HOW THE BARONET CHEATED THE PRINCE.

London, June 3.—There was still the same crowd of fashionable people present this morning when court opened to continue the trial of the baccarat case. The prince of Wales sat in his usual place. Sir Charles Russell, leading counsel for the defendant, commenced his address on behalf of his client.

Sir Charles said: "The baccarat case which had been drawn up in regard to the baccarat scandal said that the plaintiff should be watched. Beyond the marked table, however, there was no concert of action of any kind, but all who knew the story of the previous day's play and Sir William Gordon-Cumming repeated the actions complained of."

Renewed interest was shown upon the part of the always most attentive audience gathered in the court of queen's bench when Mr. Arthur Wilson, son of the millionaire owner of "Tranbycroft and one of the leading stockholders in the Gordon-Cumming. When the steamers plying between Hull, London, New York and many other ports, entered the witness box as the first witness for the defense. Mr. Wilson testified to the fact that on the first night of the baccarat playing at Tranbycroft—September 8—his place a red counter representing 45 on a piece of paper in front of the counter from his right hand and was paid on both of the counters he had thus placed on the table. The evidence was given by Mr. Wilson without any hesitation and in a manner which seemed to impress the jury and which decidedly impressed the audience and caused a great sensation in the court room.

Mr. Leavitt said that he saw the same thing repeated by Sir William the same evening and he then told Mr. Leavitt that the baronet was cheating at cards.
