Gold Withdrawals Stiffened Discount Rates During the Week.

SHARP DEMAND FOR AMERICAN STOCKS.

All Kinds of Securities Readily Bought on a Rising Market-Chilian Bonds Take a Spurt on Balmaceda's Defeat.

LONDON, Aug. 30 .- Discount rates s'iffened during the past week under the continued withdrawals of gold from Germany and the decline in New York exchange; the quotations were 2 per cent for three months and 11/4 for short. An impression prevails that the period of cheap money is passing

The feature on the Stock exchange was the buoyancy of American railroads and as it generally now happens, the activity in the American department enlivened the other departments and changed the whole tone of business. Yester lay the demand for American railroads set in sharply immediately after the house opened and large purchases continued to be made on the home account until the official close. After the New York quotations were received a further all-round ise occurred.

The street presented an animated scene, something most unusual for a Saturday being thronged by an excited crowd until after 5 o'clock. Apart from the investments after 5 o'clock. Apart from the investments on the part of the public, operators relying upon the permanence of this boom, readily bought all kinds of securities, though the principal demand was for Louisville & Nashville, Erie, Milwaukee, Union Pacific, Atchison and Reading. The day's advance ranged from $\frac{1}{2}$ to $2\tilde{2}$ per cent. The week's increase include: Wabash debentures, $7\tilde{2}$ per cent; Ohio & Mississippi, 6 per cent; Lake Shore, Louisville & Nashville and Union Pacific, $4\tilde{2}$ per cent; Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe, $4\tilde{4}$ per cent; Northern Pacific preferred, $3\tilde{4}$ per cent; Nortfolk & Western preferred, $3\tilde{4}$ per cent; Nortfolk & Western preferred, $3\tilde{4}$ per cent; Nortfolk & Western preferred, $3\tilde{4}$ per cent; Now York, Pennsylvania & Onio, per cent; New York, Pennsylvania & Onio, 3 per cent; Denver & Rio Grande preferred. 3 per cent; Denver & Rio Grande preferred, 2)4 per cent; Central Pacific and New York, Ontario & Western, 2 per cent; Mexican Central, 1)4 per cent. Canadians shared in the activity, Grand Trunk second preferred rising 5 per cent; Grand Trunk first preferred, 414 per cent; Grand Trunk guaranteed, 314 per cent; Grand Trunk, third preferred, 214 per cent. The securities of the Mexican railway were neglected, seconds declining 214 per cent on the week and ordinary 114 per cent. In the foreign market the

In the foreign market the feature of the week was the announcement of a scheme for the conversion of the Uruguayan loans into a new debt bearing 3% per cent interest guaranteed by the hypothecation of 45 per cent of Uruguay's customs dues: Uruguavan shares lost a point as the effect of the proposal.

After the news of the defeat of Balmaceda

After the news of the defeat of Baimaceda was received Chillan bouds rose 7½ per cent, Nitrate and rallway shares 2½ per cent and Antofagasta and Arauco 1½ per cent, owing to the expectation of a speedy end of the war. Among the miscellaneous securities Anglo American cables gained 114 per cent on the week and Primitiva Nitrates five-eighths of per cent, while Bell's Asbestos shares de-clined seven-eighths of 1 per cent and Eastern one-quarter of 1 per cent.

Havana Market Review. HAVANA, Aug. 29 .- The sugar market was dull this week. Holders were firm. It has been stated that at outports last week 87,000 bags centrifugals were sold on private terms and the report of this transaction imparted a better tone to the market here, which closed > MONTICELLO, Ill., Aug. 20 .- To the Survivors of the Confederate and Union Armies: Comrades-The guns of the late war fired their last blasts twentysix years ago. The bitterness engendered by the strife has had more than a quarter of a century to be sweetened, the swords have rusted, the bayonets are pruning hooks, the cannons are hung in our church steeples, to call us to worsnip that Being who arbitrated for us, and the bomb shells roll across the sward, the playthings of a child.

Peace is declared and the words of our great commanders should be heeded. "Let us have peace." Let us show to our children and to the world that we old soldiers, who wore the blue or the gray, know the war is over.

Let us meet in one grand encampment at Chicago in 1893, under one flag, the grand and glorious banner of our country. Yes, our country, our union, cemented by the most precious blood that ever flowed in the veins of a cavalier, or roundhead, and talk over the scenes and incidents of the days of 1861 to 1865 inclusive. Upon the shores of Lake Michigan beside the great city of the northwest, we ask you, comrades of the gray, we ask you, comrades of the blue, to meet us there, to talk over the mighty events of those days.

We know that God has arbitrated for some kieptomaniac took her horse and drove it towards Greenwood, where it was killed is, we know that he has made us one. Let us hold out both hands to each other, and show to the world that today Mr. August Splinter, hving on his farm every one of us, would follow "Old Glory" to the gates of hell, if our United near Stockham, attempted to remove the cap from a loaded shell, when the cap exploded the shell, tearing off his thumb and severely lacerating his hand. Meeting of Brothers. Of the many touching scenes of recognition witnessed at the Detroit encampment there was one that borders on the sensational. Two brothers met at the corner of Woodward and Jefferson avenues who have not seen each other for thirty years. When the war broke out S. M. Duvall and Wm. Duvall were lads in the city of Pittsburg. They enlisted in different companies, and when the strife was ended they went in different directions. Last night a battle-scarred old man stood in front of a store as a Pittsburg post passed by on the way to the camp fire. Of one of them he asked if S. M. Duvall was there. He was informed that he was, and in a moment a veteran, the exact counterpart of the inquirer, except that he was somewhat stouter, stepped from the ranks.

"You want to see me?" he inquired in stonishment. "If you are S. M. Duvall I want to see he answered.

"Well, I am the man you are seeking."
"Don't you know me, brother? Why am your little brother who went to the war and never come back."

They stood and gazed at each other for a moment, while tears came to their eyes, almost blinding them. "You are not my brother," said S. M. Duvall, incredulously,

'Yes, I am your brother Sam." "But you don't look like Sam did." "But I am Sam, just the same." "Why, don't you remember the old house just off the lane, where we used to live? There was little sister Mary, and the brindle cow that used to kick over the bucket. You must remember it "I think I am you brother." "You must remember, Sam, how the horses used to go into the graveyard, and how one of them got shot, and how we composed the song: 'They filled the

The last incident was too much for Sam, and the two fell on each other's necks. Then they locked arms and went away relating incidents of their happy boyhood days. Jeff Davis in Prison.

General Miles, who was commandant at Fortress Monroe at the time "Jeff" Davis was confined there, immediately after the war, has become so annoved at the false and sensational stories about his treatment of the confederate chieftain while the latter was his prisoner that he authorizes a statement in the Chicago Inter-Ocean denying these charges. Therein he cites Presiden Johnson's proclamation calling for the arrest of Davis on the ground of complicity with the assassination of Lincoln The statement closes as follows: "Every consideration consistent with his safe custody was granted him, and when all the troops still in hostility had surrendered, and general amnesty had been granted, he was allowed to go free in as good condition as when he entered Fort Monroe. He lived for more than twent, years longer, in apparent health, and died of old age. This much is said, not with the desire to open old scars, but in the interest of historical truth.

A Story of Logan. It is well known that John A. Logan, who was a member of congress at the time the war began, left Washington when he saw there was going to be a fight, and seizing a musket, walked all the way to Bull Run, where he arrived just in time to take part in the battle. He had on a swallow-tail coat, but he stood up to the rack as long as anybody did. He was back in Washington next morning a good deal out of breath, and was telling some of his fellow congressmen all about it.
"Who gave you this account of the fight?" asked a member from the North

Woods of New York. "Why, I was there myself," said Logan. The New Yorker evidently had not heard the news, for he seemed a little mystified, and asked, as if wishing to solve the mystery of Logan's speedy reappearance, "Are the cars running?"

"No," said Logan, "the cars ain't running, but every other — thing in the state of Virginia is as near as I could find out."

A Popular Veteran. One of the most popular veterans at the recent national encampment at Detroit was General Henry A. Barnum of New York. He was constantly surrounded by a group of old soldiers eager to hear his war stories. He is a wellpreserved man, with a military figure and a pair of gray eyes that shoot out fire like derringers when he is aroused. His son, a young cavalry officer, is named Malvern Hill Barnum, because he was born during the progress of that battle, at which his father was shot through the body.
