at the Kansas City Reunion.

CETTYSBURG TOWN AND CEMETERY.

A Tribute to California's Preacher Patriot-Another to the Loyal Women of America-Various Events.

Hon. John L. Webster of Omaha addressed the veterans assembled at the interstate reunion in Kansas City on September 10. He reviewed the armies of Europe, told of the enormous expense thus incurred by the different governments and contrasted them with our own, and stated that if any government on earth ever levies war against this government the imaginary lines between the porth and the south would be lost and federal and confederate would as brothers rush to the defense of the flag. He dwelt at length on the happy condition thus insured. He gave a graphic description of a battle and dwelt at length upon the comparatively small and insignificant sum paid for pensions compared to the awful risks and experience of war which were among the soldiers' duties.

He followed this with a beautiful portrayal descriptive of Niagara and the flag, as for-

"Some time ago a correspondent gave a description of Niagara Falls as seen under the electric light. As he looked over the edge of the chasm a single electric light was play-ing on the edge of the fall, converting it into a mass of moving snow, whose dazzling whiteness rolled on with awful and majestic grandeur. The mist that arose from the whirlpools below tooked weird and ghastly, and assumed most fantastic shapes. As he stood enraptured, a lessening of the brillinney of the act changed the aspect of the scene. The water now seemed liquid glass and moved as mechanically and looked as unreal as any cataract on the mimic stage. Sud-denly the manipulator of the light on the diff slides a sheet of rose-colored glass before his lamp. The scene became ensanguined, and now it is a scene of blood, that roars and hisses and seeths as though it was the gorge of murdered nations, crying today, demanding the vengeance of heaven. The light is arranged to take in the brink and upper part of the falls, and then one shaded blue converts the foam into bolling and uncanny shapes. The next instant a flood of white is projected between the red and the blue, and the great waterfall becomes the grandost representations of that banner of bravery, the American flag, ever seen by mortal eye. As the gazer looks upon that ecstatic scene his heart is filled with rapturous joy, and he almost imagines himself in some fairy land, at the mercy of some geniiof delusion who captivate and enraptures

"Thus America's grandest piece of natural scenery, colored by the art of man, becomes the grandest representation of American liberty that mind can fancy. The assemblage filled with patriotic sentiment at the beaut and sublimity of the scene rent the air with their applause; yet it was nothing compared with that nigher patriotic fervor which thrilled the hearts of you old soldiers as you looked upon that banner on the day of battle and marched underneath its sweeping folds from victory to victory.

"I would have the future ages fashion that flag in bronze as the foundation of their faith. I would have it painted in the pictures of bereditary glory, as the emblem of departing dynastics. I would have it floating in pagan ands, as the emblem of a coming higher civ-ilization. I would have it floating from the palaces of kings as the sign of coming republies. I would have it waving from the mountain tops that all in the valleys may see its shining glory. I would have it the chosen emblem that all races and tongues and all classes and colors may look to it as the sign of a universal freedom. I would have it the flag of the world, when all men shall know no law but the will of the people. When the centuries shall roll by as far in the future as bave that banner floating over the great and still existing American republic."

This was followed by his story called the "Legend of the Moon."

"The character and strength of the nations of the earth may be told by their national music. 'God Save the Queen' has the sound of heredity rulers and kingly power. The 'Marseilles Hymn' has the tremor of an exciting and vascillating people.

citing and vascillating people.

'The 'Star Spangled Banner' keeps time to the beating of 60,000,000 patriotic hearts, with liberty as its drum major.
"There is a legend that the richest music the earth had been gathered in a horn by a guardian goddess of the world and then lost amid the ice floes of the north. The cold of the Arctic regions congealed the music there. The horn became released after ages by the breaking away of the icebergs. The moving tide carried it out into the sea. The whalers of the north heard strange muffled notes coming from the depths of the waters, but could distinguish them not. The horn floated southward into warmer channels, and more freely came the music. Iceland heard its national airs, cold and chilly, and Greenland heard hers coming from the sea. Lap land and Sweden, too, heard the ocean giving up the music of their people. As the horn floated southward into summer climes more freely came the music gathered there. Eng-

Boils and Pimples Are nature's efforts to eliminate poison from the blood. This result may be accomplished much more effectually, as well as agreeably through the proper excretory channels, by the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla. "For several years I was troubled with boils and carbuncles. In casting about for a remedy, it occurred to me that Ayer's Sarsaparilla had been used in my father's family, with excellent success, and I thought that what was good for the father would also be good for the son. Three or four bottles of this medicine entirely cured me, and I have not since—in more than two years—had a boil, pimple, or any other eruptive trouble. I can conscientiously speak in the highest terms of Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and many years' experience in the drug business enland's mariners heard the tune of 'God Save the Queen,' but it had the air of past ages and a departed glory. The horn floated west-ward toward the American coast, where the warm sun of liberty drove away the chill of ages, and the horn gave forth the aweetest music the guardian goddess had stored there-in. It is now playing the tune that cheers the mighty hosts of freedom. It is the air that stirs the grestest people of the earth. Its every note touches the heart of a mighty nation. It is America's song of the 'Star Spangled Banner,'

"God Bless our Home!"

Story of Gettysburg. Major J. D. Kleutsch, editor of the Freis Presse, an enterprising German paper at Lincoln, was a captain in the Eighty-second Illinois infantry at the battle of Gettysburg, and was a participant in the thickest of the fight. He was in Washington last week on his way home from the battle field where he witnessed the dedication of monuments marking the positions of his regiment in the battle. "On the second day of the battle," said he to your correspondent, "and while we were fighting in the very heart of the town of Gettysburg, and while the shot and shell were flying and falling thick as hall and men were filling the streets with their dead and wounded bodies, a lady rushed from a house and screaming at the top of her voice became panic-stricken. She was wild with Iright, and soon came into my lines. I went to her and told her, as caimly as I could, that if she did not get below ground she would surely be shot; that she had better go into her house and take refuge in her cellar. It re-quired persistent effort to get her out of the range of bullets. The next day I passed her ouse, saw it was riddled with bullets, and hat the floors were covered with dead or dying soldiers. It looked as though no living soul could have withstood the ordeal of that storm of lead in that house. "Well," continued Major Kluetsch, "when I went to Gettysburg yesterday I had a curiosity to see if that bullet ridden house was yet standing. The face of the country around the town is about the same, but the changes in buildings have made things generally look very different from what they did during the great battle. I finally found the corner, then the house. There it stood, repaired, but the same house, nevertheless. I entered, and found that it was a boarding house. You know Gettysburg, with about three thousand inhabitants now, is but a great boarding house and hotel. It entertains and sells war relies to the thousands who visit the battle field every month in the year. I recognized every room in the house, and could see in my mind where and how the dead and dying lay, A lady came in, and I told her that simple curiosity had led me into the place. Thenel related the incident of the frightened lady who ran out of that house and was courting death when I drove her into the cellar for protection. After listening to my story she asked me to linger a moment, saying there was one person about the house who would be glad to see me. She returned in a moment to say, there is Mrs Harper herself, and present the very woman Well, there was a fine lunch for me, and another expression of thanks for the rescue The woman's husband was the editor of the village newspaper at the time of the battle. She is a widow now, and boards the boys who go to view the field of blood and car-

Hello, Old Forty. "Heilo, old Forty!" shouted one comrade to another at the reunion and then, though strangers, they fell on each other and shook hands till it is a wonder their arms were not unjointed, while they talked of this battle and that, how they charged the enemy on the mountain here and retreated behind the earthworks there, says the Kansas City Star. Then with crutch and cane, they had but two legs between them-they began to draw miniature lines of battle. "Our right lay just here-" "Yes, and there's where we came to your upport. Gosh; but that was a charge to re-"And I had a flesh wound and dropped from loss of blood behind a log close to this little run and a big shell came along and tore off this leg-" "Why, good lord, old man, I was right over here behind that big meetin' house when a measiv cannon ball tore through the corner a measly cannon ball tore through the corner of that house and relieved me of my right arm—Lord, who'd a-thought it, now! Why, I'd rather meet one of you follows that fought with me there than to get an addition to my pension, blamed if I wouldn't. Say, comrade, it won't be long till we are mustered out for keeps, will it! The old Black Eagle will be glad to see us a-comin', though." And then the two grizzled veterans fell to shaking hands again and stumped off together, wining their eyes.

off together, wiping their eyes. The tie between them was a bit of flanel, One wore it at the top of his soldier cap and the other on his left breast. It was a mintature cartridge box on a square with the mot-to '40 rounds' on it. It was the badge of the Fifteenth army corps, commanded by General Logan, the "Black Eagle" of Illinois. The way that badge originated was this: A man from another corps had been transferred from the Fifteenth and asked what the badge of the new corps was. The fact of the matter was it had no badge at that time, but one of the men said, "Here it is," slapping his cartridge box, "here's all the badge we need—forty rounds. We have orders to carry forty rounds in our cartridg boxes and we always do," and that was adopted as the corps badge.

An Illinois Veteran. Colonel W. H. Young, who may be said to be the father of the interstate reunion held at Kansas City says the Star, was a loyal Tennesean, and though nothing but a boy ran away from home and went to Illinois, where he calisted in the three months service in '61. Ail his people were on the "other side" of the question and in the twenty-five battles in which he participated he was fighting some of his relatives and friends all the time. He had many curious experiences, was captured twice and both times made his escape, and was hanged once by confederates till he saw stars, but they relented and ates till he saw stars, but they relented and let him down.

Colonel Young was wounded five times yet he came out of the war perfectly sound in body, excepting the loss by a rifle shot of the end of his right forefinger, being shot on the finger and the left thigh almost simultaneously. He was mustered out of service and to 1867 lear that same sight and in 1865, and in 1867 lost that same right hand n a railroad accident at Lawrence. He is called the "one armed soldier," a distinction he does not crave. The soldier part is all right, but the other didn't come from the war and it annoys the colonel to think that people think so. He is a genial, whole-souled man, much esteemed by the "comrades," and loves to talk over the old days with the boys. "We've forgiven the rebels, every mother's son of 'em," he says with a twinkle in his eye, "and I don't fight any more over old issues, but we don't have to forget; when the boys who bore the brunt of the battle are gone, the world will do the forgetting fast enough."

Richard Knowles, the sailor who lasked Farragut to the rigging of the Hartford at the battle of Mobile Bay, says that after he had taken a turn or two with the ratline, the old admiral gruffly asked him what he was about, and upon being told by Knowles that the captain had directed him to make the at-miral fast, the latter said: "O, all right;" and helped to fasten the lines about himself.

The favorable impression produced on the first appearance of the agreeably liquid fruit remody Syrup of Figs a few years has been more than confirmed by the pleasant experience of all who have used it, and the success of the proprietors and manufacturers of the California Fig Syrup company.
