GRAND ISLAND, Neb., Sept. 17.—[Special Telegram to THE BEE.]—The state democratic convention assembled this evening at Bartenebach's opera house, the parquet, stage and gallery being packed to the utmost. The hall was oppressively warm, although everything had been done which could, in any manner, tend to the comfort of delegate or spectator.

The delegates were assigned to seats in the parquet and circle, the gallery and stage being set apart for spectators. From the latter all superfluous furniture had been removed. It was set with a neat "interior" to which there was a large center entrance, over which were twined the national colors. On either side of the entrance was a large crayon sketch of both Thurman and Hendricks. In various places throughout the apartment were disposed beautiful and fragrant cut flowers. Only the border jets were lighted. This enabled the trough of the footlight and the dress rail to be utilized for the display of about fifty small American flags, which formed a bank of color both unique and imposing. The national colors were also hung on the waistcoating in front of the stage and from the key of the proscenium arch two large national flags were draped to either side of the stage. Immediately above the blue field of the standards hung a large portrait of Grover Cleveland.

Over the chairman was suspended an immense Japanese umbrella and several unique lanterns of the same workmanship suspended from the flies at various parts of the stage.

CALLED TO ORDER.

The doors were opened at 7:45 p.m. and considerable delay was experienced in seating spectators and delegates. The latter arrived very slowly, the Omaha and other delegations being the last to arrive. The doorkeeper had a hand on the Union Pacific. The delegates were escorted to their respective quarters by a corps of competent ushers under the direction of Ralph Platt. At 8:20 an ovation was played by the band, and a few moments later, Hon. Charles Ogden of Omaha, chairman of the state central committee, appeared upon the stage and was greeted with cheering. He said: "I have been called by the committee in order to avoid complication, to recommend to the convention as temporary chairman Hon. F. P. Irene of Nebraska, of Otoe county." [Cheers.]

The chairman was suspended over the stage, and the nomination was adopted.

The motion was unanimously carried. Colonel Ireland then made his appearance on the stage and was greeted with cheers. He spoke as follows:

To be elected as the presiding officer of this convention is a most distinguished honor, and I thank you all for the confidence you have conferred on me. For twenty-five years the democratic party of the state of Nebraska has been successful in the pursuit of its objects, and I am sure that the purpose of nominating different officers, these conventions have increased in members each year, they have increased in numbers, and they have become more independent and fidelity to democratic principles. Twenty-five years we have fought for the democratic party, and we have won. We have been driven down upon us, and we were deprived of that victory by the despotism of the courts of Nebraska.

You have assembled in response to the call of the central committee to place before you the names of candidates for offices of the supreme court, and two regents of the university. I am satisfied that your deliberations will be conducted with the highest sense of justice. Young Broady, after pursuing a course of study in the common schools, entered upon the study of law in the University of Michigan, graduating from that institution in the spring of 1867. Soon after graduating he entered the law office of George A. Marsh & Quincy. He was in the law office of the same year he removed to Brownville, Neb. Here he entered a law partnership with J. H. Broady, and remained in that firm until 1871, when he was admitted to the bar.

In 1871 he was admitted to the bar of Thomas & Broady. This was the republican State Board of Transportation for fallowing the election of Mr. Broady as a partner. He was successful from the start, and his practice continued to increase and expand. In 1875 he became a member of the district attorney of the Second Judicial district comprising the counties of Nemaha, Otoe, and Johnson.
