ED CORRIGAN'S LATEST MOVE.

He Procures the Arrest of the Jockeys on a Rival Track.

NEW PHASE OF THE CHICAGO WAR.

More Trouble Expected Today-Results at Gravesend and Latonia-Base Ball Scores and General Sporting News.

Curcano, Ill., Sept. 25.-Immediately after the last race at Garfield park today nine lockeys were arrested charged with violating the city ordinance prohibiting the racing and riding of race horses within 400 feet of a public boulevard. Their names are: Hoggett, Higgias, Hennessy, Keith, Weber, Griffin, Juckson, Monoban and Easley. Bookmaker Al Hankins was also served with a state warrant charging him with gambling. The warrants were sworn out by Joseph W. Hamlin, an attorney of Hyde Park, a southern suburb. All of the boys and Hankins at once appeared before the justice of the peace and were builed out.

This move was not wholly unexpected as quiet rumors had been circulated for several days that such action would be taken. It is not definitely known who instigated these proceedings, but it is supposed to be the outcome of trouble with Corrigan and the Haw-thorne track. More trouble of a similar nature is expected tomorrow.

WHO RUNS THE PAXTON HOTEL

Question Which the District Court Has Bren Asked to Umpire.

ONE OF THE LANDLORDS ENJOINED.

Story of a Row Which Has Long Been Brewing-What the Parties to the Suit Say.

An atmosphere of expectancy and supressed excitement pervaded the rotunda of the Paxton last evening. The unusual crowd present seemed to have an idea that there was something unannounced on the programme and it didn't want to miss it. The storm clouds that have been gathering in the vicinity of the hotel office for several days past finally broke and for a number of hours several people thereabouts were very much n doubt as to whether they were on earth or in the drink.

The difficulty was the culmination of a more or less lively disagreement of several months' standing between the proprietors of the hotel, Henry A. Eastman and Thomas C. Brainard, and yesterday's row was the final struggle for supremacy. At nightfall Brainard was on top by several inches, but Eastman was reinforced by a deputy sheriff with a court writ at 8:30, and at the hour when nocturnal revellers are wont to roll homeward he had gained several laps on his competitor and was smiling over the counter with the air of a man who has a good thing in a double grip and knows that ne has a cinch on the good graces of the fickle goddess.

Both Wanted the Desk.

The battle opened in the afternoon with a flank movement on the part of Brainard and his son Clint, who appeared behind the counter and endeavored to take possession of the cashier's desk. Eastman demurred while young Brainard fingered nervously in

"Oh, yon've got a gun, have you?" queried the man who was trying to hold the fort.
"Yes, I've got two of 'em," was the reply,
"and I'll use 'em if you don't get out of

Mr. Eastman also tried the nervous finger act, and Bramard imagined that he saw a knife, so he called it horse and horse and resolved to fight it out without artificial assistance. He pushed Eastman away several times, and finally poked him a moderate jolt in the ribs. It landed right over Mr. Eastman's tenderest lung, and while he was meditating on what had better be done, Brainard siid up to the desk and ordered the cashier, Miss Hattie Moshier, to get out. She declined, when he intimated that unless she promptly complied with his invitation he would be compelled to toss her over the counter. At this juncture Mr. Eastman again stepped up and said that aithough he got too old to fight some twenty or thirty years ago, and would not court a hand to hand encounter, he wouldn't tolerate any such conduct as young Mr. Brainard proposed, and further said he guessed the young lady needn't go.

Lasted All Afternoon. A guest stepped up just then to settle his bill, and Brainard gladly turned away to a pleasanter occupation. He refused to leave the desk and there he stayed all the long afternoon and into the evening. Eastman tarried near by, while the clerks looked after the comfort of the guests regardless of the trouble that was engaging the attention of the proprietors.

Eastman put both the lady cashiers, Miss Mosher and Miss Jennie Gulder, on duty, but there was nothing for them to do. Young Brainard handled all the cash and kept charge of the books. Every time a guest stepped up to settle the young ladies moved over toward the window, but a sight of the cash was all they got, as Brainard would slip it into the cash drawer as soon as possible and would vouchsafe them no informa-tion whatever as to what was being done. Inquiry of the interested parties revealed the fact that Brainard's attorneys had ad-vised the move to protect his interests, and subsequent developments showed that Eastman's attorneys had not been idle. Enjoined the Brainards. At 8:30 o'clock Deputy Sheriff Tierney ap peared with a writ of injunction and sum-mons, which was served upon T. C. Brainard, Annie M. Brainard, his wife, and Clint T. Brainard, their son. It commanded them in ubstance to refrain from interfering in any way with the management or employes of the hotel, and forbidding them to remain there without paying their board and under the same conditions as other guests of the house. Brainard senior was sitting just outside the counter when the officer arrived. The the counter when the officer arrived. The young man was sitting at the cashier's desk eating his supper from a tray which had been taken to him by a waiter. Flastman's attorney demanded immediate compliance with the order of the court, and the Bramards insisted on remaining until their lawyer arrived. This concession was granted and Brainard junior continued to introduce mush and milk to his interior with one hand while he held up the writ for critical inspection with the other.

Brainard's attorney finally arrived and was closeted for several minutes in the pri vate office with his client. The pshot of i was that there was a change in the vicinity of the cashier's desk, and the Brainard con tingent went out into the night,
And so the initial round ended with first plood for Brainard and the first knock down

Why All I his is Thus.

The story leading up to last night's denoug-ment is a long one, and is but partially told in the pleading filed in Judge Wakeley's court last evening, although it fills fifty-three pages of type written manuscript. Briefly stated, i of type written manuscript. Briefly Standard bought the Paxton hotel, exclusive of the building, July 30, 1889, of the Kitchen Brothers Hotel company for $60,000, and leased the structure at an annual rental of $25,000, and the ad-joining annex of J. B. Kitchen at a rental of $5,000 per annum. The purchase price was to be $40,000 cash, and the joint note of the purchasers for $20,000 due in one and two years at 8 per cent interest. The $40,000 was paid as per agreement, and the business went on with Kittredge & Brainard at the Brainard had represented, it is alleged, that he had the necessary $20,000 in cash, when, as a matter of fact, so the pleading relates, he did not have to exceed $5,000, and he borrowed $10,000 from the Commercial National bank, and $5,000 on his personal note from J. B. Kitchen to make up his required part of the purchase price. The money was borrowed from the bank on two notes for $5,000 each, and he paid interest on both and a little of the principal on one until July 30, 1890, when he owed a note for $5,000 secured, and one for $4,110.56 unsecured. Then, the showing relates, he went to the bank and said he could not take up his paper, but that on the contrary he must have another $5,000 to pay his half of the $10,000 due the first of the year on the Kitchen Bros. Hotel company note. If they would advance him the money he would turn over the actual possession of his interest in the hotel, otherwise he would lose all he had in-vested and the bank would lose the nasceured sum of $4,110.56, which he would be unable to pay. Got More Accommodation.

The pleading alleges that "both Brainard and his wife did beseech and entreat the passident of the bank to arrange the matter with the directors, and finally in view of the granted." Brainard made a new note of $2,110.56 to cover the new $5,000 loan and the unsecured old one of $4,110.56, and it is alleged that he has had no actual possession of the hotel since July 30, 1830, and agreed then to find a purchaser as soon as possible for his encumbered interest in the property. Instead of this, it is alleged, he sought a purchaser for Kit-tredge's interest, and as the latter had be-come dissatisfied with Braisard and his way of doing business, he sold out to Mr. East-man October 1, 1890. Before the said it had been arranged with the bank that Kittredge should have full charge of Brainard's interest, as the bank's agent, end that the latter should handle no moneys and have pothing to do with that part of the business. When Eastman came in he took Kittrodge's place in this particular, and Brainard's connection with the botel was as a steward at a salary of $75 per month. Eastman paid Kittredge $35,000 for his interest, and assumed half of the remaining $10,000 due the Kitchen Bros. Hotel company July 30, 1891. J. B. Kitchen refused to assen to the change unless Brainard's personal note to him for $5,000, then amounting with interest to $5,411, was also cared for, so Mr. Eastman took up that note and became Brainard's creditor in that sum. They Then Foreclosed. Thus matters went on until last July when Brainard again went to the bank and said that he could not take up his notes there, at that time amounting to nearly $18,000, and must on the other hand have another $5,000 to pay off the last of the $20,000 in favor of the old hotel company. The bank folks concluded that they had gone far enough, and accordingly declined. gone far enough, and accordingly declined, and said that they would foreclose under their chattel mortgage, given them by Brain-ard a year before. This was done on July 29, and Brainard's half interest was sold under the hammer at the east door of the hotel to Rome Miller of Norfolk for $6,000. The bank then assigned the interest in the roperty to Miller in consideration of $1,425. subsequently Eastman & Miller took up the last half of the $20,000. This is the showing as to the financial operations that have been attendant on the ard a zear before

partnership,
Following this the petition accuses Mr. Brainard of various unsecurly actions in his personal conduct, and then goes on to say that after the sale had been made in accordance with law, after due publication of in-debtedness, Brainard refused to get out, although notified so to do, and denied a publication of dissolution of partnership pub-lished in the city papers. Regarding his conduct the document says:

When Brainard was notified that his services were no longer required he refused to discontinue his connections but remained there, interfer ng with the servants and business of plaintiff. He has threatened several times to playsically chastise and throw through the windows and doors any person whom plaintiffs employ to do the duties heretofore performed by him, and being a large man, did threaten in a loud and offensive manner to throw out of doors a man comparatively small in size left, there by Miller as his representative. Brainard has also threatened if plaintiffs enforce their rights to destroy the business of the note, and on September 23 threatened, if disturbed, to prevent the cooking and service of meals and thereby injure and destroy the business of the plaintiffs and of said hotel. He also loudly asserted that he would receive no supplies unless purchased by himself. When Brainard was notified that his seress purchased by himself.

The showing closes with a recital of the demonstration made by Brainard and his son yesterday afternoon at the notel.
For these reasons the plaintiff, Eastman, prayed for the issuance of the writ granted sum of $1,000 by the plaintiff. All of the interested parties evinced a willingness to talk, and neither was at all backward in denouncing the conduct of the other.

What the Parties Say.

Said Mr. Eastman: "The papers filed in court tell the principal facts in the case. Brainard misrepresented his finances to his former partner, and went in so deep that he could not meet his paper, and the bank refused to carry him any longer. When I came in I was ignorant of the true state of affairs, and we have of the true state of affairs, and we have not agreed as to how the house should be run. He has drawn out $1,32.9! in the two years that he has been here; and his son has lived here for a year and never paid a cent of board. I found a fure game running in the house when I came in; and had hard work to get it stopped. Disreputable women have been brought here with the full knowledge of Brainard and of the true hear. Brainard and affairs have been so conducted as to injure the reputation of the house. I have put in $35,000, and Brainard put in only $5,000, and as Esaid before, has drawn ut more than that amount."

Mr. Brainard said that the trouble was the result of a put up job to freeze him out and divide the money that he was beaten out of, when he was really entitled to better treatment. He said that he put in $15,000 cash at the time of the original purchase, and soon thereafter paid his half of $15,000 expended for improvements. He declared that he had arranged to have Eastman's nepnew buy out Kittredge, but at the last moment the nephew could not come and had sent the old man, with whom he would never have otherwise made such a deal. He said Eastman was not a practical hotel man, and had no more money than he had, out got the money through his nephew from St. Paul loan institution. He insisted that Eastman couldn't hold trade, whereas he had made $22,000 in the hotel business at Kear-ney in four years. In fact, he was born in a hotel and had always lived in one.

RECOVERING FROM THE WAR.

BUSINESS PROSPECTS VERY FLATTERING.

Efforts Will Be Made to Increase Commercial Intercourse with the United States-Exports and Imports.

[Copyright 1891 by James Gardon Beneatt.]

VALPARATSO, Chilli (via Galveston, Tex.)

Sept. 25.- By Mexican Cable to the Herald-Special to True Ben |- Merchants in Valparaiso are looking forward to a gratifying revival of foreign trade. I have talked on this subject with nearly all the leading business men of this city. The general opinion was that while the revolution continued, the entire importing and exporting pusiness to and from the northern portion of the country, formerly conducted through Valparaise, was inter rupted. Shipments of breadstuffs and produce were made direct from Iquique and other ports held by the junta de gauterns. The loss of trade to Valparaiso entailed a great damage to the merchants of this city and the discontent aroused undoubtedly caused much of the secret opposition to the late President Balmaceda. Since the restoration of peace Valparaiso's trade has revived. The best proof of this is that since Baimaceda's government fell exchange has risen from ! to 22 pence, which shows the confidence of commercial circles in the new regime.

With promises of united political action among the party's leaders, merchants have no hesitation in believing that trade will soon be established on a firm and enduring basis, Imports from Great Britain, Germany and other European countries will surely preponderate under the new government as they did under the old. There does not appear to be much prospect for an increasing trade with the United States. Competition in this market by manufacturers in the United States of textile fabrics, with similar manufactures in Europe, is impossible. Lumber, a few lines of machinery, hardware, kerosene oil and lard are all needed here from the United States, but the exports to that country are almost nil owing to the fact that Chin's products are so nearly like those of that country. A little wool and nitrates in small quantities comprise most of the shipments to American ports, but there appears to be some hope of increasing the nitrate trade. There is also a prospect of extending the shipments of copper to the United States and low grade silver ores to the smelting works at Tacoma, Wash, In relation to the nitrate trade I learn that an agreement now exists between the various companies limiting the output from 18,000,000 to 20,000,000 quintals. This meets the present demand throughout the world. If the demand should increase the nitrate companies would of course put a new limit on the amount to be produced. Under the present agreement every company works its beds nine months each year, each selecting the period for work. Efforts will soon be made to push the sale of nitrates, not only in the United States, but also it China and Japan. So far as I can learn, the government has no immediate intention of disposing of its nitrate land in the province
