Naming the Theatres.

MR, CRAWFORD MUST MAKE A CHANGE.

Acting on the Order of the Court the Old Boyd Has Been Christened "The Farnam Street Theater."

Lester M. Crawford can continue in the cheater business in Omaha, but he will have to select some other name than "boyd's opera house" for the theater at Fifteenth and Everybody knows that some time ago, prior to the opening of the present theatri-cal senson, Mr. Crawford billed the town for plays at the "Boyd."

As soon has this happened James E. Boyd went into the courts and secured a restraining order to prevent Crawford from using the name "Boyd,"

Judge Irvine heard the arguments last week, and yesterday morning in presence of the interested parties and a large number of spectators, handed down the following decision, which is given in brief;

"The corporation by James E. Boyd and Thomas F. Boyd its secretary, conveyed the premises to O. M. Carter, the descriptive part of the deed being as follows: 'Lot 5 and the west baif of the west third of lot 6, block 119, Omaha.' The deed recited that it was made in accordance with a resolution passed by a unanimous vote of all the stock holders and conveyed the property together with all of the tenements, hereditaments and appurtenances and all of the estate, title, dower, claim or demand whatsoever of the Boyd's opera house association, "July 10, 1889, Carter conveyed the property to the American Bank building company by the same description. "In 1860 Boyd commenced the erection of

"In 1800 Boyd commenced the erection of another building and styled it Boyd's theater.' In October, 18:0, the American Bank building company leased the old theater to Crawford, the lease reading, all that portion of the building known as, "Boyd's opera house" used as a theater or in connection with said theatre for the managing or carrying on the business of a theater, also, all furniture, fixtures, scenery and stage machinery therein, for the term of five years from July 14, 1891.

"In November, 1890, Carter gave notice to Crawford that Boyd objected to the use of his name on the old building, but Crawford, disregarding this, advertised the house as 'the Boyd opera house.'

The Boyd opera house, association conveyed to Carter the rights of the association to the property. These rights were those of an owner in fee simple of the realty, and to the theatrical beginning conducted therein the corporation business conducted therein, the corporation had no connection. This was Boyd's own business. The use of the name, so far as this action is concerned, relates only to the conduct of the business and not the ownership of the realty. Crawford says that he desires to use the name because of the reputation attached to it by reason of plaintiff's prior management thereof.
"There is no pretense that the plaintiff at any time transferred his business to Carter, or the other defendants. There can be no possible question that the mere conveyance possible question that the mere conveyance of realty operates to convey a business and the good will thereof which happens to be conducted thereon by the rendor. "Suppose The Bee building company should convey by lot and block numbers its realty. The name of the building is that of the newspaper published therefrom. Could it for a moment be contended that the owners of Tur. Been newspaper could not remove of The Bee newspaper could not remove from said building after the sale, publish the newspaper elsewhere under the name of The Bee and restrain the purchasers of the build-ing from publishing another newspaper under the same name in the building in question? Could the purchaser of the building claim for a moment that its conveyance, although under the name of The Bee building, con-veyed the good will of the newspaper?

To my mind the case would be precisely analagous to the one at bar, except that where a man's name is involved, to justify a stranger in the use of it, there would be required a much plainer expression of intention than would be required in the use of a mere financial designation. There is no appearance by the defendant, the American Bank building company. The petition alleges that this company is willing to comply with the plaintiff's demands, providing it can do so without rendering itself liable to Crawford. Were the contest between the plaintiff and the bank, upon the question of the latter's right to continue to designate the building itself by the name that it has heretofore borne, it is possible that different considerations would control the case, but this contest is between the plaintiff and Crawford, the latter claiming the name, not in connection with the building, but in connection with the business which he proposes to conduct therein. The plaintin claims the name in connection with the theatrical busi-ness, as one to which he has the exclusive right, by reason of its distinguishing characteristic, being his own name, and especially by reason that the name used in the business has acquired its value through his efforts. "A temporary injunction is granted, re-straining the defendants from the use of the word Boyd or any variation of the same in signs, placards or advertisements in connec tion with the theatrical business as soon as a ### bond of $5,000 is executed by the plaintiff." Farnam Street Theater.

Acting on the suggestion made by THE BEE months ago, the name of the old Boyd theater will be changed to the Farnam Street theater, in kee, ing with the decision ren-dered by Judge Irvine today.

The name will be changed at once, and every place where "Boyd's Opera House" occurred "Farmam Street Theater" will be substituted. The name will commend itself to the pub-

CLEAR CASE OF NERVE.

Alleged Detectives Do Up One of their Victims.

The arrest of Harry A. Cowan at an early hour yesterday morning for impersonating an officer has thrown some light on the way certain people have of doing business.

Cowan is the chief of a snide detective agency that hitches on the name "United States" to distinguish it from other institu tions and at the same time to impress the unwary tenderfoot with the idea that it is a concern covering the entire country. The office of the agency is at present located in the Ramge block, and it is there that the plans for acquiring wealth at the expense of others are matured

in Justice Hart's court and set for trial Tuesday.

It also seems that a philanthropic individual named H. C. Hitt, who poses as a police court attorney when in condition to do so, had charge of the case. It has never been intimated that Mr. Hitt does not know a good thing when he sees it, neither has he heretofore figured as very much of a philanthropist, but in this case he seems to have reached the conclusion that it would be better to allow the druggist to settle the matter for dollars and conts than to prosecute him on a criminal charge and possibly send him to jail.

Hitt called upon the druggist Saturday afternoon and wanted him to call at his office. The invitation was such a cordial one that the druggist couldn't refuse, especially in view of some pleasing insinuations that were dropped by the attorney, so he appeared in a very few minutes at Mr. Hitt's office. What transpired there can be quickly told, although it actually consumed considerable time.

The druggist was told that for $400 he could dispose of the matter for all time. The pill mixer thought $400 a big handful of money, and finally convinced Mr. Hitt that $250 would be ample. The ueshot of the interview was that he paid over $250 to Mr. Hitt, and was given a receipt for it signed by the woman, Maud Shropshire, in which she acknowledged that it freed the druggist from any further claims for support or breach of promise. The signature was witnessed by a friend of the druggist and by Constable Dingman, who just happened in at the time.

It was stipulated that the woman should

It was stipulated that the woman should leave town, and it was while endeavoring to find out whether or not this arrangement had been carried out, that the druggist and his clerk ran up against Cowan Sunday night, and he displayed his star. They visited the place at 1511 Burt street, where Cowan has a room and where a "lady friend" of his also rooms.

When the druggist wanted to know about the Shropshire woman the detective replied that he knew where she was because "that was his business," and intimated that the visitors might get into trouble unless they took an immediate departure. He also pulled open his coat and showed a big tin star, and it had the desired effect. The drug men, however, reported the case to Officers Ellis and Mitchell, and Mr. Cowan was very soon behing the bars.

behind the bars. When seen by a reporter yesterday morning Cowan announced that he had been in business here for the past six weeks and that Robert A. Cohee was president, Samuel F. Robertson secretary and himself chief of the agency. He denied that he was in any way interested in the case, or that he had shown his star. He said that he was in his room, and he had merely told the visitors that the ladies of the house did not relish their presence. The wind blew his coat open and might have revealed his star. He insisted that the agency was incorporated and claimed to have the papers, but couldn't produce them. To one of the druggist's clerks, however, he had stated that he had done all the work on the case, and had secured all the evidence. He also stated that he was working for the Shropshire woman at $5 a day and that she had left town without paying him.

The druggist claims that he was black-mailed. He says that the woman was mailed. He says that the woman was notorious before he ever saw her and that there was no foundation for the charge, but that the conspirators had him where they could put him in jail or cause him lots of trouble and unpleasant notoriety. At the attorney's office he was allowed to see the woman sign the receipt, but Hitt would not allow him to talk to her. He says that Hitt afterward acknowledged that he received $100 of the money, although it was stipulated that the money was to be used to defray lying-in expenses and the care of the child.

At any rate, Fitt was sailing high that At any rate, that was sailing high that evening, and about 7 o'clock was taken to the station in the patrol wagon with a howling ing and a black even jag and a black eye.

The officers who arrested Cowan say that he told them that of the $250, he received $100, Hitt $100 and Dingman $50. The agency was closed yesterday, and the president, who is an ex-hack driver, and the secretary, who Cowan describes as a G. A. R. man and an Oddfeilow, are missing. It was learned from other tenants of the building, however, that Hitt and Dingman are both frequent visitors there, and that they seem to be just as much interested in the arency as anybody. Hitt is said to put in all his spare time there, and Diagman makes it his loafing place whenever there is a let up in the business of the coroner's office. From letter heads and cards of the agency it appears that there was a change in the names of the management, although no change in the individuals, when the concern moved from Farnam street to the Ramge block, less than a month ago, after a couple of weeks of impoverished tribulation. At the first stand the agency's stationery set forth the fact that H. D. Martin was superintendent, and M. M. Andrews secretary of the "United States Described Agency "which had "agencies and Detective Agency," which had "agencies and correspondents in all the principal cities of the world." This information was heavily underscored, as were the words "confidence,"

"integrity" and "dispatch," while a wide open eye locked from the center of the sheet, with the information: "Our eyes are ever on you."
At the new stand the officers appear a at the new stand the omeers appear as given by Mr. Cowan, with the additional statement that the agency is incorporated under the laws of Nebraska, but the big eye and plue ink are conspicuously wanting. Several complaints have been made against the concern, and it is alleged that the alleged detectives are constantly on the watch for information on which people can be bled or systematically blackmailed. The so-called chief is the only one who wears a star on the inside of his coat, as the other "sleuths" carry their them in pockets for use as occasion may demand. The police will investigate the point, and even if it is incorporated, as alged, they will take steps to stop any more

When the case against Cowan was called in police court yesterday afternoon the drug-gist was promptly on hand, vowing that he would institute proceedings to recover his money after the criminal case was disposed of. The state made out a strong case against the defendant, but his attorney moved to dismiss with a nerve second only to that of his client. The court, however, overruled the motion and Cowan was put upon the stand. He was a very willing witness in some directions, but extremely reticent on other points, and on cross-examination contradicted himself so on cross-examination contracted misses of frequently that it was hard to tell what he had sworn to and what he had not He told of his extended service under Matt Pinkerton in "shadowing" Chicago members of the Clan-na-Gael, and if his story is to be believed. were worth. The smile warped a heavy iron column that stands near the bench, but it did not effect the court to any appreciable extent. Cowan told of his boyhood acquaintance with one or two Omahans, but out of regard for them their names will not be published. Court adjourned without a decision being rendered, as the judge desired to see a telegram from Lincoln alleged to have been received by the defense stating that the articles of inconception and head and the articles of inconception and head of the conception are the conception and head of the conception are the co es of incorporation and bond were all right. The defendant was again locked up pendg the result of the case. Cowan referred to a well known Omahan to vouch for him, but he evidently basu't sounded the aforesaid gentleman lately, as he said some highly uncompilmentary although deeply interesting things regarding Mr. Cowan when his attention was directed to the matter last evening.

IS IT A CITY OR A VILLAGE?

South Omaha Badly Excited Over a Recent Legal Discovery.

ALL BUSINESS INTERESTS INVOLVED.

The City Has no Levy and no Power Now to Make One-Is the Magic Municipality Insolvent?

The business and financial interests of the city are in the throes of anxiety and doubt, the city officials are paralyzed, claim-helders against the city are wild and contractors are on the anxious seat all over the amendment passed at the last session of the regislature to the South Omaha charter law.

Section I, of South Omaha charter act, as amended at the last session of the legislature, reads as follows: "That all cities, having less than 25,000 and more than 10,000 inhab itants as ascertained and officially promul-gated by the census and enumeration taken by authority of the laws of the United States in the year 1890, shall be governed by the provisions of this act and be known as cities of the first class having less than 25,000 in-habitants."

This provision places this city under the provisions of the old law governing cities of the second class having a population of more than 5,000. Under that law the tax levy is to be made by the county commissioners and the limit was ten mills on the dollar of assessed valuation. The taxes are to be col-lected by the county treasurer and by him turned over to the city treasurer.

The levy is to be made when the county commissioners make their annual levy and as that has already been done no legal levy can now be made even to the amount of the ten mill limit.

ten mill limit.

The assessed valuation of the city is $1,987,000 and the annual appropriation, illegally made by the city council, was 33 mills, yielding nearly $65,000, only enough to meet expenses. The 10 mill law will yield less than 220,000, or only enough to pay the interest and leave nothing for any other purposes.

The amended charter provides for the establishment of grading districts and the issuance of five-year tonds as to this all contracts made are jeopardized like everything else affected by this charter change. As the paving provisions are the same as n the old law paving matters will not be af-

The city now has a floating indebtedness of about $11,000, and in the present phase of the case no provision can be made to pay the same except by a special session of the legis-lature. The warrants issued since the law was changed are illegal, and as no legal levy was made by the county commissioners, the council at its regular meeting on or before the second Monday in Au-gust cannot make an annual appropriation and as the time has past for the county com-missioners to do so, the financial affairs of the city are exceedingly complicated. In the meantime no warrants can be legally drawn except for the small balances in two or three of the funds raised from taxes levied under the old law. The question now is: Is the city a city and solvent, or is it a village and insolvent and almost without law to govern the city!
