

HAD TOO MUCH HARD MUSCLE.

Iowa University Boys Too Big and Strong for the Nebraska Team.

VERY PRETTY BUT ONE SIDED GAME.

Galant Fight Made by the Eleven from Lincoln Against Odds They Could Not Overcome—Defeat Not Disgrace.

VICTORY perches upon the banners of Iowa.

There was probably a crowd of 2,500 people, and a brilliant and enthusiastic crowd it was, assembled at the ball park yesterday afternoon to witness the great interstate football match, between the teams of the Iowa and Nebraska universities.

The day was an ideal one for the sport, being neither too warm nor too cold, but that even temperature best calculated for successful play. The sky was overcast with a film of leaden clouds, rendering the light of that mellow character, best suited for the visual organs when put to a prolonged and severe strain.

As early as an hour and a half past 2 the grounds were fairly swarming with the excited followers of the two teams, and at the commencement of hostilities the scene was a picturesque one indeed. Lining the west limit line was phalanx after phalanx of men and boys, while in the rear of these a stream of vehicles, from the cumbersome tally-ho down to the tandem dog cart, filled with fair women and brave men, all bedecked in gay colors, which lent much light and life to what might otherwise have been considered a very somber Rembrandt.

One drawback to the situation was that both colleges brought to the field a lot of old gold—making it an impossibility, so far as the crowd went, to distinguish friend from foe. Again, it is but just to chronicle that the arena had not been established yesterday, let the blame fall on whomsoever it may, about the staid and most unimpassioned of the two teams.

It was simply a case of being out-clasped, and the big, strapping Nebraska boys, demonstrating their supremacy in all the details that go toward furnishing a close and stubborn contest, and it required no expert in the intricacies of the game to see why the old gold of Iowa City flaunted proudly and triumphantly in the autumnal breezes, while the Nebraska boys, who were bedecked in the dust, the Nebraska boys were overmatched and outplayed from the first shriek. Referee Dan McLaughlin, who whistle until the meloch reached a termination in the gathering shades of evening.

It was the colored half back, the Lincoln brigade has a player of whom any eleven may be proud. A man of heroic mould, with muscles like iron, and a head that is a level head and a pair of legs on him that are as capable of covering ground with a speed that might frighten a hare as they are of covering ground with the measureless prairie. But it is not to Philip alone to whom all the credit belongs for the stalwart resistance Nebraska made.

New Haven's Brawny Athletes Proved Their Superiority at Every Point—How the Great Battle Was Won.

MANHATTAN FIELD, NEW YORK, Nov. 26.—The greatest athletic event of the year so far, Yale and Princeton have fought their battle for supremacy on the foot ball field, and long will it be remembered by the thousands who saw one of the finest games ever played in this country.

On the two opposing lines the boys face each other again, and when the ball is passed and the air is in motion, the rushing orange and black, and the lively Homans catches the ball, and with a burst he is down by the opposing line.

It was a fight on its merits, the better team won, and the better lost will pay over his cash knowing that he had an honest run for his money.

The gates were not opened until 10 o'clock but by that time great throngs of persons had gathered about the different entrances. When the gates were opened there was a rush that would have done credit to the members of either eleven.

As the men line up on the far north boundary of the field, McCormick grins fifteen feet toward the crowd, and the crowd is well up toward Princeton's twenty-five yard line. Illias makes a wild rush toward Princeton's line, but there is no gain.

With the ball in play again, Homans works a clean cut, and after the man line on Flint makes a gain of fifty yards. Then the ball flies back to Homans, who is sure as fate, kicks it well into Yale's territory into McCormick's hands, forty yards down the field.

At 1:30 every available space about the field was occupied. Every seat on the different stands was occupied. On the long line of tall-haired students, who were of different colors and blowing long and particularly villainous sounding horns.

Confirmation of the Reports of Killing of Minister Cornejo by a Pecker.

VALPARAISO, Chile (via Galveston, Tex.), Nov. 26.—[By Mexican Cable to the New York Herald.—Special to The Bee.]—The local papers today confirm the news which I published yesterday of the shooting of Balmaceda by the minister of Finance, Juan Cornejo, who was trying to escape into the Argentine Republic through the Cordillera pass. It is rumored that his family declare that he was deliberately killed.

Some time ago Balmaceda made a proposition to establish a nurse station at Laica Viator, in the province of Valparaiso, Chile. Correspondent Thompson of the London Times was also interested in it during his last visit here. It was a town lot scheme. It is rumored now that he is engaged in writing articles opposing the same scheme.

Minister Egan and other Americans were entertained today aboard the Baltimore, by the honor of Thanksgiving day. Bad races were included in the entertainment. Minister Egan was loudly cheered by the crew of the Baltimore. The United States steamer Yorktown has just been sighted from here.

Land Commissioner Carter Joins Issue With Secretary Blaine.

CHANGING THEIR PRESENT METHODS.

Why It Would Be Preferable to Permit Old Members to Continue to Act Until After the Election.

WASHINGTON BUREAU OF THE BEE.

Land Commissioner Carter joins issue with Secretary Blaine over the proposition to continue to act until after the election in office after the presidential candidate has been chosen. When the national committee called on Mr. Blaine the other day Mr. Blaine said that from the present gathering of representative republicans from all over the country, they had obtained much information which could be of great value to them in conducting the forthcoming national campaign.

That is a great pity," said the secretary, and he then went on to give reasons why it would be an excellent policy to change the present method and hereafter let every national committee, instead of expiring by limitation when the new candidates were nominated, continue to act until after the election. Having worked together for four years, the members of the committee have much knowledge of each other, and it is not possible to strike the committee very favorably and it is not possible that a proposition will be made at the next convention to make the committee permanent.

Not a practical idea. "Mr. Blaine's idea may be very good on the surface," said he, "but it would not work in practice. The national committee would be made up of the same men, which holds over may have affiliation with some particular candidate who is not the choice of the national convention, and in that case the committee would not give the support which a committee chosen with special respect to his nomination would give. It is not the duty of a national committee in office, for so long as it has a position to speak adversely on the subject.

"Mr. Dudley, for instance, who was treasurer of the executive committee of the national convention, and who was not a member of the national committee but was chosen because of his special fitness for the position, is not a member of the national committee." "Mr. Blaine is not likely to be carried out if the politicians accept Mr. Carter's theory.

There was a sudden wild deluge of shouts and blowing of horns and waving of flags when the two teams were seen to crystallize out of the scattered lot of players, and line up in the middle of the big gridiron. Then each man bent his knees and with his hands on his knees and gazed hard at his opposite, the noise as suddenly stopped, and every one of those eyes was focussed on one little spot where the ball was.
