a week ago and from an inspection of them it ts safe to predict better races than ever be-fore. The 2:24 class has a large field and will be a great event. Notifications of intention to exhibit in all departments are pouring in and there will be a difficulty to find space for all. The sheep and hog pens are already all taken and new space will have to be pro-vided. The management, however, will be equal to the occasion. Double the number of applications for tents have been made than ever before and there will be a regular tented city on the grounds. This is doubtless owing to the fact that the grounds will be brilliantly lliuminated with electricity. NEW IOWA INDUSTRY.

A new industry has been established at A new industry has been established at Hampton, Ia., without any flourish of trum-pets, under the supervision of W. J. Wilder, general manager of the Aluminum alloy metal company. They have already ex-pended $50,000 and will continue to put in more machinery and appliances to the amount of $200,000 this summer and fall. The alloy is spoken of very highly by Prof. Hill and other leading subortific men. They Hill and other leading scientific men. They assert that it will last sixty years exposed to weather as roofing, without tarnish. It is stronger and stiffer than either brass or in, and can be furnished as roofing for $5 per square, and the finest of wire can be made from it. Mr. Wilder says that from a bushel of Franklin county clay he extracted cight ounces of aluminum. No place in the world has clay that will test more. Six hat will test years ago he got his alloy patented and had mough manufactured to place roofs on building - in several eastern cities, and after five years of service, without any paint, they remained bright as ever. He had several far lies in charge from Yorkville, Illinois, enroute to Hampton, and within three weeks lowa will be turning the nasty "black jack," or blue clay, into a beautiful serviceable article. He says the Connecticat factories will have to come west. He speaks in glowing terms of the possibilities of western factories, the causes being high prices of produce abor and coal.

FORT DODGE, Ia., Aug. 9 .- [Special Telegram to THE BEE. |-A sensation has been created in the little village of St. Joe, north of here, by the arrest of Henry Schroedor, a wealthy and prominent member of the Catholic church, on a charge of church-yard vandalism. Some time ago the church had a warm dispute concerning the removal of the church cemetery. The pastor refused to allow it to be moved. The result was that the fence surrounding the grave yard was found one morning torn down and split into kindling wood. Some of the gravestones were broken and other acts of vandalism perpetrated on the graves of the dead.

LONDON'S BEAUTY. Ideas of a Cultured Parisian on England's Magnificent Metropolis.

[Copyright 180] by Janes Gor.ion Bennett, 1 LONDON, Aug. 0.-[New York Herald Cable-Special to THE BEE, |-So London is to have Henry Rechefort for a long time. His son returned from America this week and is now at Paris gathering his belongings before returning to the important position he has secured in one of the great Pennsylvania I saw M. Rochefort last night. He sat in the dim candle lighted gorgeous salon of Clarence Terrace. He is the same snowyheaded sparkling Parisian I used to see in the old days before M. Constans closed his iron hand upon the Boulangist. He is the jolliest exile in the world. "London !" he cried, "why Paris is a pretty city compared to it. Frenchmen don't know London any more than if it were 5,000 miles away. It is amazing that Paris should be so ignorant about this city. I am beginning to ove it. I have not passed one weary minute ince I came here. It is a fact that Parisians ook upon London merely as a great gloomy narket to which you must go to transact ousiness of the dullest sort, then hurry off to the gay continent. Why, London is a city full of art and treasure. The English are rich; have collected from the ends of the earth. Their houses are crowded with fine netures and art objects. Changes of fortune have thrown things on the market and so in London love and art has better chance to get beautiful things than anywhere else in the

Gems of Art.

The editor of the Intrancegeant took a candle in hand and led me from picture to picture.

"Look at this superb Guard. Is it not a fine canvass! Just think, I only paid 110 guineas for it; and look at this, and this, and this-all gems and picked up for trifles." M. Rochefort was radiant and his eyes shone with enthusiasm. "Ah, how I enjoy the tranquility of this grand old metropolis! People are not always thinking of the can-can. All is earnestness. How I appreciate personal liberty, freedom from the official surveillance of England. In Paris there were always aree or four policemen stationed about my iouso watching my movements and prying nto my affairs. I had no means of ridding myself of this espionage. Here if one should attempt to hang about my door I would have only to complain to the nearest policeman to have the nuisance abated. It is also well arranged and judges in the courts are free to act according to the dictates of justice and the law, regardless of the wishes of the government. Everything is so secure under the law of England, and Sunday I see labor organizations paradiag the with music and banners, not m spite of policemen, but actually under police protection. The very soldiers in the barracks waived handkerchiefs at the dock strikers. Imagine soldiers doing that in France. Then London is such a beautiful city, green parks here and I am in the heart of the place, yet when I look out the windows into Regent's park I feel as if I were in the country. In Paris the moment I showed myself in public was stared at by the crowd. Here even my next-door neighbor doesn't know my name." Freedom of London.

"The official supervision is very marked in London," continued Mr. Rochefort, "even the poor abandoned women in the street are not officially branded and listed. Neither are their whereabouts branded afresh every veck."

"You have not abandoned Paris forever, M. Rochefort ?" Lasked. "Abandoned Paris ? No, but I suppose I shall be an exile for at least two years more. I would not accept pardon at the hands of either President Carnot or Constans. I would neither accept such favor nor permit such distinction be-
