Economy in Fuel.

Chicago Tribune: "Don't take much coal to run a machine nowadays, ' said Panhandle Dan, partly to himself and partly to "the gang" in the roundhouse, after studying intently a blue print upon the grimy bulletin board, upon which was set forth the number of pounds and decimals of a pound of coal burned per mile run by each engine on this division in the month of July. "Git so by-and-by," he continued, after a final scrutiny of the blue print, "that a few matches and the glow of the engineer's nose will make steam enough to take a train over a division.

"It's a sin the way these fellers waste good cash testin' fuel savin' devices," argued The Corpse. "What they spend in experiments would pay every one of us 10 cents a mile and have money left. And these schemes to save coal don't amount to anything; I've tried it myself."

Good management generally pays good "You?" exclaimed the gang in chorus

"Yes, me," returned The Corpse. I've got my patent to show for it over at the boarding house, too. Now I knowed that with the powerful draught of a locomotive a big percentage of the coal goes out through the stack in gas and half burned cinders and is wasted, so I goes to work to figger out how to stop that waste at the front end. It didn't take long, and it was the simplest thing in the world. I laid my plan be fore the master mechanic and he equip ped an engine with one of my patents right off. All we did was to extend the glut then causes low prices. Laying smokestack by means of a couple of elhens should be encouraged by the use of bows back over the boiler. down animal food, ground shells, and bones, through the roof of the cab and into the and kept in warm quarters. Give them fire-box again. According to my theory all you had to do was to put in a fire and the smoke would jest keep a goin' and a-goin' through that circuit until it was all consumed."

"And did it work that way?" "Worked too well. When we got the darned thing started once we could never git her stopped so's to cool her off for washing out and repairs. One fire kept that engine redhot until she jest wore out and went to pieces like the onehoss shay."

Intense excitement reigned for two minutes. Then Rainbow Chase, deciding after mental calculation that there was no possible chance of borrowing a chew of tobacco from Panhandle Dan, remarked:

"Arizona's the place to save fuel. Down there on the N.G. in that sand the sun shines hot enough to keep an engine sizzin' all day without using a shovelful

"La Cigale," an operatic success in Paris and London, seems to have caught on in New York and has settled down for a winter's run. Next season we may hope to see it out west.

the year, and gives rural workers a long period for physical recuperation and mental improvement. The season has been a remarkably favorable one for terraculturists, who have not only been vouchsafed abundant crops, but most propitious weather for securing the same in good condition. Moreover, the prospect that the prices of most farm products will advance for months to come is very encouraging. Producers should now study how grains, fruits and vegetables can best be kept until they can be more profitably marketed. The saving, protection and economical feed-ing of forage crops are also matters of vital importance to every would-be prosperous husbandman, and those who devote thereto thoughtful and good management can hardly fail of being liberally rewarded. Winter is the sen son for toil tillers to read about, investigate and discuss these and other branches of rural economy, the right understanding of which may materially promote their progress and prosperity

Storing and Marketing Produce. Farmers who have stored their staple crops safely, are advised to "make haste slowly" in marketing the same. In ordinary seasons it is considered good policy to sell rather than keep most kinds of farm produce. But this is an exceptional year-one in which American farmers have the very rare combination of large crops and advancing prices. The foreign demand for our grain and meat (notably wheat, pork and beef) will not only increase the prices of those staples, but have a tendency to enhance the value of farm products generally. Hence, producers located near or within easy access to a fair market, and who can keep grains, apples, potatoes and vegetables from one to four or more months, without material loss or deterioration, will probably be gainers by so doing. But those who hold their pro duce for better prices must store it with unusual care and guard against loss from decay, undue shrinkage, the ravages of vermin, etc. By the way, it is surprising how many of our farmers, after toiling for months and taking special pains, lose much or all of their profits by either negligence in storing or carelessness in packing shipping or marketing their most valuable staples. Such mistakes in management are discreditable, and withal expensive. Surely people who possess brains enough to produce good crops ought to be shrewd enough to dispose of them profitably. The true course is to keep posted about markets, prices and prospects, to avoid middlemen and speculators, and to deal with principals whenever practicable.

Farm Buildings.

Last month our readers were advised to put their farm buildings in condition to withstand a long and inclement sea-son, and now that winter has come we urge the necessity of this upon all delinquents in the matter. What was then said about providing for the warmth and comfort of both man and beast is even more important at this juncture, with an increasingly frigid temperature; therefore all who have not yet protected their dwellings and outbuildings against the searching cold and Borean blasts that always attend the march of the icy monarch should do so right speedily Having provided for the comfort and convenience of the family by putting the dwelling in order for winter, next see that the barns, stables, piggeries, poultry houses, etc., are in such condition as to render their inmates warm and comfortable, and which will alike save forage and prevent suffering. But while securing the requisite warmth and comfort for loved Betsy and the bables at home, and the valuable but less cherished pets in stable and other plants need daily airing when the temperature is not very frigid, as injury is more likely to come from too much heat than too much cold. Note that house cellars used for storing fruit and vegetables should connect with a chimnev, if possible, for ventilation. Horse radish may be had all winter if dug early this month, and stored in a box of earth in the cellar. So long as the ground remains open much may be accomplished toward manipulating and enriching garden ground for the profitable production of crops next season Bear in mind that whatever work can be done now as plowing, spading, replacing glass, repairing sashes and shutters for hot-beds, cold frames, etc.will facilitate operations next spring, and be governed accordingly. Other Timely Matters.

The ice crop will ripen soon, and it behooves every one who needs the frigid commodity-and it is a necessity many farmers, especially those engaged in dairying-to arrange for securing a supply. Ice costs only the labor of harvesting and storing, and those near ponds or streams should at once provide the requisite ice houses, tools and sawdust, so as to be ready to gather their share of congealed aqua as soon as it is in prime condition for cutting and storing. This is urged for the cogent reason that the first ice is not only usually the best, but often the only really good ice obtainable in many localities. Take an inventory before the end of this month, which closes the calendar year. Every ruralist should take an account of all his live stock, farm tools and machinery, and make a fair estimate of the value of eron products on hand, whether they are to be used at home or marketed. This is the only way in which farmers can ascertain their true financial condition, and should not be neglected by any one who desires infor mation concerning his own progress and prosperity, or the reverse. Keeping farm accounts is another duty that no soil tiller can afford to omit Every man who runs a farm should keep a careful record of his transactions and operations, including all outgoes and incomes. This, with a careful invent-ory, will not only show how he stands with the world at the close of the yearwhether he has made or lost money-but be valuable as a guide in future. Many cogent reasons might be given why the farmer should be as careful in this matter as the merchan', manufacturer, or any other business man, but we have only space to advise all who do not now keep accounts, to prepare for so doing on the first of January. Meantime, take a careful inventory in order to begin the new year aright.

Happy Farm Life. "Farm life in December," may and should be made as happy as at any other period. However sombre the appear ance without, the sunshine of peace and cheerfulness ought to pervade and enliven every progressive farmer's fire-side. Prosperity prevails among the industrious toil tillers of America, for they are "blessed in basket and store" at the close of a most fruitful season. Their physical wants being amply provided for, the inmates of every rural home can devote special attention to reading, study and mental improve ment. Fathers should not only provide choice books and periodicals for famil reading, but see that the district schools which their children attend are well taught and sustained. And innocent recreation and amusement, at the fireside and elsewhere, should not be ignored. Give the young people opportunities for social intercourse both at home and in places of public assembly Lyceum lectures and discussions, concerts, etc., are sources of instruction and entertainment for all, and should of coal.

"Do you mean to say they run engines on sunshine down there?" interrupted Innocent Dougherty.

"Well, I should say-a-er-yes, they could run stationary engines that way, but the N. G. road is so blamed crooked that it keeps the engineer dodging about so much the sunshine can't strike 'em more'n half the time. Why, there's one piece of track so crooked that it can't lay still. Section men have to stand on the ends of the ties to hold it steady so's trains can pass over it." "Gentlemen," spoke up Truthful Sam

Adams, "I want to go on record as holding that economy is not only mighty in convenient for them as has to practice it but it is a mockery and a delusion on general principles; Tve had some exper lence. When I was a young runner I was pulling freight out in Nebraska One day I had a full train and a raw fireman and the natural result of the com bination was that we stuck on the first big hill that we came to. I made a few remarks and then tried to slack 'em over, but it was no go. I hated to double for it was four miles and over another hill to a sidetrack, so I leaned back and thought awhile.

"There was a farmer distributing green cottonwood lumber for a fence along the top of the cut, so as soon as he was out of sight I sent the fireman up after a board and the brakeman back to the way-car for a switch-rope. You all know what stuff to warp green cottonwood is. Well, we laid that board down lengthwise between the rails, hitched the switch-rope on one end of it and then to the pilot arawbar and waited. In about two minutes the sun began to get in its work on that board and she started to curl up. It took the slack out of that switch-rope and then the train began to come; it had to.

"Gentlemen, in five minutes more we'd warped that train up to the top of the hill without touching the throttle or pulling a pin, saving an hour's time and half a tank of coal."

Danger in Cold Baths.

The coldest natures take the hottest baths and are not enfected by them, says the Indianapolis Journal. blood heated by youth or the fire of full life which likes the cold dip or spray, but beware how you have to herve your-self to endure it. A cold bath may be a risky experiment. The rule that cold bathing is safe when followed by good reaction is not wholly sound. I recall a woman who used to take baths of the coldest well water daily and find great refreshment from them, who afterwards charged weakness of the heart and general debility to this excessive stimulus. Dr. Shoemaker says all the perons he has known who boasted of breaking a flim of ice to take a bath died early, yet doubtless they felt good reaction at
