A trio of ladies and a few gentlemen belonging to the congregation are with the party, devoting them-selves to the entire enjoyment of the boys. #### MURDER OF AN INNOCENT.

A Dead Male Child Found in an Empty

F., E. & M. V. Car. Somebody's inhuman crime was revealed yesterday when the body of a full-grown male infant was found in a paper box in a freight car near the Webster street depot by one of the employes of the Chicago, St. Paul, Minneapolis & Omaha railway company.

The car had been loaded with hay, but was inloaded yesrerday, so that the ghastly find must have been placed there last night. The body was placed in the box without any other covering, and the whole was carefully wrapped up and thrown into the car. Coroner Harrigan gave it as his opinion that the birth had occurred not more than twenty-four hours before the body was found and that the child was not still born. He could not say whether or not death was caused by strangulation, but from the condition of the umbilical cord he was inclined to think not. He determined to hold a post mortem this afternoon to determine the cause of death, and an inquest will be held at Mc Carthy's & Conroy's undertaking rooms at 10 o'clock Monday morning. A Minister's Opinion.

> EMINENT PORTRAIT PAINTER. J. Laurie Wallace's Picture of Hon.

George W. Lininger-Omaha Beaming an Art Center.

"In this beloved, beautiful, but sometimes foggy and too often not very brilliant country of ours," says that delightful essayist, Leigh Hunt, speaking of the "tight little island," we are not fond enough of colors-not fond enough of a beauty of which Nature herself is evidently very fond and with which, like all the rest of her beauties, it is the business of civilized man to adorn and to improve his own well being." It was the blue sky and clear air of their native land which have made the Italian painters so famous for coloring; and Reubens and Matteau, like wise men, saw the good of transferring the beauty to the less fortunate climate of Flanders. Ruskin, in his wisdom, yet nevertheless the advance agent of Tumer, gives the same mead of praise o that great English painter, who was to art Wordsworth was to the literature of our mother country. Yet one cannot help but contrast now and then the tonal qualities of the works of the eminent painters of the old world, with those that have come from the brushes of the men who owe their art to the associations of the

Each year sees a broadening influence at work, a bringing together of brilliant minds apon the subjects which lie nearest the heart of the artist, and through this ever widening power must come a condition which until now has only been greamed of. uted painters endeavored to teach the great truths of art in Omaha, but the leaven has been at work and the nursery of the old days has given way to a school room of painting which cannot fail to make this young giant of the northwest a force in American art. The impetus which Hon, George W. Lin inger and men of his stamp have given to art matters cannot help but have an influence for good, and in their collections of the old and modern masters, a glimpse of what is to oe in the future is seen. Omaha has made gigantic strides in her material welfare in the past decade; there are just as potential forces at labor to bring about a like condition in its intellectual life.

Artists who represent the best thought and feeling of the modern school are being attracted thither and Chicago, which has for years occupied an unrivalled supremacy in the polite western world, sees in the growing cities of the north and west candidates for the position she has long occupied as the head font of western culture and refinement, and in this refinement all have played no inconsequential part.

Last full J. Laurie Wallace, with the presige of an art education won in the best technical school in this country, the Philadelphia academy of fine arts, came to Omaha to conduct a similar institution upon a less exalted basis, but still of sufficient moment to command the attention of artists and ar pupils throughout the west.

pupils throughout the west.

A gentle, modest enthusiast, slow to speak of his own works, but with very decided aims and opinions, based upon his observations and studies, Mr. Watlace commanded respect from his advent in our midst.
And it is only now that the art loving portion of the community have had a subject placed before them, painted by Mr. Wailace, of which they could form an estimate of the merit of the man who was looked up to as a leader in his profession. The subject which will command the closest The subject which will command the closest attention from the critic, the artist and the art lover alike is now on display in the Lininger gallery, a bust portrait of Omaha's best known and most enthusiastic art patron, Hon. George W. Lininger.

The artist shows in every line a knowledge of his subject which is refreshing. He has painted it con amora, and it is very much questioned whether there is in Omaha today a better bit of nortrait painting by one of the moderns, than this. The modelling and values are good. This is particularly apparent in the muscles of the forehead, its relief and shiny, smooth skin, softened by a sheen rives a maistened aspect to the face delightfully refreshing. The colors are transparent and the whole has an atmosphere which is the joy of the student in painting. There is a sketchiness about it, too, which deserves more than a mere mention en passant, especially in the manner of working out the blue smok-ing jacket and skull cap which the subject were during the sittings. There is a freshness too in its execution which shows how conscientious the man has been to arrive at the fountain head of all art, a glorified imagination coupled with a techrique which distinguishes the master from the mountchank.

The background too is unconventional, he subject having been seated between the the subject having been seated between the folding doors which divides the parlor of the Lininger house from the gallery, giving the painter an opportunity to work in the deep embrasure of a window with daylight streaming in, a problem always difficult of streaming in a problem always diment of solution and therefore not often attempted. Taken in its entirety Mr. Waliace has shown himself deserving of being classed among America's most eminent portrait painters and an artist who cannot fail to reflect credit upon the city of his adoption.

But Mr. Wallace cannot devote his time to portrait painting entirely, for he will assume. on September I, the position of director of the Omaha academy of fine arts, which has at last been taken under the wing of the Western Art association, an association every way capable of giving such a school both financial and artistic encouragement.

And the officers of the Western Art association will have the control over the affairs of the academy of line arts as they do over the older organization.

The association is officered as follows:
President, George W. Linluger; vice president, Charles S. Eigutter; secretary, Mrs. E. C. Browkley; treasurer, H. A. Smith. In membership the association numbers 300, composed very largely of artists, al-hough there are a number of art lovers not artists who have been admitted to the "inner court." With this force back of the academy failure hardly seems possible. On September 1 the school will open its season in the Williams building at the corner of Fifteenth and Dodge streets, which is now being fitted up for the use of the school, and when finished it will be one of the most com-plete studios in the country adopted for the imodation of large classes.

All the branches of art taught in the Phila-elphia academy will be taught here, a life ciass will be established, clay modeling will be taught, sketch classes will be organized and the school pieced at once upon a high When one comes to consider the education to be received the prices fixed for tuition are very insignificant. Ten dollars a month will give a papil all the benefits to be derived from an attendance on such a school. Five dollars will admit a pupil to the studio two evenings a week, and in addition give him the association of Mr. Wallace during that The prospects of the school are very flattering aiready, more than one hundred ar-tists and students having signified their de-sire to become identified with a school presided over by J. Laurie Wallace, No gripping, no nausea, no pain when DeWitt's Little Early Risers are taken. Small pill. Safe pill. Best pill.

Funeral to Reach Across Kansas-Story of the Rise of a Man to the Fame of a Biller.

TOPEKA, Kan., Aug. 15 .- | Special to THE BRE: |-The announcement that Ed. Short of Oklahoma had publicly threatened to kill Judge Botkin of the Thirty-second judicial district in the event that he attempted to preside at the trial of James Brennan, charged with killing Colonel Sam Woods at Hugoton, June 23, has occasioned the first solicitude of Judge Botkin's friends for his safety. Prior to the threats made by Short, Judge Botkin had paid no attention to the manylanovmous letters he had received threa-Tuesday night was a creditable success in every particular. The church has been rap-idly gaining strength since Rev. T. W. Ware tening his life or warning him of danger. In the the eastern half of the state, but few people believe that he was in any way connected with the killing of Wood and the charges of a conspiracy have been laughed at. But an open threat from Ed. Short means a great deal. Judge Botkin's statement that the funeral procession would stretch from Topeka to No Man's Land if a hair of his head was injured was made upon receiving the news that Short had threatened his life. The outlawry in southwestern Kansas tells the story of Ed Short, Sam Wood was indissolubly connected It is rumored that Dr. Thain, the able and carnest paster of the Plymouth Congregational church, has had an urgent request to accept the pasterate of a Congregational church in another city where the salary and congregation are larger than he has at present in Omaha. with its growth, its county seat fights and its steals both large and small. Ed Short was his friend and lieutenant. He was bold in the days when lawlessness was supreme, and when there came evidences of civilization he made for Oklahoma, where there was less restraint and better opportunities for men who regard the revolver as judge and jury. Short is now a deputy United States marshal at Kingfisher. He belongs to the Woodsdale faction in the Stevens county fights, and so ong as his crowd was large enough to hold its own in a defiant, dare devil way, he re mained with it. Short does not look a des perado. He is a typical western dandy, dresses in a dudish sort of fashion, is a feather-weight with black moustache and cold gray eyes and no respector of persons. It is his boast that Mr. Colt has made him the equal of any man alive. Like all desperate frontier characters, Short has drifted from one town to the other. His association with Sam Wood is a peculiar story, illustrating the character of both men and the customs on the frontier. In 1886 Sam Wood established the town of Woodsdale. He chose for his town marshal, Sam Robinson, a fron-tier desperado, who had killed his man in Kentucky and who had achieved a reputation for so doing in a half-dozen western towns. He was given a lots in Woodsdale and a hotel was built for him. Robinson finally con-cluded to run for sheriff, but Wood would not help him, and the two men quarrelled. It was then that Robinson left Woodsdale for its rival town of Hugoton, and the first steps were taken which lead to the moreer of Sheriff Cross and posse in No-Man's Land. Robinson promised the Hugoton people that if they would move his hotel from Woodsdale he would be their town marshal, and the agreement was carried out. Wood knew there would be trouble, and the only man in there would be troube, and the only man in the entire west in his acquaintance who could cope with Robinson was Short, who was at that time in No-Man's-Land, He was sent for, and accepted the position of town marshal of Woodsdale. Robinson had not at that time taken the office as marshal of Hugo ton and Wood concluded that he would offer an insult to the rival town. He went to Hugoton and attempted to ruin the town well. Sam Robinson, although not clothed with any legal authority, told Wood that he must behave and warned him to leave the town. He did so, and a fews days later a warrant was sworn out in Woodsdale for Robinson's arrest charging him with disturbing the peace at a political meeting in Voorhees township. The warrant was placed in Short's lands and two deputies were sworn in to accompany him. Short reds into Hugo. in to accompany him. Short rode into Hugoton and stopping in front of Robinson's hotel, called him to the door. "I've a warrant for your arrest," he said, and drawing his revolver fired at him without giving him time to reply. He missed fire and Robinson dodged inside the door. Short then put spurs to his horse and left over the prairie for Woods dale. The two men who had accompanied him had gone behind the hotel, thinking that Robinson would run in that direction, but as he did not he escaped unburt. A mob then collected in Hugoton to give chase, and the two deputies, who had driven across the country in a buckboard, only escaped by cutting their tugs and beating a hasty retreat. Short subsequently made another unsuccessful attempt to arrest Robinson in No Man's land and it was while this excitement was on that the posse led by Robinson came upon Sperifi Cross and party and murdered them. Robin-son after remaining in Hugoton for a short while went to Colorado, robbed a postoffice, and is now serving a seventeon-year term in the penitentiary. Short returned to Woods-dale but left when Oklahoma was opened, Short was one of the chief witnesses against the Cross murderers and has been a bitter Injunctions in Courts Judge Wakeley held court yesterday for the purpose of handing down decisions and hearing motions. A number of decisions in unimportant cases were rendered, after which the injunctions were disposed of. In the restraining order obtained by Dr.

Bemis park sewer, a continuance was granted until Tuesday morning in order to allow the plaintiff to make a supplemental showing. In the case of Barnam against Douglas ounty and the city of Omaha a permanent injunction was granted. Barnam owned twenty-six acres of land in the northern part of the city which was ascessed at $20,000. On the hearing he showed that the land was assessed at several times its actual value and that the county commissioners had refused to reduce the assessment.

Things Generally on the Improve-One Firm Continues to Advance.

The impression has gained ground in Omaha, as in cities all over the country, usiness is almost at a standstill and that the stringency in the money market has blocked the wheels of trade to such an extent that nothing is being done. Especially is this true of the retail trade and merchants on every de are heard complaining of dull trade and slow collections.

To such an extent is this true that the merchants have acquired a juguorious tone and appearance and it is unusual to see one who manifests a joylal spirit. It is not strange therefore, that Tus Bes man's attention was attracted yesterday by the smiles which wreathed the face of N. B. Falconer and the apparently contented appearance of that

Mr. Falconer was just coming out of his store on Douglas street near Fifteenth and a glance inside sufficed to explain the cause of the gentleman's apparent satisfaction with all the world. Every aisle in the spacious store was througed with customers, and the large force of clerks was kept busy supplyng their demands.

The first thing which attracted the eye upon entering the store was the large increase in space on the first floor, the estab-lishment having increased in size by the addition of a store room on the west side, thereby making the first floor 65x132 feet in size. This new part is excellently lighted by means of a large skylight and in it are to be found the black and colored dress goods, an extensive variety of silks and dress trimmings. This entire space is occupied by these goods and the well lighted room affords the ladies an excellent opportunity for ex-amining both texture and color of the various

This new part of the store has been occupled for a week but no flaming announce-ment of that fact bad been made. This seemed strange and Mr. Falconer was sought for an explanation. He stated that he pre-ferred to advertise reduced prices and let the people see for themselves the many changes and improvements which had been made. The new addition was opened Monday morning, he said, and had been thronged ever
