J, CLARKE RUSSEL'S PLAN.

Beveral Prominent Business Men Thought Well of It for Awhile.

THEIR SUSPICIONS SUDDENLY AROUSED.

How an Alleged Agent of Harper Brothers Gained the Confidence and the Cash of Omaha Merchants

Several highly excited business men and bankers galloped madly about the city at noon yesterday looking for a comparatively unknown individual who gave the name of "J. Clarke Russell," but who is suspected of coumerous unknown but equally alluring pliases.

Mr. Russell introduced himself and his silk tile to nearly all the business men of the city as a representative of Harper Brothers of New York and said he was preparing a descriptive write up of Omaha as a supple ment for Harper's Weekly. He wanted cuts of business houses and 500-word ads, and also agreed to display the handsome faces of Omaha's business heavyweights to Harper's readers for a due consideration.

He told a very plausible story, and showed sample copies of his journal with several de-scriptive articles, among which was a writeup of Seattle. He was a smooth, oily talker, and bad no difficulty whatever in convincing people that he was a reputable citizen of the eastern metropolis. None of the banks or wholesate houses were overlooked, and Mr. Russell had a very pretty list of the firms that he alleged were anxious to contribute to that he alleged were anxions to contribute to the receipts of the Harper business office. In fact, the gentleman understood his busi-ness, and none of those with whom he came in contact entertained the slightest doubt but that he was all right. At 10 o'clock yesterday morning Mr. Rus Boll escarted his oleaginous manners into the store of Miltan Rogers & Sons and offered Tom stogers the chance of a lifetime. Mr. Rogers examined the list presented for his inspection and concluded that he would take about $80 worth.

Mr. Russell said that he only wanted twenty-five advertisers and had twenty-one of them already secured, after which he intimated that they had paid in advance. "Weil, I don't do business that way very often," said Mr. Rogers, "but seeing its you Till just give you a check in the name of Harper Brothers."

Russell insinuated that a check in favor of 7. Clarke Rogers would look just as well, but Rogers said: "My friend, of course you're all right, but I guess I'll stick to my original Intention And he ald.

After Russell had gone Mr. Rogers began to ponder within himself, and a feeling of misgiving permeated his soul. He went over to the Omaha National bank and found that Russell had tried to get an ad there, but had Russell had tried to get an so there, but had not succeeded, although the bank folks though he was all right. Rogers then re-rembered that he had seen the name of W. V. Morse on the list and he called on that gentleman only to learn that he had no in-tention of becoming a Harper advertiser. That settled it and he went back and stopped payment on the check. payment on the check.

Satisfied that his whole duty was not yet done, he called up Mr. Alfred Millard of the Commercial National, who he knew gave Mr tussell $50 no longer ago than Tuesday and told him what he had done. Mr. Milhard did not walt to hang up the telephone but started out on Russell's trail at a pace sadly at variance with the usual dignity of ovements.

In the meantime Mr. Rogers met Mr. Rus sell on the street, and after talking in an indifferent manner on several subjects to show his unconcern, said: "See here, I guess I'll take back that check."

Not a word of protest did Mr. Russell ut-ter, but hurriedly tors the check in two and returned it to its original owner. On the back was written, "Pay to J. Clarke Russell," and signed by Harper Bros., while below was endorsed the name of Clarke Russell. Fond good-byes were said and Mr. Russell went straight to his hotel only to meet Mr.

Millard at the foot of the stairs. Millar harged, but was again taken into custody a day or so later. This time Williams had a fine gold watch in his possession, which he

TRUE ART TEACHING.

Sarah Wool Moore's Ideas Upon Growing Subject in Public Schools. It has long been the desire of certain art overs in the metropolis of Nepraska to place the public schools of the city upon a high art plane in keeping with the advanced ideas which now prevail in educational centers. Much good work in this direction has been done by the late teacher of drawing in our public schools, but there is much more to be one, as the following letters from two well known art lovers indicate, and as Miss Moore, who is at the head of the art department of the state university, is thoroughly competent to take upon the subject of higher and truer ideals in art, her letter demands

OMARA, June 18.—To the Editor of THE REE: Herewith I hand you a letter just received from Mass Moore, who is at the head of the art department of our state university. Although not written for publication and not having her consent, yet I feel that the object sought and the arguments used are so clearly set forth that the public are entitled to Miss. Moore's views, which I heartily endorse, as must every true lover of art, and especially artists who know the importance of correct drawing, which in fact, is the foundation of all art. It is highly essential that the artist should begin right, and in this connection I desire to call the attention of the members of the whoel board to the fact that they can matterially reading Miss Moore's letter, and by selecting compotent teachers who will carry out the suggestions she therein makes. G, W. LININGER. STATE UNIVERSITY ART DEPARTMENT, LIN-COLN. Neb., June H.—Hon. George W. Linin-ger-Dearsit: Cannot you exert your large Influence to put public school drawing on a better plane in Omaha? Thear that there is a suspension for a moment in the work and therefore an opportunity for some change in that direction. MACON, Mo., June 17 .- At Bevier last hight ten coal miners, seven of them foreigners, got into a quarrel among themselves in therefore an opportunity for some change in that direction. I wish for the credit of the state as well as for the cool of our young folks, drawing in graded schools might be put on a solid, gen-uine, sensible basis; in line with actual work in respectable schools of art. Your high school has; I understand, already adopted the study of drawing from casts, such a change is equally called for in the lower grades. The prospective, the working drawing, the decorative design, now spread themselves over eight years; they should take a subor-dinate place and give the first place to object drawing from the beginning of the course to the end of it. Object drawing is the point, and object drawing as taught by the ordinary public school teacher is, I consider, a positive abuse and injury to the children. There is a wide spread demand for drawing in the public schools and the sharp scented business men in the public school the sharp scented business men the edge of town after partaking freely of beer, and some one of them slugged Peter Matson and then ran off and left him, where he was afterward found dead by the side of a creek behind some cordwood. The other nine parties that were in the fight were ar-rested and placed in the Macon jail. The case will be investigated by the grand jury ow in session.

Decrease in Army Deserters.

WASHINGTON, June 17 .- Secretary Proctor has prepared a statement showing that desortions from the army are less now than at any time since the war closed. Desertions for the month of May were less than half what they were for several years past, and the ratio of decrease is constantly increasing.

tem. We have made in Lincoln a practical experi-ment during the last year in a school house known as Capitol school. Miss Riley has pro-vided suitable casts and undertaken the instruction in drawing. The results leave no doubt as to the practicability of such a re-form and the board of education has the mat-ter now under consideration and will, I think, without doubt adopt object drawing and drop its harmful ias I believel counterfeit. I talked to the members of the board individually and am. by invitation, to present the matter to them collectively at their next meeting. I feel great confidence in the satisfactory ac-count and wish other centers in Nebraska might be prompt to make the same change. This letter is too long, and yet I have not gone into details. You will, I know, compre-hend and appreciate the drift of my effort. With a substantial art school in the state torn centainly provine qualified teachers for public school work without importing any. Superintendent Coulter of the police and fire alarm service was out yesterday afternoon looking after the setting of some new fire alarm boxes. He had just tested the new box, No. 197, at the north end of the Sixteenth street viaduct and jumped on a passing car. A couple of minutes later an alarm rang cut from the box which brought all the down town apparatus to the box. Officer Bruce was standing near and was positive that no one had touched the box, but through some defect in the mechanism the alarm was sent in. The arrival of the apparatus attracted a large crowd, principally children. During the temporary excitement a small boy snatched a paper bag containing fruit from the seat of a farmer's wagon. The youngster started down Leavenworth street young stor started down Leavenworth street on a dead run and the farmer whip in hand after him.
