

TALK WITH CARLISLE.

The Kentucky Question Expresses Views on Leading Questions of the Day. SAYS THE TARIFF MUST BE MODIFIED. The Ex-Speaker Strongly Opposes the Free Coinage of Silver.

OUR NEXT PRESIDENTIAL CANDIDATES.

The People Will Not Favor Legislative Interference With the Currency. ABSOLUTE FREE TRADE NOT DESIRABLE.

A Remarkable Interview With the Great Exponent of Pure Democratic Doctrine—'Carrie's' Gossip of the National Capital.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 24.—[Special correspondence of THE BEE.]—It was in the parlors of a comfortable house on K street with three blocks of the white house and just around the corner from McPherson square that I chatted with one of the most prominent statesmen in our country...

The Speaker's Ship.

The first subject was the speakership and I asked Senator Carlisle whether he considered it a desirable position or a hard one to fill. He replied: "The speakership is certainly a very arduous position. It entails hard work from the beginning to the end of the session...

Patriotism a Local Issue.

"Is not the tariff after all an General Hancock?" I asked. "No," he replied, "it is not a local issue. It is a national issue. It affects the interests of the whole country."

A Few Words About Silver.

"What do you think of the issues of the next campaign, senator?" I said. "I think it is too early to make any prediction upon that subject. Mr. Cleveland's nomination is the one great question of the campaign."

government receives bullion from the owner at a price of 100 cents and gives him back a stamped dollar for every 371 grains of pure silver...

party of the west. The west and the south are gravitating toward each other on political and economic questions.

"No," replied Senator Carlisle, "I think such parties are very dangerous. They are not based on the principles of justice and equity. They are based on narrow sectional interests."

Our Prospects for a Monarchy.

"How about the possibility of our government becoming a monarchy?" I asked. "It is a possibility, but it is a very remote one. It would require a revolution of some kind."

Purity in Public Life.

"How about the possibility of our government becoming a monarchy?" I asked. "It is a possibility, but it is a very remote one. It would require a revolution of some kind."

Our Statements vs Our Forefathers.

"Are the public men of today equal in your opinion, senator, to those of the past?" I asked. "In many respects, no. The public men of the past were men of high character and high ability."

Advice to Would-Be Statesmen.

"What advice would you give to a young man who wants to become a statesman?" I asked. "I would advise him to study the history of his country and to cultivate the habits of industry and economy."

Presidential Candidates.

"How about candidates, senator? Will Mr. Cleveland be the democratic nominee?" I asked. "It is possible, but it is not certain. There are many other men who are qualified to be the nominee."

The Future of Parties.

"Senator, do you think we will ever again have a party of the north and the south?" I asked. "I think not. The parties have become too national in their character. They no longer represent sectional interests."

The Tariff and the McKinley Law.

"How about the tariff?" I asked. "The McKinley law is a very good law. It is a protectionist law. It is a law that is based on the principles of justice and equity. It is a law that is based on the interests of the whole country."

A BORDER TRAGEDY RECALLED.

Twenty-fifth Anniversary of the Fort Phil Kearney Massacre. NINETY-THREE MEN DECLOYED TO DEATH.

Details of the Awful Slaughter Recalled by an Eye-Witness—Melancholy Close of Christmas Preparations.

Bright and cheerily dawned that December morning twenty-five years ago, this 25th of December, 1866, at the post of Fort Phil Kearney, snugly located at the forks of the Platte, within the very shadows of the Big Horn mountains...

THEY ARE ALL DEAD.

His attitude and every aspect of fear and horror gave evidence to his report. "They are all dead," he said, "they are all dead. There are no survivors left."

DECEASED IN A TYPICAL ABORIGINAL CAMP.

A canoe about 100 yards in length, which had been built by the Indians, was found in the water. It was a typical aboriginal camp. The bodies of the men were found scattered all about it.

THEY WERE ALL DEAD.

The bodies of the men were found scattered all about the canoe. They were all dead. There was no sign of life left. The air was thick with the stench of death.

WITHOUT THE LOSS OF A MAN.

The Indians had suddenly relinquished their attack on the fort. They had retreated without the loss of a man. The soldiers of the fort were overjoyed at the news.

SOMETHING WOULD BE SEEN.

INDUSTRIAL POINTS.

There were produced in the United States last year 141,225,513 tons of coal. Petroleum Oil is successful. The steel rail makers of this country now have a great market for their products.

INDUSTRIAL POINTS.

A new fire extinguisher is composed of a mixture of water and liquid carbonic acid gas, which, upon application through tubes at high pressure, causes the rapid expansion of the gas, converting the mixture into a spray more or less frozen. This spray has been found to be most effective in extinguishing fires.
