THE OMAHA BEE. NEWS FROM COUNCIL BLUFFS.

F OFFICE: - NO. 12 PEARL STREET. Story of the Alleged Swindle of Edmund Latham.

FAILED TO PAY THE JUDGMENTS.

Sixteen Hundred Dollars Borrowed to Relieve an Old Iowa Farmer, but it Went the Wrong Way.

Yesterday was the day set for the trial of P. J. McMahon on the charge of embezzlement. A great deal of interest is feit in this case from the fact that the defendent lived in Council Bluffs all the early part of his life, and still has many friends and acquaintances here. Edmund Latham, an aged farmer living in Hardin township, is the prosecuting witness. His story of the diffi-culty between himself and McMabon is substantially as follows:

Two judgments were secured against his property, aggregating $1,500. Latham wanted to pay off the judgments, and as no had not the necessary cash, he went to Mc-Mahon, who was then in the loan business in this city, and he had him negotiate a loan of $1,600. This loan was secured in May, 1886,

$1,000. This loan was secured in May, 1886, and McMahon was appointed as Latham's agent to pay off the judgments and have the property freed from encumbrance. Latham did not find out for some time that McMahon had gotten the money, but had failed to pay off the judgments, but as soon as ne learned of it he went to see McMahon, who at once acknowledged that he had appropriated the money. went to see McMahon, who at once acknowledged that he had appropriated the money, but promised to get it as soon as possible and put it to the use for which it was intended by Latham. The affair was allowed to drag along for several years, McManon putting Latham off with one pretext or another, until finally the case was brought before the grand jury and he was indicted for embezziement. For some time after the indictment nothing could be learned of his whereabouts, but he was finally located in Chicago abouts, but he was finally located in Chicago and brought to this city in the charge of Sheriff O'Neill to stand trial.

The case was brought up yesterday afternoon and Latham himself was the first witness. He proved not to be a very satisfactory one, either for the county attorney or for Attorney Baldwin, who appeared for the defendant. He was evidently afraid of giv-ing away something that might injure his case, and refused to answer many of the simplest questions that were put to him on cross-examination, with the result that the court had to interfere half a dozen times and compel him to answer. The antics of the witness and the consequent disgust of the attorney proved a vast source of amusement to the audience. Mrs. Latham, wife of the first witness, testified to the facts as they had been set forth in the indictment, and court then adjourned until this morning, when the taking of testimony will be re-

NEBRASKA POSTOFFICES.

Great Improvements That Have Been Made by Republicans.

Washington, Oct. 16. (Special to Tun BEE. |-The searching inquiries that the post office department has been making with re spect to the successes, if any, that have been accomplished by the postmasters in different parts of the country, show the following re-sults with regard to Nebraska:

Henry J. Streight, postmaster of Plattsmouth, has paid great attention to any complaints that have been made and has used great efforts to remove the irregularities, The postoffice has been moved from a dark room to light, cheerful ones, and the different windows are more accessible. The postmaster has personally spent about $300 for these better accommodations. There is considerable demand at Plattsmouth for free delivery, but the population is not yet anfficient. Mr. Streight is rather sorry that the inspectors do not have time to vi-it him oftener, as he might possibly be able to profit by their advice.

At Hastings, J. B. Heartwell rearranged his office so that the work could be done to better advantage and induced the owners of the building to give him additional room without extra cost. Postmaster Heartwell collected a fine directory for the carriers so that as few letters as possible might remain undelivered, and got up a list also of all persons who were likely to receive mult through the boxes. The result is that practically all mail matter can be delivered without any delay and hardly any has to be advertised. Hastings certainly helps to decrease the dead letter list. The postmaster advertises what we have to be advertised at his own expense. The local papers take a great interest in the service and in that way greatly help to improve it. A bulletin announcing the arrival of mail trains, and saying whether they are late or not, is put up in the front of the office. H. G. Walcott brought to his duties at Frenont the experience and enterprise of a busi less man. He spent twelve or fourteer hours a day at the first mastering the details of his office. He made the money order business hours the same as banking hours. The carriers have no other work than that of delivering and collecting, and hence are enabled to give the business part of the town more frequent service. Two city papers publish the list of undelivered letters, which, however, is small. In a general way the city papers are of great assistance.

It is found by the department that C. H. Gere, postmaster at Lincoln, has carefully organized his office from the beginning. The organized his office from the beginning. The advertised list of letters has greatly decreased by the employment of a very efficient directory clerk. Seven additional carriers have been put on and the carrier routes cover, for the first time within the history of the city, the entire corporate limits of the city, with sometimes as many as four deliveries a day. The money many as four deliveries a day. The money order service has not made an error. After two or three attempts an entirely satisfactory clerk was put in charge of the registry di-

The investigations show that T. S. Clark son, postmaster at Omaha, has greatly systemized the work in the Omaha office. He has held his chiefs responsible, and by court ing investigations has reduced the number o complaints of irregularities in the service to a minimum. Postmaster Clarkson devotes his entire time to the office, mixing with the employes and inspiring them with his own spirit. He has made close connections with spirit. He has made close connections with all the trains, and by talking with business men, editors and citizens, has gathered many good ideas. Not long ago the postmaster received 250 complimentary references to his service, and many personal calls to the same effect. Seven clerks and sixteen carriers have been added to the force. The local postofile news and the frequent articles of interest published by the local papers greatly enhance the value of the office. Postmaster Clarkson is known to have a very efficient force about him.

to have a very efficient force about him.

J. M. Glasgow of South Omaha distinguished himself the first thing by buying for some $400 what his predecessor had tried to get $1,800 for. Mr. Glasgow took a pleas-anter room in a new brick block. New star route service in the neighborhood was put in operation, and new service between the post office and the railroad station was put on Mr. Glasgow, it is evident, has proceeded on the right principle, for as he is responsible duct of his office it is proper that he should have a loyal force about him, and this he has surely secured.

SHE WAS CAUGHT STEALING. Young Woman Kleptomaniae Sup-

Presbrey, one of the wealthiest and brightest students of Smith college, was detected in the act of robbing one of her college mates Wednesday and now has disappeared under circumstances that point strongly to suicide. For some time her schoolmates had been missing small sums Monday she was detected taking money from the pocketbook of a classmate. She was summoned before the president, and finally broke down and acknowledged the theft She said she did not know why she did it as she had plenty of money of her own and her father never stinted her in anything. Then she was requested to meet the presi-dent that afternoon at 5 o'clock, when it was supposed her father would be on hand. When he came she had disappeared. In her room was found a note addressed to father saying she could not live to be a disgrace. This May Prove Important. BALTIMORE, Md., Oct. 16,-Marshal Frey is following up the Ordway story and has expressed to the chief of police of Chicago a gold pin which he obtained from Mrs. Watts, the aged mother of Mrs. Ordway, and which Ordway had given his wife. It is believed to have been stolen at the time of the Snell murder. The pin, which is of solid gold, is shaped like a shield and bears on its face the monogram, "A. F. S." On the back are the initials, "E. S. L." If this pin is identified as the property of the murdered millionaire, the police will believe Mrs. Ordway's story. A. J. Stone says he knows nothing of any pin belonging to Mr. Snell having been stolen at the time of the murder. He was not disposed to give any credit to the story at all and said when the pin arrived he would examine it and investigate the matter hough at present he had nothing to say in regard to the matter.
