Judge McGee Decides Against the Question of Iowa Bartender's Wages.

DRINK SERVERS CANNOT COLLECT PAY.

It is Illegal to Sell Liquor Either as Principal or Agent, and the Latter Has No Right.

An interesting case was on trial yesterday in superior court. It was that of Mobert against Beck. It was commenced several months ago, the purpose of the plaintiff being to recover from the defendant about $165 which was claimed as wages carne I while Mobert was tending bar for Beck at his saloons on North Main street and at Minawa. All the evidence was taken on both sides, after which, before the case had been submitted, Judge Medice notified the attorneys for the plaintiff that if the case was submitted he should take it from the jury and decide in favor of the defeadant excepting as to $3, which it was claimed had been loaned to Beek by Mombert The plaintiff's attorneys accordingly decided to dismiss the case without prejudice. The point upon which Judge McGee based his ruling was that the selling of liquors is a crime according to the state laws, and that therefore the law cannot undertake to enforce any such contract as the one under consideration. The atterneys for the plaintiff promise to commence the suit again in the district court, and claim to have great hopes of succeeding.

Jag, But No stoney.

Al Ebbert, the absconding city marshal of Manawa, could not stay away from home. Yesterday morning a man named Blue, who belongs to the city council of Manawa and is a very important personage in the municipal affairs, came to the Bluffs to find Ebbert. He arrived in the city about 1 o'clock in the morning and hunted up Officer Beswick, who went to help him find the missing man.

Pierce street was the first spot to be reconnortered. The two detectives went to the house of Annie Moore, and there, snugly ensconced in a corner, sat Ebbert, fast askeep under the influence of a jag. He had bought a new suit of clothes, a new hat, shirt, necktie and shoes, and had shaved off a handsome goatee which had formerly adorned his features. As soon as the visitors had fully taken in the changes that had been wrought, the patroi wagon was called and Ebbert was carried to the police station, where he spent the rest of the night. Yesterday morning he accompanied Blue to Yesterday morning in accompanied fille to Manawa, where he now occupies the same jail which he lorded it over for forty-eight hours before he had fallen from grace. Later he was brought to the county jall for safe keeping. He will have a hearing today.

A further investigation has revealed the fact that in addition to the $50 which he had collected and receipted for, he had borrowed about $20 from his friends. When he was arrested he had $1.10 in his pocket.

Saturdays, 10 o'clock.

The trial of E. C. Castle on the charge of forgery was commenced in the district court yesterday afternoon. Castle, who lives near Macedonia, was heir to some property which had been left him by his father. Albert Fenn, a brother in-law of his, was also neir, and the property was not divided, all the parties using it in a commendable state of unity. Several notes were executed by Fenn in favor of Castle, and Castle accommodated Fenn in the same way. Some disagreement arose between the two men, and one day Fenn repudiated a note for $27 that Castle had in his possession with Fenn's signature attached. He had Castle arrested for forgery and the trial is now in progress. Fenn, the prosecuting witness, was on the stand mos of the day and was put through a rigid crossexamination.
