HOW INDIGENT SOLDIERS ARE CARED FOR.

Details of the Reunion Which Excel Any Previous Attempts to Entain the Country's Defenders.

Tomorrow, the Grand Army of the Repub lic reunion of the Department of Nebraska will commence in the city of Grand Island. It will continue until Saturday next. For the thirteenth time, in the history of this department, the men who were numbered among those who saved the nation, will assemble to renew the friendship which was created by their companionship in arms. They will recall the scene in the little home in the east when they affixed their signature to the enlistment roll, and the cheer with which those who had enrolled before welcomed them into their company; the sad tears at parting from mothers, sweethcarts and wives; the miseries of the march; the pleasures of the bivouack; the terrors of the battlefield and the barbarities, the living death in the pest-ridden, disease-breeding, hellish prison pens of the south.

There are some men and memories that pever die. Among the former ought to be enumerated the brave ones whom this occas-fon brings together; and, among the latter, the achievements in which they bore a leading part. With this annual reunion the people of the great state of Nebraska are in sympathy. They know that it tends to the garnering of facts for future history; that it affords needed relaxation to the toiling shopman and farmer; and, above all, that it arouses in the oreasts of future citizens the patriotic im-pulse which must be depended upon to de-fend the union against its fors.

In anticipation of the advent of the Grand Army, the patriotic and enterprising citi-zens of Grand Island have made arrangements, on a most liberal scale, for a week of festivity. They will welcome the soldier as warmly even as they ever did a man who faced the enemy, even as they cherish the indigent veterans who have found permanent quarters almost within the limits of the town. There will be no lack of shelter. There will be no scarcity of comedant the limits of the set of the of campfires. There will be no unsatisfied demand for state and regimental reunions. There will be no buildings which will not glisten with the national colors; in a word, there will be nothing left undone by the cit-izens to do honor to the men whom the peo-ple wish to honor-the patient, suffering and loyal members of the Grand Army of the Re-nuble.

It was "the biggest thing out," using a slang expression in vogue in those days. Pheips asked to woat he referred. Stephenson drew from his pocket a small roll of manuscript written in pencil. It proved to be an address to a candidate for admission to a military society. Stephenson asked Phelps if he would "go in." The lat-ter replied that he would. Stephenson then handed Phelps the manuscript and requested him to take it nome and copy it First National Encampment.

After an interval of fifteen months, the encampment assembled in the council cham-ber, Independence hall, Philadelphia, Jan-uary 15, 1868, and continued in aession three days. At that meeting, in a certain degree, order was brought out of chaos. In later years, an harmonious set of prin-ciples, with which soldiers everywhere could barmorize ware adopted. Denatments ware barmonize, were adopted. Departments were organized and gradually the order gathered him to take it nome and copy it in good legible style and then bring it back to him. Phelps did the copy-ing and returned the manuscript. Stephenson was offended because Phelps had made no addition to the matter and had not put it in structule for a within the fold thousands of soldiers in all parts of the country. The following are sketches of the war services of some of the departmental officers. Commander.

Captain Joseph Teeter, commander of the Nebraska department, Grand Army of the Republic, is a native of Pennsylvania, having been born near Chambersburg, but his family removed to Illinois when he was an infant, and he spent his boyhood near Mt. infani, and he spent his boyhood near Mt. Carroll, in the latter state. He was not six-teen years old when the war of the rebellion broke out, but his youthful patriotism was fired to the fever pitch, and on September 7, 1861, he enlisted in Company I, Thirty-fourth reg-iment Illinois volunteers. He was mustered in at Springfield as a private, but shortly afterward was promoted to eighth corporal. During his term of service he was rapidly promoted from eighth corporal, then to second geant, then to first sergeant, then to second lieutenant and finally won a captain's commission on merit. Mr. Johnson wounded in the the head at the latter was sent to Harrison's Landing, thence to West Philadelphia hospital, where after nearly three months he was discharged on half-disability certificate.

Assistant Adjutant General.

J. J. Bowen, assistant adjutant general Neoraska department of the Grand Army of the Republic, was born in Wales in 1844, but about eighteen months after the family came to America and located in Pittsburg. In 1855 they removed to Iowa, and when the war broke out were living near Keosauqua, Van broke out were living near Keosauqua, van Buren county. In June, 1862, young Rowen enlisted in Company H, Ninetcenth regiment Iowa infantry. After drilling sixty days the members of the company were put through their physical examination. Bowen failed to pass muster because he was not tall enough. General W. W. Belknap came to Keokuk on recruiting service, and Bowen, with four other boys who had been rejected, applied for enlistment in Company E. Filteenth for enlistment in Company E, Fifteenth Iowa, General Belknap said they were too small for soldiers, but agreed to take them as drummer boys. They were sent to camp Mc-Cielland at Davenport, Ia., for drill. The recruits at that camp were permitted to se-lect their own companies, and during the absence of General Belknap Bowen joined Company E instead of the band. He served continuously till the close of the war except for another the days. for about sixty days. He was severely wounded before Atlanta in 1864 and sent home on a furlough, but returned in time to make the march to the sea. He participated in most of the engagements his regiment was in, marched through the Carolinas with in, marched through the Carolinas with Sherman, marched from Raleigh to Wash-ington and took part in the grand review at the national capital. He was mustered out at Louisville, Ky., m July, 1805. After the war he located at Oskaloosa, Ia. In Decem-ber, 1882, he moved to Odell, Neb, and edited the Ontic for two years. Ho then located in the Optic for two years. He then located in Lincoln, where he is now engaged in mercantile business. He has been an active man in Grand Army of the Republic affairs, holding a number of subordinate positions, and he is recognized as one of the most influential members in the Nebraska department.

Assistant Quartermaster General.

Henry Streight, assistant quartermaster general, enlisted at Hawleyville, Ia., in August, 1861, in company C. Fifth battallon, Missouri cavalry, and was attached to the Twenty-fifth regiment, Missouri infantry. He was mustered into the service at Fort Leavenworth, Kan., and immediately ordered south. At Waranshurg he mat, the analy south. At Warrensburg he met the enemy, and after a short skirmish, was ordered to Lexington to reinforce Colonel Mulligan, who was entrenched at that place against General Price. After a three days' battle Mulligan surrendered, being cut off from water. His battalion was paroled and returned to Kan-sas City and St. Joseph, Mo., and were detailed on scouting duty in northern Missouri until February, 1862, when it was discharged and the infantry reorganized. Mr. Streight then came north and at the first opportunity enlisted in and helped to recruit company E, Sixth Iowa cavairy, at Council Bluffs, and went into camp at Davenport in the fall of 1862, where be remained until the spring of 1863, when the regiment was ordered north. against the Indians. About that time he hells, has left him physically shattered. He is now writing a compute history of the raid. H. C. Andrews belonged to the Eighth Iowa cavalry; served on staff of Colonel Dorr, com-maning second brigade first cavalry divis-lon; was captured July 28, 1834 in McCook's raid around Atlanta, taken to Andersonville prison where he was kept until the close of the war, and though a young man, he was phys-ically ruined. E. C. Caikins enlisted in the Tenth New York eravalry, serving through to the close of the war.

In consideration of this reunion. The BEE herewith presents a history of the Grand Army of the Republic and kindred military associations. It had intended to produce the roster of every Grand Army of the Republic post in the department. In this, however, it has not been successful, owing to the absence of post officers in the fields and from town and consequent impossibility of obtaining re-Hable data

The rosters of about sixty posts, however, ave been obtained and are herewith presented. Where a roster could not be cured the deficiency has been supplied by the name, number, location and the principal officers of the post.

In the rosters published, wherever the arm the service in which the veteran served is not mentioned, the infantry is to be undertood. The Order in Nebraska.

In 1872 Nebraska did not have a member in the Grand Army of the Republic, while the total membership in the country was 25,774. In 1873 the total membership had been reduced to 25,037. In 1874 a still greater reduc-tion was made to 25,333. In 1875 the mem-bership increased to 27,369, and in 1876 to of the country reached 49,099. In 1881 Ne-braska claimed 1,927 and the country 61,547.

In 1882 Nebraska had 2,675 and the country

Owing to the drouth of the past year, the order has suffered somewhat in this state, having now 256 posts with a membership of Organizing Posts.

It required two and three days sometimes for Phelps to organize a post and then he learned that Stephenson was not attending to business. There was a general complaint that he was not forwarding the documents promised to posts. Phelps wrote him on the subject and this led to the appointment of Major Woods as adjutant general. While Phelps was organizing in southern and central Illinois, Dr. Stephenson and Comrade John M. Snyder went to Chicago and organized two posts. Colonel Jules C. V. C., Michi-Weber went to the north western part of the state and organized posts there. On June 9, 1896 the Wisconsin Soldiers' and Sallors' league of which .Brigadier Clarkson, J. V. C., Ne-

General Proudfit, adjutant general the state, was commander, adopted the form of the G. A. R. and became a department of the order. There was not a single post of the order in the state, however, nor had a single resident of the state of Wisconsin then taken the obligation. Comrade Phelps then wrote to Gen. Walter Q. Gresham, on the subject. The latter referred it to Colonel Crawford, who organized the department of Indiana. He also wrote to Governor T. C. Fletcher, who caused a department to be established in Missouri; also to B. F. Potts of the Fourth division, Seventeenth army corps, who organized the department of Ohio.

The First Encampment.

At the suggestion of Dr. Stephenson several old soldiers signed a call for a conven-tion of delegates. The convention or encampment mot in the hall of representative in the old capitol at Springfield III. The hall was decorated with old regimental flags loaned by Adjutant General Haynie of Governor Oglesby's staff, the work being done by Comrades Snyder and Phelps.

The encampment was held July 12, 1866. Comrade Phelps gave his time and services from February to July without com-pensation. It is believed that If he had not devoted himself so closely to the wors the Grand Army of the Republic would have met an early death. Colonel Jutes C. Weber succeeded Comrade R. M. Woods as adjutant: Captain John A. Lightfoot became assistant adjutant general, which was the only office to which a salary was attached.

Was attached. At that time there was a clause in the constitution which subsequently caused the order trouble. It was "Vote for the soldier, all other things being equal." Captain Phelps and others opposed this feature, but out of deforence to the wishes of Dr. Stephenson, who, at that time, was desirous of political preferment, the feature was allowed to become one of the cardinal principles.

There Was Politics in It.

It may be stated that the class of men who dervoort, Omaha, 1882; Robert B. Beath, Philadelphia, 1883; John S. Kountze, Toledo, Ohlo, 1884, S. L. Burdett, Washington, D. C. first joined the order were office holders or those who aspired to office. A majority of them had worn shoulder-straps during the 1885; Lucius Fairchild, Madison, Wis., 1886;

His last battle was at Bentonville, N. C. He particizated in the grand review at Washington and was mustered out July 25, 1865. He had been in the service very nearly four years, was not yet twenty years old and retired with a cap-tain's commission, an exceptional record. During that time he never had a pass to go ucbraska to 525,402 in the country and Nebraska climoed to 188. In 1879 the total membership reached 32,777 in the United States and Nebraska dropped to 177. In 1880 the army experienced signal prosperity. A bullet entered his abdomen, passed nearly through his body and lodged near the spine, where it remains today. When he found himself wounded he staggered towards a fence and fell among some brush, where he was overooked in the search for the missing. When accidentally found by a boy he was supposed to be dead, but frightened the youngster by regaining his senses and speaking to him. At the field hospital the surgeon passed Teeter by, saying that his case was hopeless.

In sixty days he reported for service and resumed his command, but there was a ragged hole in his abdomen and he had to wear a compress to keep his intestines from slipping out of the aperture. In two months more the wound was healed and the compress removed, but there are times now when he can neither sit nor he down and he literally has to sleep while standing.
