Photographic Vouchers.
Prof. J. Which Big Advertisers Require Usually.

Some of the big mercantile firms that are buying this week the vouchers for their patronage," said a big bill poster, "go to great expense to attract attention. The cost of advertising with the payment of the newspapers, the painter, the bill posters and the other bill posters who undertake to display their advertisements; but there are a number of necessary expenses incidental to these which are by no means small items in the total expenditure, says the New York Sun. Many smart men have been known to employ a man whose sole duty it is to see that the contracts for displaying before the public their advertisements are carried out as agreed. This man has to do a great deal of traveling. The forms of the advertisements, which is extensively indulged in by these firms, is the painting of signs on the fences and rocks along the lines of the railroads which enter this town. In making a contract with a bill poster, who usually does this work, the advertiser specifies the style and size of the signs it wants and the place in which it wants them displayed. The bill poster then sends out his men, presumably to fulfill the terms of the contract; but these men travel over hundreds of miles of territory, and the question arises, how can the firm be certain that its provisions have been properly carried out? It is impossible for the members of the firm to spend time in going over all these miles personally, and as a result, they have to employ a man who can do it for them. This man can do little else.

"If the firm would rest content with his assurances that he has done his duty, he would be one of the first principles of a big mercantile firm seems to be that, so far as possible, the assertions of an employee should be supported by material proof. It would, of course, be possible for the man who undertakes this work to defraud the firm by conspiring with the bill poster, and to prevent this possible collusion, a novel form of proof that the work has been properly done has been devised. The firm's agent follows the footsteps of bill poster's workmen. He is provided with a camera and he photographs every one of the firm's signs. As each photograph takes in not only the sign but the surrounding scenery, the number of signs contracted for have been duly made, and also that they are in the places designated by it. These photographs are kept until the terms of the contract have expired, and frequently one firm will have a collection of thousands of photographs of a particular sign, in the background of which will be different kinds of scenery."

What They Expect of Newspapers.
"If there's any important news," said the newspaper man's wife, "wake me up when you come home and tell me about it."

And the next morning as he was walking home he hastily reviewed the news of the night to put himself in shape, says the Chicago Tribune.

"Wake up," he said, when he got through with the paper, "I have got some news for you."

"About what?" she asked, as she yawned and stretched her head.

"Why, you know, in that New Orleans affair."

"Oh, that old thing," she interrupted.

"Well, out of the of Harrison meetings tonight."

"Oh, yes, of course. Politics—always politics."

"Lyman Gage has refused."

"Who can give me some news."

"Chauncey Depew has been indicted by."

"That railroad accident, of course."

"Well, then, the princess."

"A European scandal. There's one every day."

The newspaper man sighed, thought a moment, and then said:

"I don't think of anything more except a little local paragraph about Mrs. Brown having left her husband."

"Mrs. Brown? Not You don't mean it?" she sat up in bed. "Why, she only lives a few blocks from here. I see her go by nearly every day. What do you suppose is the matter? Will either of them apply for divorce?"

"I don't know," he said. "There isn't much doubt about it."

She looked at him scornfully for a moment and then said:

"And you pretend to get out a newspaper. Bah!"

See those beautiful lots in Halcyon Heights. Crary & Crary.

Why a Dog's Nose is Cold.
Everybody is aware that a dog's nose is always cold, but very few people know why, declares the St. Louis Globe-Democrat. The cartilage composing the outer surface of a dog's nose is almost destitute of blood vessels, but plentifully supplied with glands which exude a watery secretion that, by its evaporation, keeps the nose below the normal temperature. The dog's sense of smell is located in the nerves within the nostrils, and it is this sense which is kept in better condition by the low temperature of the cartilaginous tip of the nose. The state of a dog's health is at once indicated by his nose, for no dog with a hot, dry nose can be healthy, and one of the first signs of rabies is dryness and heat of the nose, for these symptoms indicate fever, and fever is the beginning of hydrophobia.
