Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Benson's Delightful Reception-A Wooden Anniversary-Beginning the Round of Social Pleasures.

Thomas Batley Aldrich. Curled up and sitting on her feet, Within the window's deep embrasure

Is Lydia; and across the street, lad, with eyes of roguish azure, Watches her buried in her book

In vain he tries to win a look, And from the trellis over there Blows sundry kisses through the air. Which miss the mark and fail unseen, Uncared for. Lydia is thirteen.

My lad, if you, without abuse, Will take advise from one who's wiser, And put your wisdom to more use Than ever yet did you adviser;

If you will let, as none will do, Another's heartbreaks serve for two, You'll have a care some four years hence, How you lounge there by youder fence, and blow those kisses through that screen, For Lydia will be seventeen.

Two swell weddings the past week brought Out the gay world in large numbers, the one at Trinity especially winning the ap-proval of the exclusives who would rather attend a marriage in swelldom than be punctual at home for their 7 o'clock dinner. The cathedral service was upon a scale of magnificence unequalled in the history of social events in Omaha, and what is particularly pleasing to remember about it was the smoothness attendant upon the ceremony. There were no hitches, no embarrassing de-lays; the bridal procession arrived on time and the service was impressive to a degree. The bridesmands were young and pretty, the maid of honor, sweet and girlish, while the bride wore her wedding robes with a grace which was thoroughly delightful. The ushers were representative club men, all of whom have figured in times past as leaders of the german, and authorities upon the usages of good society. With these surroundings the bishop of the diocese and the dean to per-form the church's part of the programme, and the vested choir to furnish the music, is It any wonder that the ceremony was at-tended with eclat?

The church was densely crowded by the representative people of the city. While there were a good many persons present not invited, still that could not be helped, as cards were not demanded at the door, and the ushers had only to do their duty in providing places for these who have not demanded. viding places for those who entered the por-tals. Yet withal the scene was an inspiring one and will be remembered for a very long time to come as the representative church wedding of the season, if not of many sea-

The Parisians have invented a novelty in balls—the so-called "matron balls"—to which only young married ladies are invited. Dancing is here not quite so important a factor as it is in the "white balls," to which only girls and quite young men are admitted; but still, it is well kept up. The cotillion is a charm-ing specialty, just adapted for the occasion. Neither flowers, ornaments nor fans are divided among the dancers, but in their stead the mammas receive, as a token of friend-ship, from their entertainers, a parcel of toys to take home to their children. The couple leading the dance most liberally dispense dolls, horses, boxes of soldiers, parlor games— in short, everything in the way of toys likely to delight the children and gratify the par ents in their little one's pleasure.

The women of New York, and, in fact. sensible women in the east, says a member of Sorosis, take no stock in the proposed re-forms in women's dress which have attracted the attention of the theorists this summer. The reforms suggested are too radical and will not find favor with even a very small percentage of women who can afford to in-dulge in such luxuries. No poor woman can wear them. Only comparatively few women could afford to spend money on them. So it will be with the present movement. The ladies who are championing dress reform now will arouse a great deal of enthusiasm, I have no doubt, but the enthusiasm will die out when the time comes for paying the bills. It always does. And what woman who wants the admiration of men is going to wear the togs prepared by the Chau-tauqua women! Men don't want any reforms in women's dress. They are satisfied with the present styles. Oh, of course, it may be vanity, but women are going to do what the men want. They have always done so and always will. If reforms are ever introduced the innovation must be gradual, not sweeping and radical.

The marriage of Miss Nellie McKell Burns, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Burns, to Mr. Osgood Tilton Eastman, Wednesday evening, September 30, at 7 o'clock, will take from the exclusive circles of Omaha society one of its brightest ornamerts. Miss Burns has been a factor in the social life of the metropolis for several years. Warm hearted, intelligent, with a mind broadened by close reading and extensive foreign travel, she will prove a charming helpmeet to the gentleman who on the 30th will take her to live in Chicago. Dr. Willard Scott will perform the ceremony at the residence of the bride's parents, Eighteenth and Dodge streets, and Dr. Eastman of Boston, father of the groom, will-assist at the mar-riage service. The Eastman family have been ministers for three generations and all of them have been graduates at Amherst. Mr. O. T. Eastman, the groom-to-be, breaks the link in the chain of min-starial association, bearing breaks the link in the chain of ministerial association, having chosen

The Carter-Barkalow Nuptials. Wednesday was an ideal wedding night. A beautiful harvest moon hung over the city, glinting the stone turrets of Trinity cathedral with a softness and light in keeping with the occasion. Here and there a white cloud relieved the vastness of the blue and gave a finished touch to a perfect September night.

Long before 7:30 o'clock, the hour set for the union of Miss Leola Carter and Mr. Newton Barkalow, the beautiful cathedral of the Episcopal church in this city was crowded by the friends of the contracting parties. Carriage after carriage unloaded its precious freight before the wide portais of the church, and the glummer of carriage lights made Cap-itol avenue look as if it was in the possession of an army of fire flies. While there was no attempt at lavish floral display in the interior of the edifice the chan-cel and altar could not have been more beau-tifully decorated. Costly vases filled with white roses were distributed throughout the chancel and in the niches of the altar, while many candles, taking the place of flowers burned on the altar, shedding a soft, subdued light over the inspiring scene. Promptly at the hour named the choir entered the center also from the choir room, singing the very appropriate hymn for such occasions, "The Voice that Breathed O'er Eden." In the choir were two brothers of display in the interior of the edifice the chan-occasions, "The Voice that Breathed O'er Eden." In the choir were two prothers of the bride, the one being an acolyte in the church, the other a little feliow singing his paean of peace from the ranks in honor of his sister's marriage.

Hardly had the choir ended their "awen" when the bridal party entered the church through the lower hall, the choir singing the wedding march from "Lobengrin." The ushers, Mr. Richard Berlin, Mr. Robert Patrick, Mr. K. C. Barton and Mr. Mose Barkalow, led the bridal procession, followed by the bridesmaids, Miss Clara Hawley, Miss Reynolds, Miss Burgess and Miss Amy Barker. Then came the maid of honor, a sister of the bride, Miss Leita Carter. Then the bride, escorted by her father, Mr. O. M. Carter, and lastly Mrs. Carter and Mr. Carroll Carter. Mr. Barkalow and his best man, Mr. William F. Baxter, with Hardly had the choir ended their "amen"

large boutonnieres of lilies of the val-ley, met the bride at the chancel rail. Then while the organist played as in-cidental to the service Balfe's "Ever Be Happy," Bishop Worthington in full canoni-cais, supported by Dean Gardner on his right, read the marriage service in a very impressiva maner.

Upon the termination of the service the organist, Mr. Butier, played the march from "Les Huguenots" and the wedding party filed down the main aisle in this wise: Mr. and Mrs. Newton Barkalow, Mr. Baxter and Miss Castor Mr. Mose Barkalow and Miss. Miss Carter, Mr. Mose Barkalow and Miss Barker, Mr. K. C. Barton and Miss Burgess, Mr. Patrick and Miss Reynolds, Mr. Berlin and Miss Ciara Hawley, Mr. and Mrs. O. M. Carter, Mrs. Barkalow, mother of the groom, and Mr. Dick Barkalow.

The bride, as she passed down the asse, presented a distinguished appearance in her wedding gown of ivoire white satin and brocade, the skirt with a full court train. The bodice was jacket shaped, high at the neck with a vest of duchesse lace Around the edges of the gown duchesse lace was effectively draped. A heavy tulle veil, caught up on the head by a coronet of orange blossoms and falling gracefully to the edge of the long train, made a charming tout ensemble. She carried an immense bouquet of bride roses in her ungloved hand. A rather remarkable coincidence in this connec-tion is Miss Sailie Hargous, the belle of New York swell circles, wore a gown made exactly in the same style upon her marriage on Tuesday at Newport.

Miss Carter, which she now becomes by reason of her sister's marriage, was a symphony in pink, and looked particularly vivacious and winning in a gown of pink crepe de chine, made short in the skirt. In addition she wore pink shoes, pink gloves and carried a bouquet of la France roses.

a bouquet of la France roses.

The bridesmaids, all pretty girls, were gowned alike in white crepe de chine, simply made, with little trimming except lace at the foot of the skirt. They carried beautiful bouquets of la France roses, loosely held together by broad silk ribbons. They also wore dainty gold bracelets made in the form of a true lover's knot, a gift of the bride, while the ushers and best man wore scarf pins of gold, arranged in a lover's knot, pifts from the groom.

Mrs. Carter, the bride's mother, looking very young, wore a costly gown of corn satin and brocade, entraine, trimmed with rare point lace. Her ornaments were diamonds, one cross in particular being universally remarked for its beauty, a gift from her husband on the occasion.

Madame Barkalow presented a picture in a gown of gray silk, finished in gray bullion, which harmouized perfectly with her snow white hair, which was set off by a dainty cap

At the conclusion of the service the bridal at the conclusion of the service the bridge party drove to the beautiful home of the banker president on upper Farnam street and prepared for the reception which was held from S until 10 o'clock. Mr. and Mrs. O. M. Carter and the bride and groom re-ceived in the south drawing room, which was exquisitely decorated with flowers and was exquisitely decorated with flowers and paims. The other rooms too on the lower floor were examples of the art of the florist. Here and there passion vines were twined, while Illies of the valley and bright pink Duchess of Albany roses lent additional lustre to the kaleidoscopic scene. Broad leaved paims nodded a welcome to the guests from niche and alcove in the hall, on the startway and in the small reception room the stairway and in the small reception room off the ballway where the orchestra was stationed. The drawing rooms were thrown into one large apartment by the removal of the folding doors, which made the crush less noticeable.

The broad plazza which encircles the house on two sides was in great demand, and no more advantageous spot could have been selected from which to admire the beauties of the night. The music, the brilliantly lighted house, the gally decked women, all combined to make the picture one long to be remembered. The rooms on the second floor were turned into reception and cloak rooms for the benefit of the guests who came and went in large numbers until 10 o'clock brought the reception to an end. On leaving the parlors at 9 o'clock the bride, standing upon the upper landing of the stairway, tossed her beautiful bouquet into stairway, tossed her beautiful bouquet into the expectant throng of maidens waiting below: one form, just a triffe tailer than the others, straightened up as the bunch of roses downward fell and Miss Reynolds of Council Bluffs became the happy possessor of the tailsman which, if legand be true, chron-icles another wedding within the year. Changing her wedding gown for a dark trav-eling dress, the bride and groom left the eling dress, the bride and groom left the house by the rear entrance and were driven to the Union depot where they took a Kansas City train, which had been held for them for an hour. After a short wed-ding journey they will return and on November i, be at home to their friends at 404 Lowe avenue, north.

The presents were displayed in the billiard room in the third story and were wonder-fully handsome, cut glass and silver predom-inating. A large bowl of Cape Jasmine from Houston, Tex., gave out a langourous odor which was very suggestive of the south

Refreshments were served in the dining room and library, which were elaborately decorated for the occasion, the house throughout showing that nothing was left undone that might assist in making the wedding the leading event of the social eason of 1891-9. While it would be impossible to give a com-plete list of the guests present at the recep-tion there were noticed in attendance: General and Mrs. Brooke, Mr. and Mrs. Ben Wood, Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Dunn and Trenerry. On last Tuesday evening at St. Philo-mena's cathedral Mr. N. P. Trenerry, a well known and popular young business man of this city, was married to Miss Sarah Dunn, Rev. Father McCarty officiating. Miss Dunn is also a resident of Omaha, and has for a number of years been a popular sales-woman of the Morse Dry Goods company and has a wide circle of friends.

Immediately after the conclusion of the ceremony the newly wedded couple repaired to the residence of Mr. and Mrs. A. L.

Cooper, where about twenty-five of their friends awaited them. A bountiful repast, consisting of all of the good things of the season, had been prepared under the direction of Mrs. Cooper, and was accorded ample justice by the guests present. The festivi-ties were continued until a late hour. Among the many handsome and costly presents, too numerous to mention, were a beautiful China tea set and a set of fine table linen, the last named being presented by the employes of the Morse Dry Goods company. Mr. and Mrs. Trenerry will at once begin housekeeping at 2016 Charies street, where their friends are assured of a hearty wel-

One of the prettiest weddings ever witnessed in Omaha took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. C. B. Moore last Tuesday evening. The happy couple were Miss Irene
ceremony, which was most imposing, was performed by Dr. Duryes in the pretty parlors of the Moore residence on Capitol avenue. The rooms were a veritable bower. Eare oriental paims and trailing vines enveloped the pictures and brie-a-brao and hung in sinuous, graceful loops from the walls. Lamps with rainbow-tinted shades threw a miid, effuigent glamor over the scene, which was simply bewitching. Messrs. Maurice Duryea and Clinton Mills acting as ushers was simply bewitching. Messrs, Maurice Duryea and Clinton Mills acting as ushers and led the way at the appointed hour, followed by the bridesmaids, Miss Margaret Moore and Miss Mary Duryea. Next followed Mr. Weish and Mrs. Moore, then the bride, who never looked more lovely, leaning on her father's arm. The bride was arrayed in a white Japanese crepe, with an imperial train. Miss Margaret Moore was gowned in yellow crepe, trimmed with morningglories. Miss Mary Duryea wore a figured cream crepe, The effect was exquisite. Those present were Judge and Mrs. Lake, Mr. and Mrs. and Miss Burns, Miss Mal Burns, Miss Bell, Miss Dresser, Dr. and Mrs. Duryea, Miss Kelly, Miss Perine, Mr. and Mrs. Runehart, Mr. and Mrs. Perine, Mr. and Mrs. Klison, Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Smith, Miss Helen Smith, Mr. Bert Downs, Mr. Fosbenner, Mr. Risk.

On Wednesday Mr. and Mrs. Welsh left for Evanston where they will reside. for Evanston where they will reside.

Celebrated Their Wooden Wedding. Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Bryson, 629 Georgia avenue, celebrated their wooden wedding Tuesday evening in a particularly pleasant manner. A number of old friends were invited in to assist in the celebration, which was marked by warm congratulations and well wishes for the future. High five was played by the guests, and, after a series of games, refreshments were served on wooden dishes in keeping with the occasion.

Kamm and Jenkins.

The many friends of Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Jenkins assembled at their home Wednesday evening in Villisca, Ia., to witness the marriage of their daughter Nanuene to Mr. A. G. Kamm of Sprague, Wash. The house was tastefully decorated with cut flowers and potted plants. In the north parlor was an arch of ferns and vines from which was suspended a floral bell and under which the marriage was solemnized.

Promptly at 8 o'clock the wedding march, played by Miss Minnie McNaughton heralded the approach of the bridal couple. The bride was charmingly sweet and girlish in a simple costume of white crepe de chine trimmed in soft filmy lace, her only ernaments being a cluster of Marcchiel Neil roses. The impressive ring ceremony was performed by Rev. Frank Campbell, after which many and sincere congratulations were offered.

A pretty feature of the evening was the serving of the refreshments, which were very fine, by young lady and gentlemen friends of the family. The bride is one of Villisca's best known young women, beloved by all and will be greatly missed. The groom is one of the rising young men of Sprague, whither they go to make their home followed by the hearty good wishes of all. Many and costly tokens of regard were re-Many and costly tokens of regard were received by the young couple. At 11:30 p. m. the whole party of fifty couples formed into line for the grand march, headed by Mr. Sage and ladies. Quite a number of neat figures brought the march to an end in the dining hall below, where a delicious supper was served.

Mrs. Warren Rogers, who was expected Mrs. Warren Rogers, who was expected home this month, is not improving to the extent hoped for, and she will remain with her family in Portland, Me., until November. While Mrs. Rogers is convalescing the recovery is so slow that her physician advises her to remain in the cast until cold weather. This will be a great disappointment to her many friends in Omaha, but they will be content with the thought that she is recovering tent with the thought that she is recovering from her severe illness which at one time threatened to terminate a beautiful life.

Miss Yost gave a delightful coaching party last Tuesday evening, in honor of the birds, as she said, but really in honor of Mr. Lyman of Salt Lake. After the drive, which included the park and the suberbs, dainty refreshments were served at Mr. and Mrs. Yost's. Those present were: Miss Mary Poppleton, Miss Chandler, Miss Mary Sherwood, Miss Doane, Miss Emily Wakeley, Miss McKenna Mr. Patrick, Mr. How, Mr. Doane, Mr. Guiou, Mr. Harry Lyman, Mr. J. Morseman, Mr. Augustus Kountze, Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Hall chaperoned the party.

character. The ivory heads, as a rule, are elaborately carved, and being expensive are restricted to fine trade. Natural woods are strong favorites, and are offered in their crude state or with silver applique work. In these sticks the tendency is slightly in favor of the crotch, though the knob is by no means declining in popular the finer mounts. The favorite woods for silver trimming are the Spanish birch, mediar furze, water ash, black oaks, wechsels, pimento, etc. These woods when trimmed with silver give the menal a background which greatly enhances its beauty; when trimmed with horn ends the woods are selected with an eye to har mony of color; thus dark sticks are used with smoked horns, etc., while the bleached horns are put on lighter colored sticks.

A Printer's Experience with the Colic. Last winter while working at the case in the composing room of the Des Moines Leader, I was taken with the worst case of cramp or printer's coile, I had ever had. I tried everything in the shape of medicine generally used in such cases, but they afforded me no relief. I sent for a back and was taken home. My wife sent immediately for a physician, who did everything in his for a physician, who did everything in his power to relieve my suffering, but I grew worse and worse. I suffered intense pain for two nights and a day; at the end of that time the doctor told me that unless relief came within two nours, I would be a dead man. I would rather die than suffer again what I did during those thirty-six long hours. I was convinced that my time had come. I have been subject to cramps or come. I have been subject to cramps or printer's colic for years, but always before had little trouble in obtaining relief, and never lost a full day's work on account of it before. But this time the old medicine all seemed to have no more effect than so much water. A neighbor who was present when the doctor stated that relief must come soon or there could be no hope for me, volunteered to procure me a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. I made no objection—I would have taken anything on which I could hang the slightest hope. Fifteen minutes after I had taken the first dose I felt easier, and inside of half an hour all pain had left me. I was cured. Now I keep a bottle of both colic and cough medicine in the house all the time, and would not be without it. I can honestly and conscientiously recommend it.

JAMES S. WILKINS,

Buffalo Bill's father, Isaac Cody, was one of the interesting characters of early Kansas. He was an Iowa farmer with a smattering of law, and when he moved over the border his rough eloquence made him a power in the Free State cause. He was dangerously stabbed in 1854 by one of a crowd of ruffianly "squatters," and his blood was the first to shed on behalf of freedom on the soil of the state that bled so much afterwards. Mr. Cody's tent is said to have been the first that was pitched in Kansas by a regular settler, and on the site of it he afterwards built a log house that was the boyhood home of his famous son bill, then a child of seven or famous son Bill, then a child of seven or eight years.

The Latest Conundrum. Why is Haller's Sarsaparilla and Burdock like the most popular soap of the day. Because they both cleanse the skin and leave it both soft and velvety.
