respectable and prominent in society circles.

The Grippe Killing Stock. Horses and cows are suffering from the grippe in Salt Lake City. A number of valuable horses and cows have died there during the past few weeks, and the cause of death in nearly every instance has been given as the grippe. The disease has been three days of last week seven horses and cows died, among them being several valuable animals. Samuel Mcintosh reports the loss of his well-known running mare, valued at $1,000, and Crimmon & Weyer lost a valuable gray horse. Quite a number of draft horses are suffering.

Fight with a Mountain Lion. A cowboy near Lay, Colo., had a narrow escape from death. He was out at a quarter of a mile from camp gathering firewood when he was suddenly pounced upon by a mountain lion. He had no weapon except his bowie-knife, which he used to good effect. His cries attracted the attention of his partner, who seized a Winchester and sallied forth to the rescue. Between the knife and the gun the lion was killed, but not before he had badly bitten and clawed the attacked man.

Those Cowboy Duoets. "Plaster" and the famous Wyoming cowboy duoets, who were at Metcote, Fremont county, a few days ago headed for Idaho. On the surface Bill looked all right, but there is something wrong in his interior department. After a little exertion his lungs sprung a leak and he came near bleeding to death. "Dab" is in a walking condition, presumably to save funeral expenses.

for the doctor says he is liable to drop dead any minute. One of his main springs in the "Big Dip" called on "Dab" before leaving and offered to have it cut, but "Dab" said he was satisfied.

Drank Himself to Death. On account of his proficiency in mixing an oyster cocktail, a barkeeper of Port Townsend, Wash., named Larsen, gained the sobriquet of "Oyster Charlie." He got drunk the other day, and in the evening went into a gambling hall and saloon known as the Silver Dale, adjoining his own place. Charlie challenged Joe Waddington, who kept the Silver Dale to drink whiskey, betting $20 that the latter could beat him. Waddington refused the bet, but it was agreed that both men should drink until one or the other got too drunk to drink. The first to attain this state was Larsen. He drank a huge quantity of liquor was felled by both men. The inquest showed that two and one-half bottles of whiskey and a gallon, was drunk by the two men, fourteen glasses being drunk by Waddington and thirteen by the deceased. After Charlie had taken his thirteenth drink he fell on the floor in a stupor. He was picked up and laid in the hall before his door, as the key could not be found to open the door. About two hours later Waddington and others visited the man and found that he was dead.

Big Irrigation Scheme. Three stupendous ditch schemes, to irrigate no less than half a million acres in Converse, Natrona and Sheridan counties, Wyoming, are being perfected. Work will soon commence on the Converse county canal, which will take over twenty miles above Douglas. In Natrona they will tap the hot springs and the Snake river, and capable of draining the river. The Sheridan county project is still in its infancy. Capital is being raised for all these enterprises. The farmers will be brought in from Utah.

Killed for Lack of Knowledge. A young Austrian was killed by a fall of coal in No. 3 mine at Rock Springs, Wyo., a few days ago. During the inquest it developed that inability to understand English cost the lad his life. He and a countryman were placing a shot in a dangerous room. Blows were showered on his head and he was killed. He was not understood and the men went on fixing the light in their own way. The result was that the fatal slide soon occurred.

Like the Basset Claim. When Judge D. C. Tracey of Pine Bluff, Lamar county, Wyo., was making a tour in 1870 the Sioux came along at noon one day and ran off all his stock, as well as making a feat to get the scalp of the judge and his men. Four years later Mr. Tracey lodged a claim with the department for $2,000. The case has just been disposed of at Washington and the estate, the judge being long since dead, gets $250.

NEWS OF THE NORTHWEST. Nebraska. The storm at Shelton last week resulted in the death of a number of cattle. John Wenz, an old man residing north of Wyo., dropped all of his heart disease while at work the other day.

The Dodge county alliance is making preparations to celebrate the Fourth of July by holding a picnic at Centerville. The first annual meeting of the Platte County Driving Park and Fair association will be held September 21, 22 and 23.

Six of Wayne's nice young men were killed in the other night at the Theatre Comique, before morning and the affair was hushed up. Fred Dewolf, a fourteen-year-old Wheeler county boy, was thrown from a pony and instantly killed while trying to "round up" a cow.

Elizabeth Casper of York has been allowed $50 in Judge Montgomery's court for caring for her father and mother for a period of twelve years. She sued for $2,254.

The machinery for the Norfolk sugar factory is now being unloaded at New Orleans and will soon be sent north on half a dozen flatcars. The machinery will give the machinery a rousing reception.

Johann Wallace of Cozad picked up his father's gun, which had been laid on a table, and took it to the store. He had a small and one partition, a rocking chair and into the Buckley house cook stove. It was a close call for Mrs. Buckley, who was standing by the stove. She had the rocking chair and the stove bear evidence of having been badly used.

Iowa. The usual fine at Marcus for drunkenness is $25. A farmers' alliance has been organized at Osceola.

A company has been organized at Clinton to manufacture bed mattresses. Students of the agricultural college at Ames will organize a brass band.

John D. Wilson, an agricultural implement dealer at Belle Plaine, has failed. An Eldora man has a machine that will make binding twine out of common prairie reed or straw.

R. D. Dutton, the Iowa Falls giant, weighed 435 pounds and standing seven feet and six inches in his stockings, was married recently.

A witness in the district court at Shelton last week was describing a certain man owned by him, and an attorney asked him the age of the animal. He refused to answer, thinking it a disgrace to profess to be unable to tell the age of a horse. His testimony he admitted to having driven the mule about twenty years, but left the witness stand with the score of the mule's age still within his keeping.

An old veteran at Shenandoah, blind for years, at last succeeded in getting his pension claim through and last week received his money and signed them for $1,000 a pension and $2 per month. That night he was taken with a chill and the next night he was dead.

One of the largest eagles ever seen in Iowa or the west was killed at Altoona a week ago by a farmer who took it to Des Moines and sold it to a collector in a large case. The golden species and is a grand specimen of America's noble bird. Such a perfect hawk and talons cannot be found on every bird and wings when spread measure three feet and two inches from tip to tip. The bird has been sent by farmers around Altoona for a number of years. The collector has a few attempts to kill him as he always flew very high. His age is supposed to be over one hundred years.

THE COMMERCIAL DRUMMER.

A Tourist's Brilliant Piece of Fiction From California.

ONE PREACHER WHO DID NOT "FLY."

Council Bluffs Traveling Men Organize a Secret Order to Be Known as "The Commercial Pilgrims of America."

The commercial travelers have a hard time of it and were it not for the fact that independence is a strong characteristic with them life would hardly be worth living. Gertrude Atherton writes a poem, at least she called it a poem, in which the drummers were pictured in frightful colors and a vicious protest went up all over the land. Some railway paper published an opinion to the effect that drummers were not entitled to any more privileges than other travelers and the columns of the papers grew heavy with arguments in refutation of that claim. Then in a lighter vein The Bee printed a letter from Petaluma, Cal., that has produced this reply:

Petaluma, Cal., March 30, 1891.—To the Editor of The Bee: Some papers send me a clipping from your issue of March 23, containing a not very brilliant fiction of a general exodus of all the ministers of our city on receipt of a perfumed note in a lady's hand, with the startling announcement: "All is discovered!" I happen to be pastor of the First Methodist church in Petaluma, and I am a member of eight Protestant churches in the town, and am interested in the marvelous inventing capacity of your correspondent. What a sight it must have been to see the whole flock of their pastors disappearing over the tops of the Sonoma mountains! It is too bad that the concoctor of that delicious fiction did not tell us where we all hid in dens and caves, disguised with false whiskers and jangled mustaches, and pointed out to do better than that and not half try. He must have been sick or boozey. He will never win the snake skin belt of the light men of his market. There are dozens of the children of the same father who can beat him "all hollow."

The clip reminds me of a chapter of experience, I was pastor in Sacramento after the war and the boys in town invited me to address them. A sort of self-nominated nondescript candidate for something came along, and misjudging that it might prove a taking card to attack a clergyman, fired away with his little popgun. General Church, my nearest neighbor, was as staunch a democrat and the free lance candidate aforesaid was a democrat. At the close of the following he descended upon him like a wrathful avenger.

"You fool," said Church, "why don't you learn to lie? You don't know how to lie. You must prime it down so that somebody will believe it. There wasn't a man in the house who did not know you were lying." Your correspondent, the fabricator of that uncleanly paragraph, ought to take lessons if he intends to continue in the business. Otherwise hell makes his master, the devil, no end of trouble by his excesses.

I read the excerpt to the ministers present at our weekly meeting, and they all even their pity for the deceased mind of the "parient" of such a bustling could not wholly restrain a sense of amusement at the care the fellow took of his conceits. He was shooting at such language. M. C. Busios.

Taking an Order in His Sleep. The following interesting story is told by an old traveling salesman who formerly represented one of the largest jewelry houses in London, England. His experience is one which, to say the least, is unusual, and will be fully appreciated by the representatives of American houses who have never enjoyed the good fortune of a similar occurrence.

"In the spring of 1871 I carried a line of goods which was unusually popular with the trade," said the drummer, "and when I reached Edinburgh, Scotland, I found it impossible to visit my customers as promptly as I desired. By the middle of the afternoon several jewelers had called on me and urged me to come to their places during the day. By 6 o'clock I was thoroughly weary, and was congratulating myself that I would be able to retire early and secure a good night's rest, when a customer who had overlooked me gently touched me on the shoulder and reminded me that I had neglected to visit him. He stated that he wished to make a heavy purchase, and I made an appointment with him at my hotel at 6:30.

"I immediately repaired to my room, and settling myself in a large easy chair fell asleep. I was awakened by a light pressure on my arm. To my surprise the room was brilliantly lighted, and my customer was sitting by my side. He desired to see the goods and its contents were spread on the table near me. I confess I was a little startled, and was sleepily yawning when he had been robbed during my nap, when my fears were allayed by my companion, who said: 'I came at the appointed hour and found you asleep. Not desiring to disturb you I have examined your samples and written out my order in your book.' Dazed by the statement, I took my key from my pocket, and discovered that it was half past twelve. I had been asleep nearly five hours. It was the easiest sale I ever made."

Hoarding Old Rackets. How dear to his heart are the scenes of his conquests. When fond recollections presents them to view. The grip sack, the orders, the full measure merchandise. And hundreds of things that his house never knew. The baby shows, balls, church raffles and bazaars. Theatrical masques, and country girls staid. The dearest of all of the thoughts of the drummer. Any one of the rackets for which his house paid.

The roaring old rackets. The humming old rackets. The costly old rackets. For which his house paid.

Drummers' Secret Order. The Council Bluffs traveling men have formed a secret order to be known as Commercial Pilgrims of America. The supreme council has been instituted, and on Saturday evening, April 11, the degrees will be conferred on about sixty candidates, and the grand council of Iowa and subordinate council of Council Bluffs No. 1, will be instituted. The degrees are sublime and are exponents of honor and morality. All traveling men and ex-traveling men who have been over the United States, and many have expressed the desire to institute subordinate council. The mother, or supreme council will be permanently located at Council Bluffs. The benefit of the order will be mutual, the object being to bring into closer acquaintance among the traveling men. One feature of especial benefit is to look after its sick members who need attention. It will also be the aim of the members to work for the good of the town or city in which they reside. It is considered likely that the order will reach great magnitude and spread all over the United States. It is understood that traveling men in various neighboring cities have expressed a desire for the supreme council to grant them charters and institute councils. Some of the Omaha traveling men are among members of the Council Bluffs organization and will be initiated at the next meeting.

Business Before Pleasure. Two passengers on the train became involved in a very heated controversy, which finally waxed so hot that one of them called the other a liar. "What's that a liar?" and he was on his feet. "Yes, a liar!" was the emphatic response, "or my name isn't John Smith." "What, the ironmonger?" "The same?" "Smith, I'm delighted to know you, I represent Messrs. Sharples & Co., Sheffield, and was going to call on you today. I can show you a lot of samples that can't be equalled."

AFTER THE THEFT.

Arrangements Will Be Made to Close the Barn Closely. "I am going to call the attention of the council to one thing," said City Clerk Groves speaking of the loss of the title page to the Ballou ordinance. "These ordinances ought to have the title and all the endorsements, including the name of the man who introduced them, written on the ordinance proper; not upon a cover that can be detached or torn off at any time, thus knocking the ordinance out and making a deal of trouble. I am going to call the city council's attention to every ordinance, in the future, that has the title and endorsement written on a cover as that Ballou ordinance was written."

"I will bring that very matter up at the next council meeting," said Mr. Beaulieu, "and see if we can't make some provision that will prevent the introduction of ordinances in this loose and careless manner. The title and endorsements by the man who introduces an ordinance and the endorsements by the clerk showing when read, committed fraud, etc., should be a part of the ordinance itself, written in the ordinance and not upon a cover or wrapper."

MAURICE HENGEN'S FUNERAL—Other Death Announcements. The funeral of Maurice Hengen took place from his late residence, on South Seventh street, yesterday afternoon under the auspices of St. John's lodge, Ancient Free and Accepted Masons. The brethren of the lodge assembled at Freemasons' hall at 1:30 p. m. and proceeded in a body to the house where the service was held. The remains were then escorted to Forest Lawn cemetery, where the Masonic burial service was performed, each of the brethren casting a spray of evergreen upon the casket as it rested in the grave.

The funeral of Olga Mengedolt will take place from family residence, 1611 Kyner street, at 1 p. m. today. Josie, the bright, little seven-year-old daughter of Mrs. F. A. Fisher, died yesterday of acute consumption, after a very brief illness.

E. A. Fidler died at the St. Joseph hospital at 4 p. m. yesterday of consumption. He resided in San Francisco and has been telegraphed for. Heady & Healy have charge of the remains.

Improving Military Posts. Changes for the Better to Be Made at Three Western Forts. There will be considerable building and repairing going on at the different military posts in the department of the Platte this year and summer. One set of new officers' quarters will be built at Fort Nicholas. Two sets of officers' quarters and two cavalry stables will be built at Fort Robinson, besides other minor improvements.

At Fort Douglas, four miles from Salt Lake City, improvements will be added to ten sets of officers' quarters and some slight alterations made to some of the other buildings. The new Fort Douglas is the way now. Bids for the work at the other two posts have been forwarded to Washington, and as soon as the award is made work will commence. At Fort Union, a proposition to spend about $65,000 in new buildings and improvements this spring at the three forts mentioned.
