Mrs. S. E. Fagan of Chicago, writes that it is imperative that she should know the present whereabouts and habits of Mrs. Mary Defer, who formerly resided at 3927 North Twenty-first street.

J. T. Hahnson of Des Moines, thinks that his eighteen-year-old son Carl is in this city and somewhere a druggist, as he left home a week ago about 2 o'clock in the morning, without saying anything to his folks. The anxious father wants the chief of police to look into the matter.

Max Hamberger is after J. G. Willis and Eugene Leonard, two of his agents, who are charged with obtaining money by false pretenses. The defendants were canvassing for portraits and frames and sold tickets for the same. They were to sell the tickets for 50 cents and this was to constitute their commission. The customer then went to the store and secured his frame, paying the regular price, less the amount already paid. Hamberger alleges that in order to sell the tickets, his agents misrepresented the cost of the goods, telling their victims that they could get a frame for $2 which he could not possibly sell them for less than $5. Of course the customers kicked and now Max is doing a little kicking himself.

Escaped With Their Lives.

Pound Men Have a Tussle with Infuriated Cow Owners. Two of Poundmaster Paluski's men undertook too large a contract in the northern part of the city Sunday and have to thank the speed of their road horses for the fact that they escaped summary treatment at the hands of an infuriated lot of milk dealers and their friends.

Sunday afternoon two men had charge of Krosses Bros' cows on leased ground in the northern part of the city. Paluski's men, it is alleged, tried to drive the cows when the men in charge resisted the attempt. The pound men were determined and finally drew revolvers and fired. The cows were taken to the stock by force. The herd was gone, however, and staid by the cows until they had them safely in the pasture of Louis Littell.

Here a number of milk dealers had gathered and surrounded the herders, threatening to lynch them. Mr. Littell advised the cow owners to go slow, and finally induced them to give the pound men a chance to retire, on opportunity of which they took prompt advantage. Milk dealers claim that they are greatly annoyed by the pound keeper's minions, and assert that they will not tamely submit longer to the abuses which have grown out of the city pound ordinance.

Pulaski's Complaint.

Count Pulaski, her apparent to all fees pertaining to the city pound, has filed a complaint against Peter Goss, charging him with disturbing the peace by using loud and profane language and threatening to fight. Goss alleged that some of Pulaski's minions unhooked his cows for the purpose of driving them to the pound, and was so incensed thereat that he expressed himself in language more forcible than polite. His opinion of Pulaski, as expressed in words, was anything but complimentary and the poundmaster is now trying to play, even.

ALLEGED PENSION SWINDLE.

Mrs. Lea and Husband Said to Be Working One.

Mrs. Harriet A. Lea of Phebe, Perkins county, Neb., was arraigned in the United States court yesterday on two indictments, charging her with forgery in the matter of an application for a pension and one indictment charging her with perjury in the same connection. To both of the indictments she pleaded "not guilty," and her trial was commenced.

There is no story connected with this matter which will be brought out at the trial. Joseph L. Getold was a member during the war of company K, Twentieth Illinois infantry, and took part in the fight at Fort Donelson. He was subsequently killed in battle, and a few years after the war his widow married William B. Lea, now a justice of the peace in Perkins county.

In January, 1888, Mrs. Lea and her second husband conceived the idea of obtaining some pension money from the government, and application was made for a pension in the name of Joseph L. Getold, who was represented as still living and the victim of chronic rheumatism. Two affidavits were prepared, testifying to the fact that Getold had contracted a severe cold by lying all night in the snow and rain before Donelson, which had resulted in rheumatism. These affidavits were signed by W. B. Lea, who was represented as George Cunningham, and represented that the signers had been members of the same company with Getold.

Willis B. Lea, in his capacity as justice of the peace, certified to the signatures and stated that he had no personal interest in the matter. A search in the records of the pension office revealed the fact that Joseph Getold was supposed to be dead and an inquest was detailed to look into the matter. He located George Cunningham at Hennepin county, Illinois, of which county he was sheriff, and Wesley Bentley was also a citizen of that portion of Uncle Sam's domain. Neither knew Mrs. Lea or had ever signed any pension papers for Getold or his widow.

Therewith Mrs. Lea and William were arrested and had a preliminary hearing before a United States commissioner near their home, but here, also, Mrs. Lea stuck to the original story about the affidavits, alleging that Bentley and Cunningham had been at her house in January, 1888, and had signed the affidavits in question in the presence of her husband and herself.

The matter was brought before the grand jury at the September term of court last year and Mrs. Lea and her husband were indicted. Lea was arraigned in September last on the charge of assisting in the fraud and was released on his own recognizance. He will have his trial as soon as Mrs. Lea has been tried.

Mrs. Lea decided to plead guilty to the charge of perjury if she could be released upon the two counts in question. This she did and was released upon her own recognizance. The jury which heard the evidence in the case of Drayton Kronk, charged with circulating counterfeit money, returned a verdict of not guilty and the defendant was discharged.

Louis Kobza, Joe Karpleck, E. H. Karotzschur, Hiram Raustina, Charles Kriz, Jerry Hemphill and Frank Blatney were arraigned on the charge of selling liquor without a license and pleaded guilty. They were fined $20 and costs each. Viola Gaines, a colored female, was brought in from Falls City yesterday charged with selling liquor without a license. She is an accomplice of Jerry Hemphill.

The case of Dora Knowles against John E. Knowles is on trial before Judge Doane. Mrs. Knowles is suing for a divorce. She alleges cruelty and desertion. On February 25, 1889, the defendant threatened to take her life. The husband does not propose to submit without making a fight. He has no other charges than in which, among other things, he charges that his wife has been guilty of adultery.
