making his policy a source of revenue, they have always been for a mere nominal or in-significant sum and that he has paid supstantially the full amount of the original premium each year.

Mr. Connell also alleges in his petition that in 1872 the year after taking out his policy of insurance he decided to drop it and no longer made on him for his premium nor had any notification been given him that the company had or intended to cancel his policy, and the first intimation he had of any such purpose was a letter from the company stating that his remittance had been received, but owing to its famure to arrive in time his policy had been cancelled. This letter, however, as

CONSUMES CASH IF NOT SMOKE

Protests Against a Recent Expensive Experiment Ordered by the Council.

EXPERT OPINIONS OF THE NEW DEVICE.

Smoke Consumers That Do Not Consume and Some That Have Been Found All Right-Competition Wanted.

Last Tuesday night the city council voted to enter into a contract with the Herbert smoke consumer company of St. Joe, Mo., to furnish four smoke consumers for the new city hall. These consumers put in place will cost the city the sum of $3,300. This is not a large sum of money, and the conneilmen who opposed the contract would not kick if it could be snown that the devices would do away with the smoke nursance, and save hundreds of tons of coal each year, as is

These objectors allege that there is something behind all of this,

Last winter, Herbert visited the city, placed his patent smoke consumers in the boilers at Boyd's opera house and then invited the members of the city council to see the test.

The gentlemen went, and a short time thereafter it was decided to put in the consumers. The matter rested until six weeks ago, when it was again brought before the The matter of purchasing smoke consumers was referred to the committee on public property and buildings.

Mr. Morearty moved the committee be given power to act.

This proposition was knocked out by Mr. Elsasser, and the matter was simply re-

Nothing more was heard of smoke consum-Nothing more was heard of smoke consumers until last Tucsday night, when a contract for four of the machines was presented, they to cost $3,300. A bond came along and was approved, three of the members voting in the negative. Again Mr. Elsasser opposed such hasty action, but he was nopelessly in the minority. He stood up and clamored for recognition, but he could not get it. Then he asked to read the following letter from Mortimer C. Sweney, the head engineer at the timer C. Sweeney, the head engineer at the ognition, but he could not get it. Inch he asked to read the following letter from Mortimer C. Sweeney, the head engineer at the Murray hotel:

OMARA, Neb, July II.—To the Honorable the Mayor and the City Council of the City of Omaha-Gentlemen: I presented your honorable body a communication some time ago, on bolier fire tox devales, and recommended the bodier zig zag, rocking grate bars as the most efficient and economizing grate bar on the American market and certainly the safest and best steam generator in this country. In the said communication, gentlemen, I hivited the St. Joe smoke consumer man to an evaporative test that I might be able to show you the difference of the two devices in the saving of fuel. Your homorable body referred it to a committee for investigation. At that very time, gentlemen, one of your number displayed a zeal seldom manifested only when one is personally interested, by adding to the motion to refer, that they be empowered to act, but by a quick act of a conscientious member of your body, who objected, the amendment was knocked out. Gentlemen, I could see then that some of your number were personally interested and so I watched the outcome, until your last meeting on June 36, when the same committee to whom said communication was referred were sending in their reports, and there was a motion made for adjournment, and all of the members of your body then present were on their feet, hats in hands, the same overzealous connellman before referred to, made a motion that all reports of the aforesaid committee be approved, and it carried. But, gentlemen, there were a few outside who knew the notive of the notion at that very time, when it could be easiest carried. Gentlemen, I put this in this way because I know that there are honest gentlemen in your council and many of them, but they did not know the rick that was then being prayed. It was for the sole purpose of electing the smoke consumer because there was money in it. And if the grate bars would command as their price $4,000 or $4,0

There are several other smoke consumers and they are all failures in the same respect, e.s. they all prove inefficient and exceedingly expensive. And, gentlemen, I say again that all of the smoke necessary can be burnt, at least the injurious and oftensive properties contained in it—that is the gases and soot—by means of brick walls built in a certain way at a very small cost.

The conneil was not, in a listening mood.

The council was not in a listening mood, but not in the least daunted, Mr. Elsasser again popped up and proposed to read this letter from E. S. Jones, head engineer at the

Miliard:

OMAHA, Neb., July 1!.—To the Mayor and City Council of the City of Omaha—Gentlemen: I examined the smoke burner in Mr. Rowe's building and one in Boyd's new operathouse on Seventeenth street, and I have spent my whose life at this business and seen a great many smoke and soot burners and I never yet saw one that would fill the bil all around. And I have seen others I liked even better than this, because from a thoroughly mechanical point of view this in the Boyd opera house is very complicated and will prove very expensive in time, besides it can't help but injure the boiler and the mud legs will certainly in course of time scale and burn out. Then you can only shut down and get a new mud leg and I doubt very nuch, gentlemen, if you will buy a second mad leg. Instead, I think you will be satisfied to come down to the good, safe and reliable rocking grate bar. You can get your smoke destroyed in connection with grate bars so that what of it escapes will not be offensive. Soot and gases are all burned. Its done in Pittsburg, Pa., and can be done here as well.

Whether the consumers are of any practical value is a question to be decided after they are put in opetation.

Upon this subject H. M. Griffin, who worked in Herbert's factory, said: "I am a boiler maker and spent a number of years in Herbert's shop at St. Joe. Just before I left J. M. Love, the foreman, said to me: 'The consumers are no good.' As he said this he pointed to a consumer that had been in use four weeks and remarked, 'That consumer has burned out.' City Boiler Inspector Standeven has no hesitancy in talking. He says that the St. Joe consumers will work well while they are new, but he doubts if they can be used in the city hali. They will burn the smoke and at the same time they will rust and burn out in a short time. If they would not do this, they are so constructed that when placed the city hall boilers it will be impossible to get up enough steam to run the elevators and heat the building. In this case they will have to be taken out as soon as

A. B. Hunt, superintendent of the American waterworks company, knows as much about smoke consumers as any man in the city, as his company has tried and discarded hun dreds of the worthless patent concern. At the Florence pumping station the company put in a smoke consumer designed and built by its chief engineer, Captain Reynolds, last year. This cost $100 and was simply a brick wall through which the smoke passed and was consumed. The wall is located at the rear of the furnace, and not only acts as a consumer but also increases the capacity of boiler at least one-third. In operating 1 p. m., 789.

this consumer last year the company saved 3,000 tons of coal. With it in use the cheapest grade of coal was used and not as much smoke escaped as from the average hotel of

Had the the council desired to have adopted this consumer, which any mason could have built, as it is not patented, on four of the consumers, the city would nave saved the neat little sum of $2,900, besides having had something which would have lasted for years. There is nothing artificial about this design. It is simply a plan of burning the smoke and gas before it gets out of the furnace. Certain members of the council will make an effort to have the contract reconsidered and to have some competition in the matter.

Property Owners on Twenty-Second Street Want Paving.

Mr. Donnelly denies the report about the water and gas mains. The gas mains are laid as far as the government warehouse, while the sewer will come, as an ordinance is now before the council creating Twentysecond street a sewer district. It is claimed that the United States government is inter-ested in the paving, but this Mr. Donnelly denies and states that government trains do but little hauling in that direction, as the work is all performed by civilians and by contract. He thinks Shull has a scheme in securing the injunction. He has a number of clay banks in that portion of the city and sells the clay to the brick makers. If the street was paved these men could go out and got their clay free of cost as there get their clay free of cost, as there are plenty of lot owners who would donate the clay in order to get it carted away. In this connection the councilman claims that Shull coerced Dick V-ithnell into joining with bim in the injunction case. Withheil has a brick yard in the locality and a few days he was visited by Shull and informed that unless he signed he could not have the clay at any price.

The First National bank of Chicago does not propose to submit to the sale that the Howell lumber company made to C L. Chaffee just before it went to the wall. LOST ON LEMONS.

Rosso & Co., Squeezed by an Overstock of Unsalable Goods.

The wholesale fruit firm of C. Rosso & Co., at 1213 Howard street, passed into the possession of Sheriff Boyd yesterday on an assignment made for the benefit of creditors. No statement of the assets or liabilities of the firm has yet been secured.
It is understood that the failure of the firm was due to an overstock of lemons, which were bought at a reasonable figure in the winter in anticipation of the big demand and increased price usually incident to the sum-mer months. The continued cool weather during the string and early summer killed the lemon trade, thus causing the firm a loss from which it could not recover.

The place was closed on three executions aggregating $1,939, in favor of D. Rossa. This amount represents borrowed money. For the last two weeks paper of the firm as been due and the banks were asked to held the paper until it could be taken up by expected collections. July 1 the firm was expected collections. July 1 the firm was known to be hard up. Creditors were pressing their claims and even collectors of small local bills hurried around to get their money. On July 8, Mr. Rosso made the statement that he had $8,000—due on collections—and would burry matters as much as possible. At that time he also stated that his total indebtedness was only about $3,200, but this was not given much credence. Louis Benussi, a San Francisco fruit dealer, came here prepared to go into part-pership with Rosso, but after investigation he refused to put his money into the store and the failure followed.

Mr. Martin favors expending half of the $50,000 in erecting a building, and is confident that with that amount Nebraska can make a creditable showing. The board of health held a meeting in the room of the police commission yesterday with all the members present.

The chief reported: Ole Frederickson, No. and Albert Banks, have taken out permits for hauling garbage, and were hauling from any place where they found the best ground, and are underbidding the other men on the most remunerative business. The chief said if this could not be stopped in some way there would soon be no one hauling garbage in the outlying districts. The ordinance permits this sort of thing and it would be necessary for the council to correct the evil.

In the informal discussion which followed it developed that the rules for the board provided for this state of affairs and could be put into effect as soon as passed by the council. Health Inspector Sheerar reported that the cess pool at the county hospital was in horrible condition. The vault was full and the contents ran down the bank, causing the entire neighborhood to be polluted and creating a stench which could be smelled for blocks He was instructed to notify the county com-missioners to abate the nuisance. The question of hauling garbage was taken Stanzelle is forty-three years old now and his bride a few years younger. Their's was indeed a romance. Stanzelle has been a newspaper man, publisher and theatrical nanager. In 1874 he left St. Louis for old Mexico, where his ventures were successfu until he was induced to take a company of strolling players to South America. He was soon stranded in Santiago, Chitt. There Stanzelle made the acquaintance of G. H. Lunsing of Bath, Eng., who was traveling with his family. Lansing became interested in the American and introduced him to his wife and daughter. With the latter Stanzelle promptly feil in love. Mary Lansing accepted him and an engagement of marriage resulted after the young people had overcome the objections which Mr. Larsing made to the match.

Stanzelle, whose fortunes improved under the patrocage of the rich Englishman, began to associate with the young men about town, to one of whom he introduced his affianced. He was Don Allejandro Rodriguez, a young Spaniard whose father was, and still is, a nitrate magnate, Rodriguez was twenty-four years old, handsome and well born. Not being aware of the engagement between his friend and Mary Lansing, he also succumbed to the charms of the girl, with whom he fell deeply in love. He loved with the passion of his race and at once offered himself to Mary's father. The latter was pleased, and after a stormy interview with his daughter, in which he ordered her not to accept further attentions from her betrothed, he foroade the young American his house.

Stanzelle, however, was not so easily disposed of. The girl loved him, and an elopement was planned. At the last moment, however, his sense of honor prevailed and he realized the sacrifice he, a penniless, home-less wanderer, was asking the girl to make for him. Stanzelle asked Mr. Lansing for an interview. In the presence of the woman he loved he renounced all claim to the Englishman's daughter and released the girl from her engagement.

It was not long after Stanzelle's sacrifice that Allejandro was formally accepted as the suitor for Mary Lansing's hand. In his joy he rushed to his friend Stanzelle, to whom he he rushed to his friend Stanzelle, to whom he told the story of his love. Rodriguez was guiltless of intentional treachery, and Stanzelle, with tears that Allojandro did not understand, wished him godspeed in his suit.

Frank Stanzelle was best man at the wedding. Since he saw the woman he loved married to another Stanzelle has been a rover. He has made frequent visits to the United States, and in 1879 he married in Omaha and took his bride to South America, Mrs. Stanzelle died in 1884. About a vear

The donna did not wish to invest in South American property, but she did want to tell her old lover of her life. Her husband had been dead two years, having been taken ill with consumption in Paris, where the couple had lived since their mar-riage. The announcement was also made that Mr. Lausing had been dead many years and that the widow was without encum-brance of any kind, her only child, a girl, having died. Two nieces, of whose education she has charge, lived with her. Donna Rodriguez came to America because her mother was an American woman, related to a well known New York family.

Stanzelle at once replied to the letter—this was only a few weeks ago—and the old love was revived. There was a proposal of marriage, a quick acceptance and Stanzelle came He engaged rooms temporarily at Tenth and Greenwick streets, where he met his old sweetheart, older by sixteen years than when he had relinquished her to his rival, but just as lovely in his eyes, which were those of a lover again. And that is the story of their romance which has ended so unexpectedly and so happily. Donna Rodriguez is living with relatives on West One Hundred and Fifth street and her lover has taken loagings near by. Some time in the first week in October they will be married, and Stanzelle will take his bride to Buenos Avres. After settling up his business there they will re-turn to the United States to settle in Wash-Donna Rodriguez is wealthy and
