City or County?

Attorney General Stone rendered a decision yesterday in reply to a question put to him a few days ago by John R. Carter of the Sioux City law and order league, with reference to the collection of fines by the city government from keepers of saloons, or "disorderly houses." Attorney Carter stated that, in his opinion, if the collection of such a fine is kept at all, the money received from such collection does not belong to the municipal government, but should be turned over to the school fund along with all other money received from violators of the state laws. He asked the opinion of the attorney general on the point and intimated that he would be glad to have his assistance in having the city authorities compelled to account to the city. In his opinion the attorney general states that he believes that question is one which should be decided by the county supervisors of Woodbury county, and that the board should attend to it, as it is clear that the proceeds of these fines should go to the school funds of the various counties.

Another opinion was rendered with reference to the naturalization of Chinese. The county clerk of Benton county wrote to him several days ago, stating that there were two Chinamen there who wanted to take out naturalization papers, and asking what the law was regarding the matter. The attorney general quoted a number of decisions on the point, and stated that while there are some in favor of allowing the naturalization, the bulk of them are opposed to it.

NEWS FROM COUNCIL BLUFFS.

Chautauqua Assembly Concluded After a Very Successful Session.

ARRANGEMENTS FOR NEXT YEAR'S EVENT.

Motor Connection With the Grounds Will be Completed Within a Short Time—St. Paul's New Rector.

Yesterday marked the close of the Chautauqua assembly season for 1891, and an audience of nearly five thousand people took advantage of the last opportunity to attend the exercises at the tabernacle. Early in the morning the signs of dissolution commenced to get in their work, and although most of the campers stayed all day, still there was an unsettled appearance that indicated that the end was drawing near. In the afternoon too, many of the campers got their baggage together and sent it to the city, so as to be ready to follow as soon as the exercises were over. Some stayed bravely to the bitter end, and will have a chance to view the assembly grounds when the work of breaking camp is going on in dead earnest, and the little Chautauqua world is coming to an end.

In the morning Ignatius Donnelly addressed the audience on "The Farmers' Alliance Movement." The weather was bad, consequently the audience was small, but those who were there enjoyed his presentation of the subject. Mr. Donnelly's handling the alliance ticket as candidate for president has brought him to the front in politics, and although there may be some who doubt as to his being a typical farmer, there can be no doubt as to his ability to interest an audience, even in the subject at hand.

In the afternoon the Bacon-Shakespeare debate was resumed, and that was when the crowds commenced to arrive. The debate was so somewhat the same lines as were laid down in yesterday's Bee, and both sides of the subject were very ably handled. At the end it was declared a draw battle, as Donnelly and Freeman seemed to be only ones on the grounds who had any very decided convictions on the subject.

Last evening the attraction was a lecture by A. P. Hopkins, president of the First National bank of Omaha, on the "Silver Question." He is an interesting speaker, and showed that he had studied his subject very carefully.

As to whether the assembly season has been a success, public sentiment is divided. The weather has been unfavorable, but that is not all. Much complaint has been indulged in on account of the small number of real attractions that have been provided by the management. There is no doubt that the blame of this is to be laid at the door of Dr. Gillett, who was allowed to use his own discretion in the arrangement of the program, and when he had done so found another chance to air his grievances, in Grim Echo. The assembly has lost money, but it has gained experience, and will put it into practice next season.

The scheme for the building of a motor line is being pushed with a will, and it is now regarded as settled that before next year's assembly opens it will be in operation. Ten thousand dollars of the required $25,000 has already been secured, and no doubt is anticipated in the raising of the remainder. The route to be followed will be out the Canning road, as that is about a mile and a half shorter than any other. It is also hinted that one reason for the adoption of this course is in order to shut out other companies who might wish to run a competing line. It is probable that not only will a line be built from the Chautauqua to the limits, but it will be extended into the heart of the city, so as to avoid changing cars on the road. The cars will be run into the grounds, and will land their passengers on the top of the hill, about two hundred feet from the amphitheater.

Trying a New Tack.

The ordinance which was passed by the city council last Monday night relating to disturbances of the peace in certain places, was a very innocent looking affair on its face, but it now transpires that its significance is greater than was at first supposed. It was the result of a conviction on the part of the city authorities that the "fine" system of dealing with saloonkeepers had about run its race in Council Bluffs, as so many loopholes have been discovered through which those who don't care to pay can crawl, that it has kept everybody on the ragged edge of uncertainty.

The new law is designed to cover the same ground as the old. It will do away with the legal objection that has been made to the "fine" system on the ground that the city had no right to levy a fine on the keeping of a nuisance which, according to the statutes, could only be done away with by abatement. By making the offense of the saloonkeeper a mere disturbance of the peace, it will also leave no doubt as to the identification of the fine money, as but even the city treasury and the school fund. The city authorities do not contemplate any further trouble over the saloon question, and they are just now busy congratulating themselves on the fact that they have an ordinance that will not be open to any of the objections of the old one.

Constipation poisons the blood; DeWitt's Little Early Risers cure constipation. The cause removed, the disease is gone.

Charged with Seduction.

Charles Shearer, a young German farmer living a couple of miles north of the city, was arrested yesterday on the charge of seduction, preferred against him by Ottilie Klatt, a German damsel who has been working for one of his neighbors. Shearer and the woman, according to the story told by the latter, were very fond of each other, to all appearance, and willing the best six months. In fact, they were engaged to be married, and Shearer, thinking he had a right to do so, took a good many liberties with his intended. When Shearer was brought before Justice Cones yesterday and pleaded not guilty. His bond was fixed at $500, and in default thereof he was sent to the county jail until next Tuesday, when the case will come up for a hearing.

Slashing Jewelry.

Only a small proportion of the people of Council Bluffs seem to realize that the opportunity of their lives to get silverware, diamonds, watches, clocks, etc., is rapidly passing. The auction sale of C. A. Richardson & Co.'s fine stock will last only a few days longer. The partnership has been dissolved and the business will be discontinued after the sale of the fixtures on Thursday evening. Mr. Richardson was overloaded with fine goods that did not sell as rapidly as expected, but now they must go to the highest bidder. No article will be returned to the case after being taken out for sale. The best of the goods remain yet to be sold. Ladies are invited to attend this evening especially, as the sale is being conducted by Mr. J. T. Anderson, jeweler and salesman, of Dayton, O. 406 Broadway.

A Hot Weather Attraction.

Messrs. Fotheringham, Whitelaw & Co., the Boston store people, are making arrangements for what must be considered an extraordinary event. For the next week they will commence a midsummer clearance sale, which will last ten days. During that time every article in the store will be sold at retail at the original cost mark price. The reasons given for the sacrifice is that they are overstocked and are determined to reduce the surplus preparatory to taking the summer inventory.

AT THE WESTERN NORMAL.

What a Successful Iowa School is Now Doing.

SHENANDOAH, Ia., July 21.—[Special to THE BEE.]—The Western Normal college has had a history here, is conducted on the plan of the independent normal. This is commencement week, and the close of one of the most successful years in the history of the college, and everybody from the president down to the humblest citizen is in the full enjoyment of a broad smile of satisfaction.

Sunday evening the baccalaureate address was delivered in the college chapel by Rev. L. B. Wickersham, pastor of the Methodist Episcopal church. Services were omitted at all of the churches in honor of the occasion, and all that could get a seat attended the exercises at the college. The city is full of visitors, who are being entertained at the college and by the citizens.

Commencement exercises began yesterday and continue until Thursday. The very large number of graduates makes the exercises interesting and quite lengthy. Knowing that street talk as a rule is unreliable, I concluded to go to headquarters for information. I found the superintendent, Mr. Croan, in his office surrounded by a score or more of subjects waiting their turn to speak to the superintendent on individual matters. Securing a seat I concluded that I might learn something by waiting and watching. In a very short time the students were disposed of, and the man behind the counter looking at me inquiringly. Just then a fresh invoice of students appeared on the scene, to advance of whom I took my place at the counter, as the next one in line. Introducing myself I said: "I am here temporarily and would like to get a few points in reference to your school."

Mr. Croan said he would gladly accommodate me, but would have to be brief, "for you see how it is," I said, "Mr. Croan, you ought to have some help to do this work." "Yes," said he, "that would be better for me, but not so good for the school. You want this work brings me in almost daily contact with every student, thereby giving me personal knowledge of their dispositions, their conduct, intentions and capabilities, which is very essential to the success of the school.

"We want the old time of religion," said Brother Parks. "They ain't no new time that mounts to anything. What you want is to trust in the Lord an' git your foot on the Rock of Ages. We are following a Captain that is bound to win," continued the speaker in a very high tone of voice and with all the force that his vocal organs and lungs secured capable of sustaining. "Git your hearts fixed right and then go ahead. Git on the good train, brothers. Christ is the conductor. He's comin' roun' to take up the tickets pretty soon. Git your tickets now. Git them from the Holy Ghost and from Jesus Christ, and when he comes aroun' and says 'tickets if you please' you will be all right for a through trip."

"Amen! Hallelujah!" shouted half a dozen of the brethren and sisters.

"I can see the ole river Jerden," continued the speaker as he danced across the platform and looked up at the beautiful, full moon just peeping over the tree tops and looking peacefully down upon the camp. "I can see the river Jerden rollin' and hummin' itself between us an' the golden gates. I can almost seen them little cheribeems a-smilin' over the gates. Are you ready to cross the stream? Are you sure your sins are washed away? Git the good, old solid soul washin religion and go along with us to the better land."

At the end of every sentence the speaker's words were indorsed by the brethren shouting "Amen," "Yes, an'," "oh yes," "hallelujah" and other ejaculations of approval.

When the speaker closed the audience sang "Git on Boa'd, Little Chillun, There's Room for Many-a-more," and then a collection was taken. The prayer and praise meeting lasted half an hour and then the benediction was pronounced.

The ice cream stand near the camp drew a crowd of customers after the services. Everything about the camp appeared to be very respectable and orderly. The colored brethren of Omaha and South Omaha are hoping and praying for a great spiritual awakening at this protracted effort in the woods.

Work of Circus Fakirs.

MIDSUMMER THEATRICALS.

Mrs. James Brown Potter, the erstwhile society queen among the ultra fashionable set of New York's "400," and who is now more or less anxious to figure as a clever and fascinating actress, may take upon herself the honor of first making "Tuxedo" known to the world at large.

Tuxedo is beautifully situated amid the nestling Orange mountains, about two hours ride from New York on the Erie railroad. It is the mecca of American fashionable life; home but those whose blood is bluer than skimmed milk are recognized within its precincts. Many a millionaire would gladly slice of a watermelon piece from his fortune to set his gold-laden foot within its sacred portals.

But Ward McCallster says "No."
And Father Plebean Croesus must reluctantly betake himself to Saratoga or Long Branch with his exotic retinue, and their golden olive branches. At that time Tuxedo was born, the rage for amateur theatricals was at its height in New York society. Grease paint hung around the dressing room and a simple of sock and buskin glory encircled Mrs. James Brown Potter. Amateur dom was at her feet, and she was as proudly recognized queen. What more appropriate then, than that Tuxedo should be formally opened with a superb amateur performance given under the mantle of sweet charity. The event was the most brilliant one of the season. The performance was a success. Mrs. Potter, Edward Fales Coward, Miss Elsie De Wolfe and other representative society people were in the cast. The affair was described in the columns of the New York papers in a word Tuxedo was born, and in its mouth was the traditional silver spoon.

All this time a couple of merry student men, were chasing flies and building jokes at Plainfield, just a metaphorical stone's throw from Tuxedo.

Ed Marble was spending the summer with George Thatcher at the latter's home. The more Marble read of the gay doings at Tuxedo the more he ruminated. He had an idea. He nursed it, fed it, and cherished it. It finally took root, germinated, and sprouted, and just what that idea who will be seen is next Saturday night at the Grand opera house, when George Thatcher's minstrels with Rich & Harris' comedy company will present Mr. Marble's farce comedy, "Tuxedo," a satire across society's caprices.

L. M. Crawford, the new lessee of the opera house at Fifteenth and Farnam streets, will open his season, Sunday night, Sept. 7, with Chester P. Crawford, arrived in town this morning from Topeka, Kan. Manager Burgess of the opera house is pushing matters forward rapidly for the season's opening with "Kajanka" on Sunday afternoon next with a week's run.

OLD TIME HISTORY

Sample of the Sort Now Served at Syndicate Park.

"Shouting Joe" Ransom of Kansas City did not arrive in time last night to preach at the colored camp meeting, which is just now in full bloom at Syndicate park. The great Kansas City orator and African oracle is expected to fill the pulpit and the woods with religious eloquence tonight.

But the meeting went on just the same. Rev. Louis Parks of Nebraska City expounded the gospel last night. The regular old fashioned, Methodist, camp meeting style. There must have been at least four hundred people in attendance at the camp and fully three-fourths of them white people.

After several revival hymns had been sung Rev. Parks began to exhort the people to quit their sins and flee from the wrath to come.

Women are rapidly making their way into the faculty of medicine in England. No fewer than 107 students attend the London School of Medicine for women. Nine ladies who presented themselves for examination at the University of London all passed and took their M. B. degree. One gained triple first-class honors and another had a remarkable success in the examination of the Royal University of Ireland.

The Students' Aid society of Wellesley college has raised, in nine years, $130,000 to assist needy students. Of this, $45,000 has been lent to the girls. The rest was given. Last year three are $2,000 to forty-three students, and to twenty-eight was lent $4,700.

The number of assigned teachers in Chicago is 2,500. The abundance of tootsey-wootsey names on the roll leads the Chicago Herald to ask whether the teachers have passed the soothing syrup age. "A mature woman," says the Herald, "who has not respect enough for the dignity of her sex to cast off dolls and pinafores, paregoric and pantalets in names ought to be reminded that the quality of intellectual force thus indicated is not quite enough for the teacher's rank. The marvel is that women do not themselves feel the danger of inviting familiarity by tolerating pet names after they are grown beyond the age of kittles and doggies."

The board of education of New York city has issued the following order: "The use of nicknames or pet names by teachers, and in the records of this board and in those of the trustees, is undignified and improper. It is necessary in all proceedings to have the names as recorded in the trustees' certificates of appointment and of teachers' licenses. It is therefore recommended that the city superintendent summon to his office or correspond with all teachers in the service whose names as recorded appear to be other than their actual names, and ascertain from such teachers their actual names and amend their licenses accordingly. That he report to the trustees of the several wards of the changes found necessary, and ask that thereupon by resolution make the corresponding changes in the ward records, and thereafter on the pay rolls and in all communications to this board or any of its committees or officers. No appointment hereafter made of a teacher under other than his or her proper name shall be valid."
